

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

WHEN the original edition of Federal Statutes, Annotated, was published in 1903, it was to meet a long existing and pressing need, as all know who remember the condition of the laws of the United States at that time. Since then Congress has passed many hundreds of acts of a general and permanent nature, and the decisions construing these and the previous statutes are numbered by thousands. All this new matter—statutes and annotations—has been presented from time to time in supplemental volumes. But periodical compilations of statutes are necessary, because amendments, repeals and new enactments scattered through many volumes make it laborious and time consuming to find the law. This is emphatically true of federal legislation in the last decade. A striking instance of this is found in the codification of the penal laws and the codification of the laws relating to the judiciary, which by repeal and re-enactment have superseded nearly six hundred sections of the Revised Statutes and sixty-six separate acts, thus necessitating a redistribution of the annotations to the superseded laws.

Out of these conditions has come a demand for recompilation, and therefore Federal Statutes, Annotated, has passed into its second edition.

The general plan of the original work is preserved as far as the nature of the changes in the law permits, but new legislation has made some new titles imperative, and experience has suggested new and valuable features. In the work of recompiling and consolidating the statutes the editors have aimed at thoroughness and accuracy. All statutes of a general and permanent nature in force on January 1, 1916, are now to be found under appropriate titles arranged under one alphabet. The annotations likewise have been completely revised, consolidated and brought down to date, and are greatly enriched by the incorporation of the well-known Gould and Tucker's Notes on the Revised Statutes. They have also been improved by giving, in addition to the citation of the official reports, parallel references to all other reports, including Ann. Cas., L. R. A., and the Trinity Series.

As in the former edition the statutes are, for convenience, briefly indexed in each volume while the full general index at the close covers both the statutes and the annotations. The tables of statutes in this final volume have been enlarged by the addition of one based upon the citations of the Statutes at Large.

A notable feature of the original edition was the preliminary article on "Statutes and Statutory Construction" by Mr. Charles C. Moore. This article has been carefully revised and expanded by the addition of the matter on the subject contained in the decisions of the federal courts during the past thirteen years.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

THE design of this work is to give under obvious titles, alphabetically arranged and thoroughly annotated, all the Acts of Congress of a permanent and general nature, except those relating exclusively to the District of Columbia, in force on the first day of January, 1903. The need of such a work has long been apparent. In the official publications of the Government the statutes of the United States are scattered through three works — the Revised Statutes, the Supplements thereto, and the Statutes at Large — comprising thirty-six large volumes in all. These various works not only contain a large number of repealed, obsolete, and superseded enactments, but provisions relating to the same subjects are so widely scattered, amendments are so intertangled, and the indexing is sometimes so imperfect, that the practitioner frequently has great difficulty in ascertaining the real state of the law.

The Revised Statutes furnishes, of course, the basis of this work, but provisions in force prior to the time when the revision went into effect and not included therein, which have been decided by the courts to be still in force, have been incorporated. The Supplements to the Revised Statutes have not been relied upon to furnish all public and general acts for the period which they purport to cover. A careful examination of the Statutes at Large shows that numerous enactments which should have been included in the Supplements have been omitted therefrom. These are given in their proper places. The accurate noting of all repeals has received special attention, and great care has been taken to have each amendatory and supplemental enactment properly placed. Riders in appropriation bills have been carefully extracted and preserved. Since the titles of acts are often referred to in construing them, these have in all cases been given. The only acts or statutory provisions, otherwise within the scope of this work, which have been omitted are such as relate exclusively to the District of Columbia. These laws and the notes thereto, if given, would add several volumes and are of purely local interest. Statutes relative to the Territories, including Alaska, and to the Indians are, however, here given without abridgment. The greatest care has been taken to insure an accurate text. By a process of comparison, checking, and counterchecking it is believed that not a line or a word of the public and general statutes is lost.

The sole liberty taken with the official text of the statutes is the omission of the enacting clause which precedes each act, viz., the words "Be it enacted," etc. The constant repetition of this clause would unnecessarily consume valuable space. Misprints, bad spelling, glaringly incorrect English, and other defects which occur in the official text have been reproduced, usually corrected, however, by the obviously proper reading inclosed in brackets [ ], or by explanation in the notes. All section headings, dates, references to Statutes at Large, etc., which appear in the text are likewise inclosed in brackets, that there may be no confusion as to what actually constitutes the statutory language of Congress. The notes, constituting the matter of smaller type, are, of course, the work of the editors. At the close of each section is given the number of the corresponding section of the Revised Statutes or the volume and page of the Statutes at Large, according as the matter is taken from one or the other. Thus it will always be possible to make an exact reference to the official publication. Whenever Congress has enacted a new section as a substitute for an old one, the text of the repealed section is, for purposes of comparison, generally set out in the notes. The statutes are grouped under such titles as will naturally occur to the investigator considering the subject-matter thereof.

The pernicious custom of Congress of enacting statutes upon subjects already covered by existing law without repealing or even mentioning the older acts, has caused considerable embarrassment. In such cases it has seemed undoubtedly best to err on the side of fullness. Many acts and sections of the Revised Statutes will therefore be found printed in juxtaposition with later acts which probably supersede the earlier provisions. The editors have, in the notes, often expressed their opinion as to the state of the law, and frequently the decisions and rulings set out in the notes throw light on the situation, but each investigator will desire the opportunity to form his own conclusions.

It is hoped that the usefulness of the annotation will be proportionate to the pains expended upon it. In order that the collection of cases citing or construing United States statutes may be complete, every volume of the reports of the decisions of the United States Courts and the Opinions of the Attorneys-General has been examined page by page. It is believed that in thoroughness these notes will thus go beyond anything heretofore attempted in statutory annotation. It will be observed that the notes do not consist of mere lists of cases, but are explanatory and state just what the courts have decided with reference to the section or chapter of statutes under which they are placed. To the practitioner in the federal courts they should save much time and labor.

Preceding the text of the statutes in the first volume is an article on "Statutes and Statutory Construction," by Charles C. Moore, Esq., a writer eminently fitted by learning and previous authorship to deal with this topic, who occupies the position of associate editor of the work. This article deals with canons of construction of statutes, devoting special attention to those rules which have arisen out of peculiarities of federal legislation and administration. None but federal cases, including opinions of the Attorneys-General, are cited, but the article exhausts those citations to the last degree. Every scrap of authority has been gleaned from the federal reports. This article would be of great value merely as a collection of authorities, not readily accessible from other sources, because the digests are chiefly concerned with concrete application of principles of construction, and commonly do not even allude to the principles themselves.

Valuable assistance has been rendered by Peter Kemper, Jr., Esq., of the New York bar, in extracting from the Statutes at Large the public and general Acts and in classifying the entire statutory matter.

In the last volume of the set, or in an appendix, will be printed all general and public laws enacted by Congress (excepting a general revision of all or a substantial part of the statutes) during the course of the publication of the work. Thus, when the last volume is published, the statutes will be strictly up to date. At the close of the work will also be given the Constitution of the United States, the Articles of Confederation, the Declaration of Independence, and the Ordinance of 1787 for the Government of the Northwest Territory.

Each volume will be separately but briefly indexed. At the close, however, will be given an exhaustive and minute index of the entire work. There will also be tables showing where in this work each section of the Revised Statutes and the later Acts can be found.

But the essential thing to be done in order that a bill may become a law by the approval of the President is that it be signed within the prescribed time after being presented to him. That being done, and as soon as done, whether Congress is informed or not by message from the President of the fact of his approval of it, the bill becomes a law, and is delivered to the secretary of state as required by law."<sup>9</sup>

A general law prescribing formalities to be observed on the passage of special laws is not binding on subsequent legislatures, and a special act passed in disregard of those provisions is not invalid.<sup>10</sup> A decision of the highest court of a state that a statute enacted by the state legislature was or was not passed in conformity to the requirements of the state constitution is binding upon the federal courts.<sup>11</sup> Joint resolutions of Congress are not distinguishable from bills, and, if approved by the President or if duly passed without his approval, they have all the effect of acts of Congress.<sup>12</sup> But it is "little better than a mere truism to say that a separate resolution of either House of Congress is not a law."<sup>13</sup>

Cl. 700, a case decided in 1883, wherein Chief Justice Richardson said that the Abandoned and Captured Property Act of March 12, 1863, 12 Stat. at L. 820, was "the only act which has ever been signed by the President since the foundation of the government, after the Congress which passed it had adjourned or expired," but that the act had always been treated as valid by the legislative, executive, and judicial branches of the government.

2. When operative.—At common law, before the statute of 1793 (33 Geo. III, c. 13) every act of Parliament, unless a different time was fixed, took effect from the first day of the session.<sup>14</sup> In this country the rule is that a statute takes effect, if not otherwise provided,<sup>15</sup> on the day of its passage<sup>16</sup> and needs no promulgation to give it operation.<sup>17</sup> Provisions of general law contained in an appropriation act, such as allowances of private claims, regulations of salaries by addition or diminution, etc., take effect immediately upon the approval of the act by the President, if such be their natural sense and signification; and it makes no difference in this behalf that the act is one which by its title and tenor purports to provide for the ensuing fiscal year.<sup>18</sup> Where an act passed March 3 made appropriations for the fiscal year beginning on the first of the following July, and provided that on and after July first leaves of absence to certain employees should be limited to sixty days in "any one calendar year," it was held that absences by leave prior to July first must be counted in making up the sixty days for the year ending December 31.<sup>19</sup> The Constitution provides that "every bill * * * shall, before it become a law, be presented to the President. * * * If he approve he shall sign it,"<sup>20</sup> and in case of a bill which is approved by the President it takes effect only by such approval, or from the time of such approval.<sup>21</sup> In the absence of evidence showing at what hour of the day an act of Congress was approved by the President, it is presumed to have been approved on the first minute of that day.<sup>22</sup> But in cases where the effect of this presumption would be to make the legislation retroactive, and therefore harsh and unjust, the hour and minute when the act was signed may be shown or judicially noticed from official records, and effect will be given to it only from that time.<sup>23</sup> The opinion has been expressed, however, that "where there is no retroactive effect possible, the court should hear no evidence upon the point, but should, in order to secure certainty, hold the presumption that the act was approved on the first moment of the day of its date to be conclusive."<sup>24</sup> Neither the Constitution nor any statute imposes upon the President the duty of affixing a date to his signature to a bill; and where the original enrolled act showed no other date of signature than the day of the month it was declared to be proper for the court to ascertain the exact date by reference to the record of the secretary of state of the time of filing the paper, the journals of the two houses of Congress, the message of the President, or by resorting to any other source from which clear and satisfactory information could be obtained.<sup>25</sup> The same rule of evidence is applicable in fixing the date upon which a bill passed by Congress was vetoed by the President so as to prevent its operation as a law.<sup>26</sup> A statute relating to a subject over which the several states may exercise control only in the absence of congressional regulation thereof, takes effect on passage for the purpose of annulling all state legislation thereon even though by its terms its provisions are not actually effective until some future date.<sup>27</sup> A proclamation of the President takes effect when it is signed by him and sealed with the seal of the United States, officially attested, and presumptively from the first moment of that day.<sup>28</sup> case like this, exists only from the silence of Congress on the subject, and ceases when Congress acts on the subject or manifests its purpose to call into play its exclusive power. This being the conceded premise upon which alone the state law could have been made applicable, it results that as the enactment by Congress of the law in question was an assertion of its power, by the fact alone of such manifestation that subject was at once removed from the sphere of the operation of the authority of the state. To admit the fundamental principle and yet to reason that because Congress chose to make its prohibitions take effect only after a year, the matter with which Congress dealt remained subject to state power, is to cause the act of Congress to destroy itself; that is, to give effect to the will of Congress as embodied in the postponing provision for the purpose of overriding and rendering ineffective the expression of the will of Congress to bring the subject within its control—a manifestation arising from the mere fact of the enactment of the statute."

been quoted by the United States Supreme Court,<sup>30</sup> and no different test for distinguishing between public and private acts of Congress can be found in the United States Constitution or statutes. Although the "public laws" and "private acts" of Congress are collected under those separate heads in the Statutes at Large, there is nowhere a legislative affirmation that such division has any weight. Congress has given no directions for the compilation of the Statutes at Large further than to provide that the secretary of state shall cause to be edited, printed, published, and distributed, pamphlet copies of the statutes of each session of Congress, and that "after the close of each session, the secretary of state shall have edited and bound a sufficient number of the volumes containing the Statutes at Large enacted by that Congress to enable him to distribute copies," etc.<sup>31</sup> In one instance where the main portion of an act was purely private, but other parts of it were unquestionably general and permanent, the entire act was printed in the Statutes at Large among the private acts, and the general provisions were then overlooked by the compiler of the Supplement to the Revised Statutes, but subsequently discovered and inserted after the lapse of many years.<sup>32</sup> Nevertheless, those general provisions must have been a part of the public statutes of the United States during all of that period. In the acts of Congress providing for the revision of the United States statutes, the legislation to be embodied in the revision was described as statutes "general and permanent in their nature,"<sup>33</sup> and the same language is used in the act of Congress providing for the compilation of supplements to the Revised Statutes.<sup>34</sup> These compilations were undoubtedly intended to comprise all the "public" statutes, and the designation above quoted in the acts of Congress may be regarded as a general definition of "public" statutes of the United States. Mr. Justice Woods said that "in this country the disposition has been, on the whole, to enlarge the limits of the class of public acts, and to bring within it all enactments of a general character, or which in any way affect the community at large."<sup>35</sup> Mr. Justice Miller, in discussing the character of a charter granted to a railroad corporation by a state, remarked that "the distinction between public and private acts has become very artificial and shadowy since legislative bodies have adopted the principle of publishing in printed form all statutes which they pass. Some of the states keep up the distinction by making a difference in the manner in which public and private acts shall be published, and in such cases this difference is to be observed and may become of some consequence."<sup>36</sup> A declaration by the legislature in any case, or a provision in a constitution, that after the passage and publication of any laws they shall be judicially noticed as public acts, is binding upon the courts.<sup>37</sup> Where a state statute was declared by the legislature to be a public act, it was held that a subsequent statute, supplementing and amending it, was also a public act.<sup>38</sup>

4. Same—illustrations.—In a very early case the United States Supreme Court held that a state act incorporating a bank was a public law. The act made it a felony to counterfeit the notes of the bank, and that alone was thought to make it a public act.<sup>39</sup> And an act of Congress incorporating a bank in the District of Columbia and containing certain penal provisions was held to be a public act.<sup>40</sup> The United States Supreme Court has taken judicial notice that a railroad company was created by act of Congress.<sup>41</sup> A charter of incorporation which contained a monopoly feature was pronounced a public act. "It is the exclusiveness of the privilege," said the court, "which undoubtedly brings it, so far as it made a monopoly, within the category of public laws."<sup>42</sup> A state statute authorizing a county to loan its bonds to a railroad corporation and providing for appropriations of the earnings of the road in payment of the bonds was held to be a public act, since it "related to matters in which the general public were concerned."<sup>43</sup> A state statute validating elections held by the inhabitants of a county and a vote for the issuance of county bonds in aid of a railroad company, and authorizing township aid in like manner,<sup>44</sup> and an act passed by a state legislature incorporating a railroad company and providing for subscriptions to the stock of the company by the commissioners of any county through which its road might pass, and an issue of bonds of the county to pay for the same,<sup>45</sup> were held to be public acts. An act of Congress imposing a duty on an imported article is, of course, a public act.<sup>46</sup> An act "to regulate trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes and to preserve peace on the frontiers" was held to be certainly a public act.<sup>47</sup> A proclamation of pardon and amnesty by the President had the force of a public law.<sup>48</sup> Speaking for the Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Lurton said that the several acts of the legislatures of Georgia and Tennessee providing for the construction, operation and leasing of a Georgia railroad, "are of the class now generally regarded as public acts," and that "of such the United States courts take judicial cognizance."<sup>49</sup> However, charters of private corporations appear to be usually regarded as private acts, unless the legislature has ordained otherwise.<sup>50</sup> Private acts are strictly construed,<sup>51</sup> especially when they conflict with earlier public acts.<sup>52</sup>

5. Permanent or temporary.—A general law is permanent if its duration is not limited by its own terms.<sup>53</sup> But questions frequently arise whether annual appropriation acts which spend their power in the course of the year contain independent legislation. "It would be somewhat unusual," said Mr. Justice Story, in 1841, "to find engrafted on an act making special and temporary appropriations, any provision which was to have a general and permanent application to all future appropriations. Nor ought such an intention on the part of the legislature to be presumed unless it is expressed in the most clear and positive terms, and when the language admits of no other reasonable interpretation."<sup>54</sup> And in 1846 the opinion was expressed that if the legislature annex to an annual appropriation act any special provision which has a proper application to the subject-matter of the act, and use no words indicating an intention to give to it a more extensive operation, the just conclusion would seem to be that the special regulation was intended to be confined to the matters embraced in the act.<sup>55</sup> But in 1855 Attorney-General Cushing said: "Congress has of late fallen into the very inconvenient practice of inserting provisions of general legislation in the acts of appropriation for a subsequent year. We have now to scan and scrutinize each separate clause or provision in those acts, and determine its legal meaning according to its particular tenor, wholly regardless of the place, or the general nature of the act, in which it is found."<sup>56</sup> In a later case it was held that "a statute fixing the annual salary of a public officer at a named sum, without limitation as to time, should not be deemed abrogated or suspended by subsequent enactments which merely appropriated a less amount for the

"The practice, however, of embodying general laws in appropriation bills has become so common that to adopt a narrow and restrictive construction confining their language to the subject-matter generally dealt with by the appropriation act would go far to nullify a good deal of the legislation of Congress. These provisos that are attached to appropriation acts for the purpose of procuring what is believed to be needed legislation, but which could not be accomplished by an independent statute by reason of the press of business before Congress must be treated the same as if they were separate and independent enactments." *Nat. services of that officer for particular fiscal years, and which contained no words that expressly or by clear implication modified or repealed the previous law;” and accordingly the officer was held entitled to recover from the United States the difference between the amounts paid him pursuant to the appropriation acts and the amount prescribed by the general statute. “Repeals by implication are not favored,” said the court. “It cannot be said that there is a positive repugnancy between the old and the new statutes in question. If by any reasonable construction they can be made to stand together, our duty is to give effect to the provisions of each.”<sup>57</sup> But in all cases “the whole question depends on the intention of Congress as expressed in the statutes,”<sup>58</sup> and where the appropriation was “in full compensation” it was considered to be a clear expression of legislative intent that the officer could recover no more.<sup>59</sup> And in the absence of such an expression, the courts have usually found and adjudged that Congress in some other way sufficiently expressed its purpose to reduce the salary to the amount appropriated for the period covered by the act.<sup>60</sup> The Court of Claims held that where a series of appropriation acts provided that no part of the moneys appropriated should be paid for commutation of fuel and quarters, it was conclusive against a claim therefor based on an existing general statute.<sup>61</sup> The word “annually,” in a direction in an appropriation act, is necessarily prospective and extends its operation to future years.<sup>62</sup> Where some of the provisions in a section are unquestionably permanent, a presumption arises that other provisions in the same section, without any restrictive words, are permanent, for “it would be very unusual to unite, in a single section of a law, one provision intended to be permanent with another intended to be temporary, without clearly distinguishing the permanent from the temporary part.”<sup>63</sup> Where a section of an annual appropriation act contained a special regulation applying to collectors of the customs requiring them to place money received on unascertained duties, or duties paid under protest, at once to the credit of the treasurer, and the first words of the section were,

63. Per Ware, J., in U. S. t. Jarvis, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,468, wherein the fol-

"from and after the passage of this act all moneys paid to any collector," the court regarded it as clearly intended to be permanent.<sup>64</sup> Although the formal words just quoted are most usually employed to exclude a doubt whether the regulation was intended to be permanent or not, they may be supplied by other language clearly indicating the intention of the legislature.<sup>65</sup> A provision in an annual appropriation act declaring that "no act passed authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase a site and erect a building thereon shall be held or construed to appropriate money, unless the act in express language makes such appropriation," was held to be permanent in its character.<sup>66</sup> Where the Supreme Court decided that United States commissioners were entitled to docket fees, and Congress a few months afterward appropriated money for their fees with the proviso added to the appropriation clause, "but they shall not be entitled to any docket fees," it was held that the legislative purpose was to abolish such fees in the future.<sup>67</sup> In determining whether legislation in an appropriation act is permanent and general or not, it is of little or no consequence that it is enacted in the form of a proviso, since it is a well-known practice of Congress to enact general legislation by provisos in appropriation acts.<sup>68</sup>

6. Mandatory: generally.—"The question whether a duty imposed by statute upon a ministerial or executive officer, the performance or non-performance of which affects the rights of others, is merely directory to the officer and only confers on parties injured a right of action against the officer, or, on the other hand, is a condition essential to fix the rights of other parties as between themselves, is a very common but often a very difficult one to decide. Its decision depends mainly upon a consideration of the nature of the duty thus imposed in its relation to the rights of parties to be affected, but often also upon the proper construction of the language employed in the statute as being chiefly directed to the officer, or as declaratory of a principle governing the rights of parties."<sup>69</sup> Where affirmative words in an act are absolute, explicit and peremptory, the act should as a general rule be held mandatory and not directory.<sup>70</sup> When statutory requisitions concerning the assessment and collection of taxes are intended for the protection of the citizen, and to prevent a sacrifice of his property, and by a disregard of them his rights might be and generally would be injuriously affected, they are not directory, but mandatory, lowing provision in an annual appropriation act was held to be permanent, and not confined to the disbursements of the appropriations contained in the act: "No officer in any branch of the public service, or any other person whose salary and emoluments are fixed by law and regulation, shall receive any extra allowance or compensation in any form whatever for the disbursements of public money, or the performance of any other extra service, unless the said extra allowance or compensation be authorized by law."

In respect to such acts the steps pointed out for the acquisition, preservation, and enforcement of the remedies provided should be considered as mandatory, rather than optional."<sup>81</sup> "When a government declares that certain specified acts must be done, in order to a citizen's becoming entitled to a gratuity out of the public treasury, to which, aside from that law, he would have no right, every one of the acts must be done before he can claim the gratuity."<sup>82</sup> Certain statutes regulating the form of policies of insurance,

7. Permissive words as mandatory.—In the leading federal case giving mandatory construction to statutes an act of a state legislature provided that county supervisors "may, if deemed advisable," levy a special tax to pay debts of the county which the current revenues were insufficient to pay, and the court held that a judgment creditor was entitled to a mandamus to compel the levy of a tax of sufficient amount to satisfy his judgment. The conclusion deduced from the authorities by Mr. Justice Swayne was "that where power is given to public officers, in the language of the act before us, or in equivalent language—whenever the public interest or individual rights call for its exercise—the language used, though permissive in form, is in fact peremptory. What they are empowered to do for a third person the law requires shall be done. The power is given, not for their benefit, but for his. It is placed with the depository to meet the demands of right, and to prevent a failure of justice. It is given as a remedy to those entitled to its aid, and who would otherwise be remediless."<sup>85</sup> Authority given to a municipal corporation to sell land for taxes is imperative as to its provisions respecting the quantity to be sold if such construction is necessary to prevent sacrifice and speculation.<sup>86</sup> An act of Congress authorizing the secretary of agriculture to make rules and regulations to prevent the transportation of infected cattle, etc., was held to impose a duty, under the general rule that "permissive words in a statute are peremptory when used to clothe a public officer with power to do an act which concerns the public interest."<sup>87</sup> Under an act by which the secretary of war was "authorized to reopen the settlement made by the United States" with a certain railroad company, the exercise of the power was adjudged to be imperative upon application by the party interested.<sup>88</sup> The provision in a federal statute that the Court of Claims "may" grant a new trial on behalf of the United States upon such evidence "as shall satisfy the court that," etc., imposes an absolute duty to order a new trial in a case coming within the terms of the statute.<sup>89</sup> invariable, and its application depends on the context of the statute, and on whether it is fairly to be presumed that it was the intention of the legislature to confer a discretionary power or to impose an imperative duty.<sup>90</sup> Where the act to be done affects no third persons, and is not clearly beneficial to them or the public, the words "may" do an act or it is "lawful" to do it, do not mean "must," but rather indicate an intent in the legislature to confer a discretionary power.<sup>91</sup> Where the President was "authorized" by an act of Congress to reconsider a certain contract theretofore made by him, the language was not mandatory in its legal effect.<sup>92</sup> And where a statute conferred "power" upon county supervisors to cause bonds to be issued when the people voted in favor of railroad aid, "we are not at liberty," said the court, "to say that the legislature means such vote to be a positive command to exercise that power without regard to the circumstances arising after the expression of the popular will."<sup>93</sup>

9. Mandatory words as directory.—"It is only where it is necessary to give effect to the clear policy and intention of the legislature that such a liberty can be taken with the plain words of a statute," as to construe the word "may" to mean "must."<sup>94</sup> Mr. Justice Story, speaking for the court in a case where it was held that the word "may" in a bank charter merely gave a discretionary power, said that "no general rule can be laid down upon this subject further than that that exposition ought to be adopted in this as in other cases, which carries into effect the true intent and object of the legislature in the enactment. The ordinary meaning of the language must be presumed to be intended, unless it would manifestly defeat the object of the provision."<sup>95</sup> "The protection of the convenience only of a taxpayer," said Mr. Justice Shiras, "is not of such a vital nature as to authorize a court to treat a statute primarily directed to public officers for their guidance, and the substantial protection of the government, as mandatory, and to render official acts not in strict conformity with the statute as void. The protection must be substantial, and must be intended as a guard of rights or property."<sup>96</sup> And Mr. Justice Field said, "There are undoubtedly many statutory requisitions intended for the guide of officers in the conduct of business devolved upon them which do not limit their power or render its exercise in disregard of the requisitions ineffectual. Such generally are regulations designed to secure order, system and dispatch in proceedings, and by a disregard of which the rights of parties interested cannot be injuriously affected."<sup>97</sup> Provisions regulating the time, form and mode of proceeding by courts and public officers are generally to be deemed directory, even though the word "shall" be used in the statute.<sup>98</sup> Mr. Justice Story said that "when-ever a statute gives discretionary power to any person, to be exercised by him upon his own opinion of certain facts, it is a sound rule of construction that the statute constitutes him sole and exclusive judge of the existence of those facts."<sup>99</sup> So an act of Congress providing that the lease of certain buildings "shall be continued if the said buildings shall be made fire-proof by the owners thereof to the satisfaction of the said secretary" was held to vest a complete discretion in the secretary.<sup>1</sup> In the federal statute providing that the clerk of court shall "insert the names of as many witnesses in a cause in a subpoena as convenience in serving the same will permit," the last part of the clause implies that the provision is directory and not mandatory.<sup>2</sup> A provision in an act of Congress that certain officers "shall be present and certify to the delivery of all goods or money required to be paid or delivered to the Indians," was construed as directory to the officers and not mandatory upon the vendors of the goods.<sup>3</sup> An act prescribing the form and purport of official bonds to be taken by the head of a department carries no implication that all other bonds not taken in the prescribed form shall be utterly void.<sup>4</sup>

Judicial notice of an act of Congress extends not only to the existence of the act, but to the time when it was signed by the President.<sup>9</sup>

11. Departmental regulations.—The general rule is that "wherever by the express language of any act of Congress, power is entrusted to either of the principal departments of government to prescribe rules and regulations for the transaction of business in which the public is interested, and in respect to which they have a right to participate, and by which they are to be controlled, the rules and regulations prescribed in pursuance of such authority become a mass of that body of public records of which the courts take judicial notice."<sup>10</sup> Such rules and regulations duly prescribed have the force of law.<sup>11</sup>

12. Laws of states and territories: notice by courts of original jurisdiction.—All federal courts when exercising original jurisdiction<sup>12</sup> take notice without pleading or proof of the Constitution and public<sup>13</sup> statutes not only of the state wherein they are sitting<sup>14</sup> but of every other state

12. By "original jurisdiction" we mean to include jurisdiction by removal from state courts, because the acts of Congress regulating removal of causes provide that the removed cause shall proceed in the federal court as if it had been originally commenced there. 18 Stat. at L. 472, c. 137, § 6 (now Judicial Code, § 29), and 18 ENCYC. OF PL. AND PR., p. 357 et seq. But see a remark of the court in Union Pac. R. Co. v. Wyler, 158 U. S. 296, 15 S. Ct. 877, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 983, which appears to express the view that in a removed case the judicial notice of the federal court extends no farther than did the judicial notice of the court whence the cause was removed. It is doubtful if the court meant to be so understood, for if the proposition is sound the judicial notice taken by the Supreme Court in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction over federal Circuit Courts must be equally limited where the Circuit Court acquired jurisdiction by removal, and, so far as we are aware, the Supreme Court has never made any distinction between original and removed cases in respect of the extent of its judicial notice or review of judgments and decrees of Circuit Courts as laid down in the next section of the text.

In a removed case the federal Circuit Court of course takes judicial notice of the constitution and public laws of the state whence the case was removed. State v. Coosaw Min. Co., 45 Fed. 804.

13. Private acts and special proceedings of the legislature of the state cannot be judicially noticed by a federal court sitting therein if the state statute does not require them to be judicially noticed by the state courts. Leland v. Wilkinson, 6 Pet. 317, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 412.

In Owings v. Hull, 9 Pet. 625, 9 U. S. (L. ed.) 246, holding that the federal Circuit Court sitting in Maryland should take judicial notice of a Louisiana statute, Mr. Justice Story said: "The Circuit Courts of the United States are created by Congress, not for the purpose of administering the local law of a single state alone, but to administer the laws of all the states in the Union, in cases to which they respectively apply. The judicial power conferred on the general government, by the Constitution, extends to many cases arising under the laws of the different states. And this court is called upon, in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction, constantly to take notice of and administer the jurisprudence of all the states. That jurisprudence is then, in no just sense, a foreign jurisprudence, to be proved in the courts of the United States, by the ordinary modes of proof by which the laws of a foreign country are to be established, but it is to be judicially taken notice of by these courts."

Statutory jurisdiction of courts.—In debt on a decree rendered by the Supreme Court of New York, the action of debt being brought in the federal Circuit Court for the District of Maryland, it was held that the Circuit Court should take judicial notice that the Supreme Court of New York is a court of general jurisdiction; and therefore the declaration in the action was sufficient without averment that the subject-matter of the decree was within the jurisdiction of the court which pronounced it. To precisely the same point of pleading in respect of a plea in a Circuit Court of Ohio, setting up a judgment of a state court in Michigan, see Woodworth v. Spofford, 2 McLean 175, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,020.

cessions under the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo and the treaty of December 30, 1853, affecting title to land in New Mexico,<sup>21</sup> of the laws of California existing before that territory was acquired by the United States,<sup>22</sup> and of the Spanish laws which formerly prevailed in Louisiana,<sup>23</sup> and in our insular possessions.<sup>24</sup> Whenever the court takes judicial notice, without proof, of constitutions and public statutes, it takes notice of public general elections of members of state legislatures or of a convention to revise the fundamental law of a state as well as of the times of the commencement of the sitting of those bodies and of the dates when their acts take effect.<sup>25</sup>

13. Same — notice by courts of appellate jurisdiction.—The United States Supreme Court, in the exercise of its general appellate jurisdiction from a lower federal court, takes judicial notice of the constitution and public laws of every state of the Union<sup>26</sup> because, as hereinbefore stated, those laws are known to the court below as laws alone, needing no averment or proof.<sup>27</sup> Undoubtedly, the same judicial notice is taken by the Circuit Courts of Appeals.<sup>28</sup> On review of a judgment or decree of a court of the District of Columbia the Supreme Court takes the same judicial notice of state laws as in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction over other courts created by Congress.<sup>29</sup> But on a writ of error to the highest court of a state, in which the revisory power of the Supreme Court is limited to determining whether a question of law depending upon the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States has been erroneously decided by the state court upon the facts before it—while the law of the state, being known to its courts as law, is of course within the judicial notice of the Supreme Court at the hearing on error<sup>30</sup>—yet, as in the state court the laws of another state are but facts, requiring to be proved in order to be considered, the Supreme Court does not take judicial notice of them,<sup>31</sup>

II. RULES OF INTERPRETATION

Generally

15. Object and utility of rules.—"We must not lose sight of the fact," said Judge Sanborn, "that the sole object to be sought in the interpretation of a law is the intention of the legislative body which enacted it, and that rules of construction are only serviceable as they assist us to attain that object."<sup>36</sup> The controlling rule of decision in applying the statute in any particular case is, that, whenever the intention of the legislature can be discovered from the words employed, in view of the subject-matter and the surrounding circumstances, it ought to prevail unless it lead to absurd or irrational conclusions.<sup>37</sup> "Every technical rule as to the con-

"In the Supreme Court of the United States, when acting under its appellate jurisdiction, whatever was matter of fact in the state court whose judgment or decree is under review is matter of fact there. And whenever a court of one state is required to ascertain what effect a public act of another state has in that state, the law of such other state must be proved as a fact." *Lloyd v. 37. Per Justice Clifford in Kohlsaat v. Murphy, 96 U. S. 160, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 844.

"There is no inflexible rule in the interpretation of statutes. Courts, in attempting to construe statutes, are often 'born unto trouble as the sparks fly upwards.' It has been said of the statute of frauds of England, which was at the time of its adoption considered perfect in its parts, and has been since adopted in most, struction or force of particular terms," said Mr. Justice Story, "must yield to the clear expression of the paramount will of the legislature."<sup>38</sup> Judge Lacombe remarked that "it is perfectly possible to make almost anything out of a tariff act by construction without violating rules for the interpretation of statutes."<sup>39</sup> And in another case the same experienced judge observed that "the more frequently we are called upon to interpret statutes, the greater likelihood there is of developing a tendency to overstrained construction."<sup>40</sup> When justices of the United States Supreme Court (or of any other court) divide on a question of statutory construction the minority rarely have difficulty in finding well-settled rules of interpretation to support their dissent.<sup>41</sup>

if not all, the states of the Union, that it took more decisions of the courts than there are letters in the statute to determine what it really meant. S. 662, that to get at the thought or meaning expressed in a statute, the first resort in all cases is to the natural signification of the words in the order of the grammatical arrangement in which the framers of the instrument have passed them; and that it is a perfectly safe assumption that the framers of an act meant exactly what they said."

"that an extended review of them is quite unnecessary."<sup>43</sup> Attempted judicial construction of the unequivocal language of a statute serves only to create doubt and to confuse the judgment.<sup>44</sup> "Affirmative discussion under such circumstances," said Mr. Justice Swayne, "is not unlike argument in support of a self-evident truth. The logic may mislead or confuse. It cannot strengthen the pre-existing conviction."<sup>45</sup> "A dispute about the construction of a statute does not always make an ambiguity, and not always a legal doubt as to its meaning."<sup>46</sup> In one case the Circuit Court of Appeals said that perhaps a sufficient reason for rejecting a construction for which counsel contended was the difficulty which the court had in stating the contention in an intelligible form, as well as the substance of the argument by which counsel sought to enforce it.<sup>47</sup> "There is always a tendency," said Mr. Justice Story, "to construe statutes in the light in which they appear when the construction is given. It is easy to be wise after one sees the results of experience."<sup>48</sup> The true rule is that statutes are to be construed as they were intended to be understood when they were passed.<sup>49</sup>

Legislative Intent Controlling

17. Rule stated.—A legislative act is to be interpreted according to the intention of the legislature apparent upon its face.<sup>50</sup> "The intent of the lawmaker is the law,"<sup>51</sup> and the primary and general rule of statutory construction is that the intent of the lawmaker is to be found in the language that he has used.<sup>52</sup> "It may be * * * that searching for legislative intent is often like 'hunting for a needle in a haystack;' but it is nevertheless the duty of courts to make the search by applying the usual magnets of construction, and drawing therefrom, through the ordinary channels of thought, such intent."<sup>53</sup> It is, however, "the intention expressed in the statute, and that alone, to which the courts may lawfully give effect. They may not assume or presume purposes and intentions that the terms of the law do not indicate, and then enact and expunge provisions to carry out those supposed intentions."<sup>54</sup>

18. Awkward or inartistic language; verity of recitals.—Legislatures are not bound to use any set or particular formula in the enactment of laws. Language which has a distinct meaning, however awkwardly inserted in a statute, must be held to express the legislative will as fully as though it were introduced in the most artistic manner.<sup>55</sup> "It cannot be pretended," said Chief Justice Marshall, "that the natural sense of words is to be disregarded, because that which they import might have been better or more directly expressed."<sup>56</sup> This vice of clumsy expression often appears in appropriation acts of Congress.<sup>57</sup>

"A mere recital in an act, whether of fact or of law, is not conclusive unless it be clear that the legislature intended that the recital should be accepted as a fact in the case."<sup>58</sup> Where the preamble to a private act recited that a certain building was private property, and the body of the act directed the court to determine whether the claimants thereof acquired a valid title to it, the recital was not taken to be a legislative concession of the vital and material fact forming the basis of the whole controversy.<sup>59</sup> But a mistake of fact upon which the action of Congress is predicated does not control a positive enactment founded thereon.<sup>60</sup>

(L. ed.) 1152, in which latter case the court said: "It was stated by the court in Branson v. Wirth, 17 Wall. 44, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 566, that 'whilst the recital of public acts is regarded as evidence of the facts recited, it is otherwise, as we have seen, with reference to private acts. They are not evidence except against the parties who procure them.' We are referred, however, to the case of The U. S. v. Jordan, 113 U. S. 418, 5 S. Ct. 585, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 1013, as sustaining a contrary doctrine. In this case an act of Congress provided 'that the secretary of the treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to remit, refund, and pay back, out of any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the following named citizens of Tennessee: * * * the amount of taxes assessed upon and collected from the said named persons, contrary to the provisions of the regulations issued by the secretary of the treasury,' etc. Jordan was one of the parties named in the act. The secretary of the treasury having construed the act to mean only that such sums should be refunded as were collected from the persons named contrary to the provisions of the regulations issued by the secretary of the treasury, this court held that the statute did not admit of that interpretation, nor leave open any question for the court or for the accounting officers of the treasury, except the identity of the claimants with the persons named in it. 'Although the act,' said Mr. Justice Blatchford, 'speaks of the sums as being "the amount of taxes assessed upon and collected from the said named persons, contrary to the provisions of the regulations" named, there is no indication of any intention to submit to any one the determination of the question whether the taxes in any case were collected contrary to the provisions of such regulations, or of the question how those provisions are to be construed.' It needs no argument to show that there is a wide distinction between an act directing a particular thing to be done, and an act reciting the existence of a certain fact which had long been a matter of dispute, and which the Court of Claims was authorized by the act to pass upon and determine." See further as to the effect of recitals in statutes Erwin's Case, 3 Ct. Cl. 49.

60. Jordan v. U. S., 19 Ct. Cl. 119, where Justice Richardson said: "Such a mistake might be a good cause for the repeal of an act by the power which passed it, but would be no justification for a court or the executive officers to set it aside or to restrict its effect. This act is not peculiar on account of its recitals of facts. Such recitals abound in the multitude of special acts passed for the relief of individual persons, and to require all the facts recited to be proved in court or elsewhere before the parties can obtain the money granted to them would be an unjustifiable hardship. Take, for example, the Act August 7, 1882, c. 462 (22 Stat. at L. 737). It authorizes and directs the secretary of the treasury to pay to the executors of F. the sum of $27,684, to reimburse the estate of the said F. for losses sustained by him while secretary of the Senate in making good the deficit in the accounts of the financial clerk.' No one would seriously urge, we think, that Congress had so fixed the amount to be paid, but had left it to be determined by proof before the accounting officers or before this court, if suit should be brought, of the exact amount of the losses incurred."

19. Departure from literal construction; Holy Trinity Church case.—

An act of Congress of 1885 prohibited under a penalty any assistance or encouragement to aliens to migrate to this country under contract "to perform labor or service of any kind in the United States," etc., making specific exceptions of certain classes of aliens.<sup>61</sup> The Church of the Holy Trinity, an incorporated religious society, made a contract with an alien by which he was to remove to the city of New York and enter into its service as rector and pastor; and in pursuance of such contract the alien did so remove and enter upon such service. In an action against the corporation to recover the penalty prescribed the Supreme Court held that the transaction was not forbidden by the statute.<sup>62</sup> After quoting the section of the act defining the offense, Mr. Justice Brewer, speaking for the unanimous court, said: "It must be conceded that the act of the corporation is within the letter of this section, for the relation of rector to his church is one of service and implies labor on the one side with compensation on the other. Not only are the general words labor and service both used, but also, as it were to guard against any narrow interpretation and emphasize a breadth of meaning, to them is added 'of any kind,' and further, as noticed by the circuit judge in his opinion,<sup>63</sup> the fifth section which makes specific exceptions, among them professional actors, artists, lecturers, singers, and domestic servants, strengthens the idea that every other kind of labor and service was intended to be reached by the first section. While there is great force to this reasoning, we cannot think Congress intended to denounce with penalties a transaction like that in the present case. It is a familiar rule that a thing may be within the letter of the statute and yet not within the statute, because not within its spirit nor within the intention of its makers. This has often been asserted, and the reports are full of cases illustrating its application. This is not the substitution of the will of the judge for that of the legislator, for frequently words of general meaning are used in a statute, words broad enough to include an act in question, and yet a consideration of the whole legislation, or of the circumstances surrounding its enactment or of the absurd results which follow from giving such broad meaning to the words, makes it unreasonable to believe that the legislator intended to include the particular case."<sup>64</sup> The justice then referred to the title of the act, the evil which it was designed to remedy, the situation existing when the act was passed,<sup>65</sup> the circumstances surrounding the appeal to Congress, the reports of the committee of each house, and the historic truth that "this is a religious people," and "this is a Christian nation,"<sup>66</sup> all of which concurred in establishing the belief that Congress could not have "intended to make it a misdemeanor for a church of this country to contract for the services of a Christian minister residing in another nation."<sup>67</sup> This case of the Holy Trinity Church is now the leading federal case affirming, said a Circuit Court of Appeals, "that words may be * * * wrenched from their obvious meaning when a court is satisfied by sufficient evidence that the framers of the act meant, not what they said, but its opposite,"<sup>68</sup> and "it has been invariably cited where the effort has been to induce this court to legislate and substitute its own notions of what the law should be for the plainly expressed will of the legislative body."<sup>69</sup>

20. Same—further illustrations.—The Holy Trinity Church case noticed in the preceding section promulgates no new rule of statutory interpretation. Many years before, in a case frequently cited, Chief Justice Taney had declared it to be "undoubtedly the duty of the court to ascertain the meaning of the legislature from the words used in the statute and the subject-matter to which it relates, and to restrain its operation within narrower limits than its words import, if the court are satisfied that the literal meaning of its language would extend to cases which the legislature never designed to embrace in it."<sup>70</sup> Various applications of the principle may be found in the following cases:<sup>71</sup> It has been laid down again and again that "a thing which is within the intention of a statute is as much within the statute as if it were within the letter; and

21. Limitations.—Mr. Justice Brewer, who delivered the opinion of the Supreme Court in the Holy Trinity Church case,<sup>97</sup> discussing the same rule of interpretation in a later case, said: "It is true there are cases in which the letter of the statute is not deemed controlling, but the cases are few and exceptional, and only arise where there are cogent reasons for believing that the letter does not fully and accurately disclose the intent. No mere omission, no mere failure to provide for contingencies, which it may seem wise to have specifically provided for, justify any judicial addition to the language of the statute."<sup>98</sup> And in a case a circuit, reported in Dallas, Mr. Justice Chase used the following language: "By the rules which are laid down in England for the construction of statutes, and the latitude which has been indulged in their application, the British judges have assumed a legislative power, and on the pretense of judicial exposition have in fact made a great portion of the statute law of the kingdom. Of those rules of construction none can be more dangerous than that which, distinguishing between the intent and the words of the legislature, declares that a case not within the meaning of a statute, according to the opinion of the judges, shall not be embraced in the operation of the statute, although it is clearly within the words; or, vice versa, that a case within the meaning, though not within the words, shall be embraced."<sup>99</sup> And Chief Justice Marshall was emphatic in deprecating a departure from the plain meaning of the words in a penal act to find an intention not suggested by the words themselves.<sup>1</sup>

Purpose of Statute to Be Promoted

22. General spirit and purpose of statute.—"In this country where statute law is the hurried work of over-busy individuals," said Judge Nott of the Court of Claims, "very little importance can be attached to accidents of phraseology. Every year of judicial experience renders plainer the fact that judges to interpret aright must put themselves in the position of the legislators who made the statute, and gather from its general purposes the meaning of its obscurer parts."<sup>2</sup> And Chief Justice Marshall said, "The spirit as well as the letter of a statute must be respected, and where the whole context of the law demonstrates a particular intent in the legislature to effect a certain object, some degree of implication may be called in to aid that intent."<sup>3</sup> Where the terms of a statute are ambiguous the court, in order to ascertain their meaning, must resort to the general spirit and intent of the enactment, keeping in view its known object and the mischief intended to be remedied.<sup>4</sup> What the legislative intention was, however, can be derived only from the words used in the statute; and the court is not at liberty to speculate beyond the reasonable import of those words. "The spirit of the act," said Mr. Justice Story, "must be extracted from the words of the act, and not from conjectures aliunde."<sup>5</sup> Where the language of the act is explicit, there is great danger in departing from the words used, to give an effect to the law which may be supposed to have been designed by the legislature.<sup>6</sup>

23. Mischief of prior law.—It is always helpful to a court in interpreting a statute to put itself in the place of the legislative body which passed it, at the time of its enactment, with a complete knowledge of the state of the law on its subject at that time, and then to consider the evil which the statute was designed to prevent or remedy.<sup>7</sup> When the expressions used in a statute are ambiguous, "there is no better way of discerning its true meaning," said Mr. Justice Davis, "than by considering the necessity for it, and the causes which induced its enactment."<sup>8</sup> This is especially true in respect of remedial statutes, so called.<sup>9</sup> While a court in construing a penal statute is not required to shut its eyes to notorious mischiefs which it was intended to suppress,<sup>10</sup> care must be observed not to extend the statute to offenses not embraced within its language, merely because they involve the same mischief which the statute aimed to suppress.<sup>11</sup>

24. Construction in furtherance of purpose.—In the construction of a statute that exposition ought to be adopted which carries into effect the true intent and object of the legislature in its enactment.<sup>12</sup> "Courts should

"When the will of the legislature is clearly expressed, it ought to be followed without regard to consequences. And a construction, derived from a consideration of its reason and spirit, should never be resorted to but where the expressions are so ambiguous as to render such mode of interpretation unavoidable." Per Livingston, J., in *Denn v. of sentences is justifiable in order that a statute may not be read contrary to its plain purpose.<sup>15</sup> But it is competent for the legislature to make an arbitrary exception to the general purposes of an act, and where this is clearly done such apparently repugnant provision cannot be disregarded.<sup>16</sup> And a statute worded in general language should not be restricted by construction to the effectuation of the object leading to its enactment.<sup>17</sup>

25. Implications and incidents.—Where an act of Congress prescribed a rate of compensation for “registers and receivers” of the land office, “whether in or out of office at the passage of this act,” with a proviso that “no register or receiver shall receive for his services during any year a greater compensation than the maximum now allowed by law,” the Supreme Court was of opinion that the proviso clearly implied that the same rule of compensation should apply to their successors as to the then incumbents and their predecessors. “What is implied in a statute, pleading, contract, or will,” said the court, “is as much a part of it as what is expressed.”<sup>18</sup> That case is cited more frequently than any other to the proposition just quoted.<sup>19</sup> Statutory provision that a national bank may lawfully, after its failure, “deliver special deposits,” implies that a national bank, as a part of its legitimate business, may receive such “special deposits,” and this implication is as effectual as an express declaration

In Union Tel. Co. v. Eyser, 19 Wall. 427, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 43, the court said: “It is expressly declared that the superseas bond may be executed within sixty days, and later, with the permission of the designated judge. It is not said when the writ of error shall be served. Its issuance must, of course, precede the execution of the bond, and, as the judge who of the same thing would have been.<sup>20</sup> A statute authorizing the purchase of the rights and franchises of a named company, "heretofore incorporated by this state," is a clear affirmation of the existence of the corporation and of the possession of the rights and franchise conferred by its charter.<sup>21</sup> An appropriation by Congress for the salary of a consul at a place where there has previously been only a consular agency is sufficient warrant for the President to appoint a consul there.<sup>22</sup> When Congress by special legislation refers a claim to the Court of Claims of which that court has not jurisdiction, it must be held that the first purpose of the act is to confer it.<sup>23</sup> "Where a statute limits a thing to be done in a particular mode, it includes a negative of any other mode."<sup>24</sup> Where power is conferred to do any act, it is to be construed as including all necessary, or usual, or proper modes and means of accomplishing the act.<sup>25</sup> A county has power to issue warrants in payment of its debts under a provision authorizing payment of county taxes by county warrants.<sup>26</sup> Express power granted to a public corporation to issue bonds must be taken to authorize bonds in the usual form of negotiable securities.<sup>27</sup> Power to issue bonds is plainly given to a county under statutory authority to subscribe to capital stock of a railroad company, which subscription is made payable in county bonds.<sup>28</sup> Express authority to a railroad corporation to construct a "continuous" line from a point on one side of a river to a town on the other confers authority to construct a railroad bridge across the river.<sup>29</sup>

Even in a criminal case it has been declared that "a statute often speaks as plainly by inference, and by means of the purpose which underlies the enactment, as in any other manner, and whenever it appears by necessary inference from what is expressed, that a given act or acts are opposed to the policy of the law, and will defeat its purpose, or the object had in view by the legislature, such acts should be held to be thereby prohibited."<sup>30</sup>

While it is true that courts may in certain cases impute a legislative intent not expressed with perfect clearness, where the words used import such intent, either necessarily or by a plain and manifest implication, signs the citation is still required to take the bond, we think it is sufficiently implied that it may be served at any time before, or simultaneously with, the filing of the bond."

A provision that certain officers "shall receive no other pay or compensation than is now allowed them by law," sufficiently implies that they are to receive no less. Whiting v. U. S., 35 Ct. Cl. 291.

26. Avoidance of judicial legislation: generally.—Where the legislature has made no exception to the positive terms of a general statute, the conclusive presumption is that it intended to make none, and it is not the province of the courts to do so.<sup>32</sup> For example, it is not within the proper sphere of judicial power to import into a statute providing that a class of actions shall abate by the death of a party an exception in favor of certain actions belonging to that class.<sup>33</sup> Courts cannot engraft on a statute of limitations an exception which the statute does not contain.<sup>34</sup> A court will not declare a usurious contract of loan utterly void where the statute merely prescribes a loss of interest or other penalty for violation of the statute; the court cannot add to the penalties declared by the law.<sup>35</sup> The priority given by act of Congress to claims by the United States against the estates of insolvent debtors cannot be made by judicial legislation to yield to the claims of any other creditors, however high may be the dignity of their debts.<sup>36</sup> Quoting the language of the statute in such cases is usually the strongest argument that can be made against an illegitimate construction. Thus, where an act of Congress to prevent frauds upon the treasury declared void all transfers and assignments of claims against the United States except in certain cases, "or any part or any share of or interest therein," and it was held that the transfer of a portion of a claim by means of a bill of exchange was void, the court said: "The statute meets us at every turn with its inexorable announcement that every authority to receive any part of such a claim 'shall be absolutely null and void.'"<sup>37</sup> The court has no right to insert words and phrases, so as to incorporate in the statute a new and distinct provision.<sup>38</sup> "No mere omission, no mere failure to provide for contingencies, which it may seem wise to have specifically provided for, justify any judicial addition to the language of the statute."<sup>39</sup> "It is not for the court to say, where the language of the statute is clear, that it shall be so construed as to embrace cases because no good reason can be assigned why they were excluded from its provisions."<sup>40</sup> In a case where the Supreme Court was called upon to construe a federal statute in which the words "lands claimed under any foreign grant or title" occurred, it was contended that the word "lawfully" should be placed before "claimed," but the court said there is no authority to import a word into a statute in order to change its meaning.<sup>41</sup>

27. "It would have been so easy to say so."—Where the charter of a railroad company exempted the capital stock from taxation "for ten years after the completion of said road," it was held that the benefit of the exemption began only with the completion of the road. "If the legislature had intended to limit the end only, and not the beginning, of the exemption," said the court, "its purpose could have been easily expressed by saying 'until' instead of 'for,' so as to read 'until ten years after completion,' leaving the exemption to begin immediately upon the granting of the charter."<sup>42</sup> And in a case where it was held that depositing in the mail an obscene letter, sealed and addressed, was not made criminal by a statute which prohibited the mailing, among other things, of an obscene "writing," the court said: "We do not think it a reasonable construction of the statute to say that the vast mass of postal matter known as 'letters' was intended by Congress to be expressed in a term so general and vague as the word 'writing,' when it would have been just as easy, and also in strict accordance with all its other postal laws and regulations, to say 'letters' when letters were meant."<sup>43</sup> Upon like reasoning, where a special act authorized the Court of Claims to investigate a claim for breach of an express contract, "and to ascertain and adjudge the amount equitably due, if any, for such loss and damage," it was held that interest, not having been stipulated for in the contract, could not be awarded.<sup>44</sup> And in numerous other cases a proposed construction which would unwarrantably contract or expand the meaning of the legislature has been rejected by the court upon the declared presumption that the legislature would have expressed what "it would have been easy to say" had there been such an intention.<sup>45</sup> But the facility with which the legislature might

good, as for the advancement of religion and justice, or to prevent injury and wrong, the king is bound by such act, though not particularly named therein; but where a statute is general, and thereby any prerogative, right, title, or interest is divested or taken from the king, in such case the king is not bound, unless the statute is made to extend to him by express words."<sup>47</sup> And in this country, "where the government is not expressly or by necessary implication included, it ought to be clear from the nature of the mischiefs to be redressed, or the language used, that the government itself was in contemplation of the legislature before a court of law would be authorized to put such an interpretation on any statute."<sup>48</sup> A construction whereby the government relinquishes any right, privilege, title, or interest is unwarranted unless demanded by this most explicit verbiage or by irresistible implication.<sup>49</sup> Thus, the government is not within the rule that where a statute creates a right and provides a remedy for its enforcement, such remedy is exclusive of all common-law remedies.<sup>50</sup> Where a bankruptcy act provided that a discharge should release the bankrupt "from all debts," etc., the United States were not barred by the debtor's discharge.<sup>51</sup> "The United States, asserting rights vested in them as a sovereign government, are not bound by any statute of limitations, unless Congress has clearly manifested its intention that they should be so bound."<sup>52</sup> But where an act of Congress provided that a suit by the United States should be tried and adjudicated as a suit between private parties, it was deemed that the lapse of time or the bar of the statute of limitations should have the same effect as in a suit between such parties.<sup>53</sup>

47. Per Justice Clifford, in U. S. v. Herron, 20 Wall. 255, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 275, where the opinion continues as follows: "Acts of Parliament, says Chitty on Prerogative, 383, which would divest or abridge the king of his prerogatives, his interest, or his remedies, in the slightest degree, do not in general extend to or bind the king, unless there be express words to that effect. Therefore, says the same learned author, the statutes of limitation, bankruptcy, insolvency, set-off, etc., are irrelevant in the case of the king, nor does the statute of frauds relate to him, which last proposition is doubted by high authority. Exceptions exist to that rule undoubtedly, as where the statute is passed for the general advancement of learning, morality, and justice, or to prevent fraud, injury, and wrong, or where an act of Parliament gives a new estate or right to the king, as in that case it will bind him as to the manner of enjoying or using the estate or right as well as the subject."

But the king can take the benefit of any particular act, though not named therein,<sup>54</sup> and the rule being equally applicable to the national government, when the United States became party defendants to an action brought by a private person, the bar of the statute of limitations was held to be a valid defense.<sup>55</sup> It was thought by Mr. Justice Story that the United States could sue in a federal court as indorsee of a bill of exchange although the maker and payee were citizens of the same state, the federal statute excepting jurisdiction of such suits by citizen indorsees not being intended to apply to suits brought by the United States.<sup>56</sup> The rule of construction that the government is not bound unless expressly named does not apply to acts of legislation which lay down general rules of procedure in civil actions.<sup>57</sup> Accordingly it was held that an act of Congress declaring that there shall be no exclusion of any witness in civil actions "because he is a party to or interested in the issue tried," applied to civil actions in which the United States were parties.<sup>58</sup> And the United States were held not entitled to a writ of error or appeal where the same remedy was not afforded under similar circumstances to a private party.<sup>59</sup> The United States as plaintiffs in an action were held bound by an act of Congress adopting the restrictions and regulations concerning imprisonment for debt then existing by the laws of the several states.<sup>60</sup> And the United States as plaintiffs in execution are bound by state homestead exemption laws.<sup>61</sup> If a statute is clearly designed to prescribe the only rules which should govern the subject to which it relates, it will repeal any former act upon that subject wherein the United States were specially favored.<sup>62</sup> of general expressions used in another part of the same act, are among those plain rules laid down by common sense for the exposition of statutes which have been uniformly acknowledged."<sup>64</sup>

30. Mistakes in body of act.—"In construing an act of Congress if there be a plain mistake apparent upon the face of the act, which may be corrected by other language in the act itself, the mistake is not fatal."<sup>65</sup> A mere misnomer in the name of a person or corporation named in the act if the person really intended can be collected from the terms of the act is not a fatal mistake.<sup>66</sup> Where a private act designated a claimant by her maiden name when she was in fact married, the right conferred vested in the person irrespective of the name.<sup>67</sup> But the court cannot substitute other words and other dates, in order to maintain an act making erroneous reference to things aliunde, where the error is made in a matter which constitutes the very essence of the act.<sup>68</sup>

intent and policy of the act will be best promoted by reading it as applicable to all those sections; and if public mischiefs equally within the scope of the statute would be thereby prevented, and upon a different construction those mischiefs would be left without redress; there is very strong ground to say that the clause ought to be so construed as to suppress the mischiefs and not promote or protect them; and that, as its language is appropriate, so it shall be construed as intended to include them."<sup>70</sup> "It is a general rule in the construction of statutes that when in the early and declaratory sections the scope and extent of the power and privileges granted are once stated, the character of the grant as thus disclosed controls and interprets all subsequent sections, and it is unnecessary in each subsequent section to restate or use words and expressions which shall fully disclose the extent of those powers and privileges; but those subsequent sections will be understood (unless there be words of restriction and limitation therein) as coextensive with and applicable to the scope, and the full scope and extent, of the powers theretofore granted."<sup>71</sup> The occurrence of a provision in one section of a statute and its absence in another is, however, an argument against reading it as implied in that other section.<sup>72</sup> A proviso is usually confined to the section to which it is attached,<sup>73</sup> and special provisions in one section are ordinarily to be read as exceptions to apparently conflicting general provisions in another section.<sup>74</sup> Sections of a code must be pronounced, and to that end the letter of any section may sometimes be disregarded.<sup>75</sup> But where a subject is treated in the compiled laws of a state under a title clearly intended to be distinct and exclusive, the provisions should not be blended with general enactments elsewhere in the statutes which might otherwise affect them.<sup>76</sup>

32. Effect to every word.—It is a general rule, without exception, in construing statutes, that effect must be given to all their provisions, if such a construction is consistent with the general purpose of the act, and the provisions are not necessarily conflicting; and all acts of the legislature should be so construed, if practicable, that one section will not defeat or destroy another, but explain and support it.<sup>77</sup> "We are not at liberty," said Mr. Justice Strong, "to construe any statute so as to deny effect to any part of its language. It is a cardinal rule of statutory construction that significance and effect shall, if possible, be accorded to every word. As early as in Bacon's Abridgment it was said that 'a statute ought, upon the whole, to be so construed that, if it can be prevented, no clause, sentence, or word shall be superfluous, void, or insignificant;' this rule has been repeated innumerable times."<sup>78</sup> Where a statute speaks of

In Strode v. Stafford Justices, 1 Brock. 165, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,537, Chief Justice Marshall said: "It is urged, that one sentence of a law cannot be affected by the context. I should as soon have expected the declaration, that one sentence of a will was not to be affected by other parts of the will. In each, the intention of the maker is to be affected, and, consequently, each instrument must be wholly inspected. Without reasoning upon this subject, the books abound with authorities, which seem to be conclusive. In 1 Inst. 381, Lord Coke says: 'It is the most natural and genuine exposition of a statute, to construe one part of a statute by another part of the same statute, for that best expresseth the meaning of the makers.' He afterwards adds: 'And this exposition is ex visceribus actus.' The instances which illustrate this axiom, in the construction of statutes, are numerous."

"Single sentences and single provisions are not to be selected and construed by themselves, but the whole must be taken together." Pollard v. Bailey, 20 Wall. 526, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 376.

"It is not competent for this court to reject or disregard a material part of an act of Congress, unless it be so clearly repugnant to the residue of the act that the whole cannot stand together." Rice v. Minnesota, etc., R. Co., 1 Black 379, 17 U. S. (L. ed.) 147.

"Nothing less than imperative necessity will justify a court in rejecting words or clauses used in a statute." Per Baker, I. J., in McKean v. Archer, 52 Fed. 793.

In U. S. v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 693, a criminal case, the court declined to read the words "such ship or vessel" in a statute as if the word "such" were struck out. See also U. S. v. Bowen, 100 U. S. 512, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 631, where it was unsuccessfully contended that "all such pensioners" should be read "all pensioners."

In the phrase "sold or disposed of" the "other" would be without significance.<sup>79</sup> Under a statute requiring publication of notice of a tax sale "once in each week for at least twelve successive weeks," a sale advertised for only eighty-two days was pronounced illegal, and no title was conveyed thereby; the effect of the words "for at least" demanding such construction.<sup>80</sup> Where an act of Congress appropriated a sum "in full compensation" for services of a public officer during the ensuing fiscal year the court said it had no right to eliminate the words "in full" by adjudging the officer entitled to a larger sum antecedently prescribed for him in the Revised Statutes.<sup>81</sup> "The purpose of an act is, undoubtedly," said Judge McKenna, "the light by which its provisions are to be construed, but we may not assume that any provision is idle. It may be an exception to the general purpose, and the first presumption is that it means something."<sup>82</sup> In applying the rule it frequently occurs that a particular construction of a provision which the court is urged to adopt cannot be sanctioned, because, according to the view suggested, certain other provisions would thereby be rendered unnecessary, and it should not be presumed that any provision is redundant or useless.<sup>83</sup> Thus, an act of Congress prohibiting the sale of "any spirituous liquors or wines" to any Indian was held not to include lager beer. "By the term 'spirituous liquors' used alone in a statute," said the court, "it may, with some plausibility, be contended that the legislature meant to signify all intoxicating drinks; but the case is quite different when 'wines' are added to the articles prohibited. In that case it is evident that the legislature did not think that all intoxicating drinks were included in the term 'spirituous liquors,' or they would not have named 'wines.' Under the construction put by the court below on the words 'spirituous liquors,' as including all liquors that are intoxicating, and words "or disposed of" have some distinctive meaning, some meaning beyond the word "sold." Platt v. Union Pac. R. Co., 99 U. S. 59, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 424.

80. Early v. Doe, 16 How. 616, 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 1079, where Mr. Justice Wayne said: "We do not doubt if the statute had been 'once in each week for twelve successive weeks,' a previous notice of the particular day of sale having been given to the owner of the property, that it might very well be concluded, that twelve notices in different successive weeks, though the last insertion of the notice for sale was on the day of sale, was sufficient. But when the legislator had used the words, for at least twelve successive weeks, we cannot doubt that the words, at least as they would do in common parlance, mean a duration of the time that there is in twelve successive weeks or eighty-four days. Every statute must be construed from the words in it, and that construction is to be preferred which gives to all of them an operative meaning. Our construction of the statute under review gives to every word its meaning. The other leaves out of consideration the words 'for at least,' which mean a space of time comprehended within twelve successive weeks or eighty-four days. The preposition, for, means of itself duration when it is put in connection with time, and as all of us use it in that way, in our every-day conversation, it cannot be presumed that the legislator, in making this statute, did not mean to use it in the same way."

hence as including lager beer, the word 'wines' is useless in the statute."<sup>84</sup>

33. Destructive and synonymous words.—With respect to certain words disregarded as destructive, Mr. Chief Justice White, speaking for the court, said: "We may not in order to give effect to those words virtually destroy the meaning of the entire context, that is, give them a significance which would be clearly repugnant to the statute looked at as a whole and destructive of its obvious intent."<sup>85</sup> Separate significance need not be given synonymous words.<sup>86</sup> "There is nothing unusual in finding in a statute words which might have been omitted,"<sup>87</sup> and "tautology sometimes occurs."<sup>88</sup> But it was said in the construction of a tariff act: "It would not be safe for the court to draw any inference from the apparent tautology of those parts of a revenue law describing the subjects of duty. In most cases the terms used being addressed to merchants were to be understood in their mercantile sense, the ascertainment of which is matter of fact, depending on evidence, and that which may seem merely tautologous might turn out to be truly descriptive of different subjects."<sup>89</sup>

In U. S. v. Bassett, 2 Story 404, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,539, Mr. Justice Story said: "As to the point of the objection, that otherwise the words above recited have no distinct and emphatic effect, and that the act will read just the same without them; what is the amount of the objection? It is nothing more than that the legislature has used superfluous language; that it has used words which might have been spared, and are either unnecessary or tautological. Now, I believe that there are very few acts of legislation in the statute book, either of the state or of the national government, or of the British Parliament, which do not fall within the same predicament, and are not open to the same objection, or, if you please, to the same reproach. The truth is, that it arises sometimes from loose and inaccurate habits of composition of the draftsman, sometimes from hasty and unrevised legislation, but more frequently from abundant, and, perhaps, over-anxious caution. Even our constitutions of government, if nicely scrutinized, cannot escape this reproach, if reproach it can properly deserve to be called. Mr. Madison has somewhere remarked, that the Constitution of the United States contains numerous tautological expressions, which convey no additional or distinct meaning from the context. The very first power given to the Congress of the United States by the Constitution, the power 'to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises,' is open to this very suggestion. Are not duties, imposts and excises, in reality taxes? Are not these words sometimes used to express the same thing? Imposts are but external taxes or duties; excises are but internal taxes and duties. No one, however, can reasonably doubt, but these words were all used in the Constitution from abundant caution, to avoid a doubt or to prevent a cavil, as each of these words is sometimes used in a broad and general sense, and sometimes in a more narrow and restricted sense. The objection, therefore, is not of itself a just ground to alter the interpretation of any clause of an act, otherwise sensible and satisfactory, in order to escape the imputation of being unnecessary. Assuming it to be unnecessary, it by no means follows, that it is, therefore, to have some new meaning given to it, or that it may not justly be presumed to be used ex majori cautela. In the present case, I have no doubt, that the clause was introduced into the act, ex majori cautela."

nancy or inconsistency.<sup>89a</sup> The sections of a code relative to any subject must be harmonized and to that end the letter of any section may sometimes be disregarded.<sup>90</sup> But where absolute harmony between parts of a statute is demonstrably non-existent, the court must reject that one which is least in accord with the general plan of the whole,<sup>91</sup> or if there be no such ground for choice between inharmonious sections, the later section being the last expression of the legislative mind must, in construction, vacate the former to the extent of the repugnancy.<sup>92</sup>

35. General and particular provisions.—"It is an old and familiar rule," said Mr. Justice Lamar, "that where there is in the same statute a particular enactment, and also a general one, which in its most comprehensive sense would include what is embraced in the former, the particular enactment must be operative, and the general enactment must be taken to affect only such cases within its general language as are not within the provisions of the particular enactment."<sup>93</sup> And the justice proceeded to apply that rule in the construction of a statute upon which there had been much ingenious argument and a decided conflict of authority in the inferior federal courts. The statute was an act of Congress of 1876, declaring non-mailable "every obscene * * * book, pamphlet, paper, writing, print, or other publication of an indecent character," and other enumerated articles, and making it a misdemeanor to deposit any of them for mailing.<sup>94</sup> In a prosecution under the act, the Circuit Court certified to the Supreme Court the following question: "Is the knowingly depositing in the mails of an obscene letter, inclosed in an envelope or wrapper upon which there is nothing but the name and address of the person to whom the letter is written, an offense within the act?" On behalf of the government it was contended that the word "writing" comprehended such a letter, but the Supreme Court held otherwise. In the course of his argument in support of the view of the court, Justice Lamar pointed out that the statute, after enumerating what articles shall be nonmailable, adds a separate and distinct clause declaring that "every letter upon the envelope of which * * * indecent, lewd, obscene, or lascivious delineations, epithets, terms, or language may be written or printed * * * shall not be conveyed in the mails," and the person knowingly or wilfully depositing the same in the mails "shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor," etc. "This distinctly additional clause," continued the justice, "specifically designating and describing the particular class of letters which shall be non-mailable, clearly limits the inhibitions of the statute to that class of letters alone whose indecent matter is exposed on the envelope."<sup>95</sup> Another illustration of the general rule is the construction placed upon the Bankruptcy Act of 1898 which awards priority of payment out of the bankrupt's estate to "(4) wages due to workmen, clerks, or servants which have been earned within three months before the date of the commencement of proceedings, not to exceed $300 to each claimant. (5) Debts owing to any person who by the laws of the states or of the United States is entitled to priority." The Circuit Court of Appeals held that the limitation of three months applies to the specified wages claims, even though the law of the state gives priority without limitation; that the provision containing the limitation is special and the following provision general, and that what Congress has said specifically upon a subject "expresses the particular intent of the law-making power," and "is not to be tolled or enlarged by

95. U. S. v. Chase, 135 U. S. 260, 10 S. Ct. 756, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 117, wherein the court quotes with approval the opinion of Judge Hammond, in U. S. v. Huggett, 40 Fed. 640, where the same construction of the act was adopted. In that case Judge Hammond invoked another rule of interpretation as follows: "Has this letter been excluded by the language of the act? A latitudinarian construction that shall include it because it is as hurtful to morals as other things that are excluded is denied to use by the Supreme Court, as already shown. The conclusive fact against including it is that from the beginning of the legislation to the recent acts, which do specifically include 'letters,' they have never been mentioned as such in the list of prohibited mail matter, nor referred to in the statute, except in a phrase which by fair implication shows that they were designedly left out of that list when Congress says that there shall be included 'every letter upon the envelope of which' — and it may be conceded that this means upon the outside surface of which — the obscene language, etc., appears. Now, from the earliest appearance in our civilization of postal carriage, whether by private or public establishment, the 'letters' have been that class of 'mail matter' with which and about which there has been most concern, so much so, that the idea of 'a letter' and postal carriage are quite inseparable, when we have in mind the postal service and its regulation. It has become, in that relation, a technical word, a superior word, a word to represent a class of mail matter that is in every possible sense of so high a grade that all else becomes inferior in classification and in enumeration to it. It stands first in postal concerns, and nothing is even equal to it. Historically, in practical operation, and in popular knowledge and esteem, this is so, and the general rule of construction is that in legislative enumeration the inferior does not include the superior. End. Interp. St., § 412, p. 579. I have taken the trouble to examine with care the legislation concerning our postal affairs, and do not find a single instance where Congress has ever used any other word to include 'letters' than that word itself, except such expressions as 'the mail,' 'mail matter,' 'bag or mail of letters,' etc. It is sometimes used generically to describe mail matter of other classes than any general prior or subsequent provision" in the act.<sup>96</sup> Where an act of Congress directed the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to the legal owner of such lands as were sold for taxes "in the parishes of St. Helena and St. Luke" a specified sum per acre, a further provision in the same act that "any sum or sums of money received into the treasury of the United States from the sale of lands bid in for taxes in any state * * * in excess of the tax assessed thereon shall be paid to the owners of the land" was held not to extend to the parishes of St. Helena and St. Luke.<sup>97</sup> In a section of the Federal Judiciary Act of 1789 the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court was defined as extending to "all suits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity, where," etc., and after prescribing the criminal jurisdiction of the Circuit Court and providing that no person shall be arrested in one district for trial in another "in a civil action" before a circuit or district court, the paragraph concluded with the provision that "no civil suit shall be brought before either of said courts, against an inhabitant of the United States, by any original process in any other district than that whereof he is an inhabitant, or in which he shall be found, at the time of serving the writ." It was held that the words "civil suit" in the last provision were confined to civil suits "at common law or in equity," as in the first provision, and did not extend to causes of admiralty jurisdiction. "The general language found in one place," said the court, "may be restricted in its effect to the particular expressions employed in another, if such, upon a careful examination of the subject, appears to have been the intent of the enactment."<sup>98</sup> Where general language in an act is followed by the words "that is to say," and particular cases are then specified, what follows the quoted phrase must govern what precedes it, because it is the more carefully chosen language.<sup>99</sup> The rule has a close affinity with the rule of ejusdem generis,<sup>1</sup> and the rule that where an

'letters,' as when the statutes speak of 'letter-carriers,' 'letter-boxes,' etc.; but whenever the legislation in hand requires specific classification or enumeration, I find no word ever substituted for 'letters,' to express that which is commonly known as letters in relation to the postal service. We have 'letter and newspaper envelopes,' 'letter correspondence,' 'registered letters,' 'unclaimed letters,' 'dead letters,' 'request letters,' 'non-delivered letters,' 'all letters and other mail matter,' 'foreign letters,' 'letters or packets,' 'letters and packets,' 'letter postage,' 'letter mail,' 'letter and other mail matter,' and such like, almost innumerable; and these I have taken quite at random from the Revised Statutes. Can it be possible that Congress then, wishing to include 'letters,' in any particular and accurate enumeration shall drop that word so imbedded in our postal laws and that of our ancestors beyond the sea, and adopt some unfamiliar, inferior, and in every sense ambiguous term to express the idea? It does violence to the intelligence of Congress to think so."

A provision in a statute conferring authority upon counties "to issue bonds in such amount as may be necessary to erect a suitable building for a court house" was held to be limited by a subsequent section declaring that the county should not issue a larger amount of bonds than could be liquidated in a certain number of years by an annual tax of a stated amount. Francis v. Howard County, 50 Fed. 44.

act contains special provisions they must be read as exceptions to a general provision in a separate earlier or subsequent act.<sup>2</sup>

36. Same—limitations on rule.—We have seen that provisos and exceptions in a statute are strictly construed,<sup>3</sup> that courts are slow to discover qualifications of explicit general language where the legislature has made none,<sup>4</sup> that the natural import of the language is presumptively within the intent of the legislature,<sup>5</sup> that all the provisions of an act should be harmonized if possible,<sup>6</sup> and that manifest legislative intent is always of paramount consideration.<sup>7</sup> So the general rule stated in the preceding paragraph is no stronger than the declaration by Chief Justice Marshall that “positive and explicit provisions, comprehending in terms a whole class of cases, are not to be restrained by applying to those cases an implication drawn from subsequent words, unless that implication be very clear, necessary, and irresistible.”<sup>8</sup> And when words of different signification are employed the scope of the statute is not necessarily to be confined within the limits of the narrower word.<sup>9</sup> Accordingly under the Sherman anti-trust law declaring illegal “every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce,” etc.,<sup>10</sup> it was held that the word “conspiracy” was not confined to combinations of a contractual character, since such a construction “would be to make tautologous words which have distinctly different meanings.”<sup>11</sup> So where an act of Congress provided that no person should “be prosecuted, tried, or punished for any offense not capital, nor for any fine or forfeiture under any penal statute unless the indictment or information for the same shall be found or instituted within two years from the time of committing the offense, or incurring the fine or forfeiture aforesaid,” and it was contended by the United States District Attorney that an action of debt to recover a pecuniary forfeiture was not barred by the limitation, “it is true,” said Chief Justice Marshall, “that general expressions may be restrained by subsequent particular words, which show that in the intention of the legislature those general expressions are used in a particular sense, and the argument is a strong one which contends that the latter words describing the remedy imply a restriction on those which precede them. Most frequently they would do so. But in the statute under consideration a distinct member of the sentence describing one entire class of offenses would be rendered almost totally useless by the construction insisted on by the attorney for the United States. Almost every fine or forfeiture under a penal statute may be recovered by an action of debt as well as by information; and to declare that the information was barred while the action of debt was left without limitation would be to attribute a capriciousness on this subject to the legislature which could not be accounted for; and to declare that the law did not apply to cases on which an action of debt is maintainable would be to overrule express words, and to give the statute almost the same construction which it would receive if one distinct member of the sentence was expunged from it. In this particular case the statute which creates the forfeiture does not prescribe the mode of demanding it; consequently, either debt or information would lie. ### Prospective Operation Preferred

37. General presumption.—"It is a principle which has always been held sacred in the United States," said Chief Justice Marshall, "that laws by which human action is to be regulated look forwards, not backwards, and are never to be construed retrospectively, unless the language of the act shall render such construction indispensable."<sup>13</sup> And Mr. Justice Harlan declared that "courts uniformly refuse to give to statutes a retrospective operation, whereby rights previously vested are injuriously affected, unless compelled to do so by language so clear and positive as to leave no room to doubt that such was the intention of the legislature."<sup>14</sup>

Proceeding a step farther, "Even though the words of a statute are broad enough in their literal extent to comprehend existing cases," said Mr. Justice Clifford, "they must yet be construed as applicable only to cases that may hereafter arise, unless the language employed expresses a contrary intention in unequivocal terms."<sup>15</sup> Statutes are to have no further or greater retrospective operation than plainly appears to have been the legislative intention.<sup>16</sup> But a statute does not operate retrospectively when it is made to apply to future transactions, merely because those transactions have relation to and are founded upon antecedent events.<sup>17</sup> An act of Congress declaring that an earlier act allowing a drawback on certain imported articles "shall be construed to apply only to vessels of the United States" was held not to take away the right to the drawback on those articles which had previously been reshipped on vessels not of the United States.<sup>18</sup> Laws reducing the price of work done for the government have been uniformly construed as operating only upon work ordered

In 9 Op. Atty-Gen. 439, Attorney-General Black said: "Numerous cases are to be found in the books where the legislature has seemed to express very clearly the intent that their enactment should operate upon the past, and yet the courts have held the true construction to be otherwise. For instance, an act of Parliament was passed declaring that no action should thereafter be brought to charge any person upon any agreement made in consideration of marriage, unless such agreement be in writing. An action was thereafter brought upon an agreement without writing, but the agreement was made before the date of the law. The judges unanimously sustained the right of the plaintiff, because they could not presume that the act had a retrospect and because it would be great mischief so to explain it. Gilmore v. Shooter, 2 Mod. 310, 2 Show. 17. Although the statute of wills declared that all testamentary writing should be void without certain formalities of attestation, it was held not to apply to a case where the will had been executed without such formalities before the passage of the statute, though the testator died afterwards. Harwood v. Goodright, 1 Cowp. 90; Mullock v. Souder, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 199. This, it will be observed, was a very strong case in favor of the general doctrine, because the will might have been made in pursuance of the act after it was passed, and because no right whatever was vested under it at the date of the act."

after their passage.<sup>19</sup> An act of Congress ordering a reduction in the rates allowed for mail transportation and directing that the reduction take effect from the beginning of the current fiscal year, was held not to operate retroactively as a notice to existing contractors.<sup>20</sup> In one case the court said that "the intention of the legislature must be expressed with irresistible clearness" to induce a court to believe that a law was intended to be retroactive upon wills then in existence and cause them to pass after-acquired lands without any evidence that the testators desired or thought they would do so.<sup>21</sup> Where a statute is amended by the substitution of words or so that it shall read "as follows," the new provisions are to be understood as enacted at the time the amended act takes effect; in other words, the amendment is not to be given a retroactive effect.<sup>22</sup> Statutes conferring appellate jurisdiction should not be construed to authorize the review of a judgment already rendered and not previously reviewable<sup>23</sup> unless such intent affirmatively appears.<sup>24</sup> Statutes of limitation are presumed to operate prospectively only.<sup>25</sup> Where the language of a remedial act clearly relating to past transactions is broad enough to extend to like cases in the future, it will be construed to operate prospectively if a contrary intent is not manifest.<sup>26</sup> weight in determining the scope of the operation of a statute.<sup>28</sup> The use of the word "hereafter" imports a prospective operation.<sup>29</sup> The fact that an act by its terms is not to take effect immediately upon its passage is a strong indication that it is not designed to operate retroactively.<sup>30</sup> When an amendatory law contains express provisions fixing the period of its retroaction in certain specified cases, the specification almost necessarily leads to the conclusion that in all other and unspecified cases the amendment is not to have a retroactive effect.<sup>31</sup> But "while the rule is that statutes should be so construed as to prevent them from operating retroactively, that principle is one of construction and not of reconstruction and therefore does not authorize a judicial re-enactment by interpretation of a statute to save it from producing a retroactive effect."<sup>32</sup> Accordingly a statute relating to any "judgment rendered or to be rendered" was held to operate retrospectively.<sup>33</sup> It has been said that an act in terms applicable to mortgages "heretofore executed," could not possibly be construed to have within its purview only those mortgages executed subsequent to its passage.<sup>34</sup> While tariff laws are prospective, an amended statute which places on the free list certain articles theretofore subject to duty is not limited in its application to those articles of that class which have been produced or manufactured since the passage of the amendatory act.<sup>35</sup> Congress may impose a tax retrospectively, and where it has clearly done so the legislation must be enforced.<sup>36</sup>

39. Exceptions.—Acts relieving individuals from obligations to the government or the public, in whole or in part, without affecting the vested rights of other persons, and similar acts mitigating the punishment for offenses, as well as acts relating to the administration of the government, and generally those affecting the proceedings of courts, apply with equal force to existing cases as to those which may arise in the future.<sup>37</sup> And the rule is said to be that when the enactment deals with procedure only, unless the contrary be expressed, the enactment applies to all actions, whether commenced before or after the passing of the act.<sup>38</sup> "This is only in accordance with the general rule that all remedial legislation shall be liberally construed, and particularly should this be so where new remedies are given, and with reference to the bestowal of jurisdiction on the courts."<sup>39</sup> But such a statute will not be construed as retrospective, even though it is in a large sense remedial, if it materially impairs existing rights.<sup>40</sup> And it has been held that a statute changing the common-law doctrine in regard to the negligence of fellow-servants and evidently intended to remedy the evils growing out of that doctrine did not operate retrospectively in the absence of a clearly expressed purpose to that end.<sup>41</sup>

The day at which the treaty should operate was important, and would necessarily be ever present in mind, and it was easy of expression. Future time and past time are directly opposite, and by no inadvertence or intention can we believe or suppose that Congress, having in mind and purpose the distinction between the past and the future, should use language that expressed the one while it meant to provide for the other."

Force of Legislative and Judicial Constructions

40. Legislative construction.—A legislative body may prescribe a rule of construction binding on the judiciary.<sup>42</sup> It may likewise by statute declare the construction of previous statutes so as to bind the courts in reference to all transactions occurring after the passage of the law,<sup>43</sup> and may, in many cases, thus furnish the rule to govern the courts in transactions which are past, provided no constitutional right of the party concerned is violated.<sup>44</sup> But it cannot, under cover of giving a construction to an existing or an expired statute, invade private rights with which it could not interfere by a new and affirmative statute;<sup>45</sup> since "to declare

Where an act of Congress gives a construction to a prior act, such legislation, so far as it affects the liability of the United States and does not interfere with the vested rights of individuals and is not penal, it is within the constitutional power of Congress and is not open to the objections to retroactive laws, especially when such laws are remedial. *McNamara v. "An act directing how a former act shall be construed is inoperative on the past though controlling in the future." Per Justice Strong, in U. S. v. Claflin, 97 U. S. 549, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 1083. To the point

what the law is, or has been, is a judicial power; to declare what the law shall be is legislative.<sup>46</sup> Where, however, it can exercise a power by passing a new statute which may be retroactive in its effect, the form of words which it uses to put this power in operation cannot be material, if the purpose is clear and is within the power; and it may, by enacting that a subsisting statute shall be "construed" in a particular manner, effect the purpose designed.<sup>47</sup> In many instances the rule that statutes in pari materia must be construed together<sup>48</sup> requires the court to adopt a construction of a statute which has been sanctioned by a subsequent act upon the same subject.<sup>49</sup> And it is very common for a court, in construing a statute, to refer to subsequent legislation as impliedly confirming the view which the court has decided to adopt; and in some cases perhaps more weight has been given to this later action of the legislative body than correct rules of interpretation would authorize,<sup>50</sup> for Congress cannot, by mere expression of opinion, without a positive legislative act, bind the court on a question of construction.<sup>51</sup> "A mistaken opinion of the legislature concerning the law does not make the law," said Chief Justice that a legislative construction is not retroactive, see also U. S. v. Chong Sam, 47 Fed. 886; Union Iron Co. v. Pierce, 4 Biss. 327, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,367; Bassett's Case, 2 Ct. Cl. 448; Kennedy v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cl. 363.

41. Construction by local or foreign court.—Federal courts, in construing a constitution or statute of any state,<sup>53</sup> or a foreign statute,<sup>54</sup> adopt the construction given to it by the courts of the state or country where it was enacted, if it has been judicially construed therein.<sup>55</sup>

III. AIDS TO INTERPRETATION

Circumstances Attendant on Enactment

42. Petition; message of President; report of special commission.—In a case where Congress appropriated or directed a sum of money to be paid to the widow and children of a deceased person in compensation for certain damages sustained by him, and a question arose whether the money paid became assets of his estate, the petition to Congress upon which the act was based, and which was made a part of the pleadings, was examined in order to ascertain more clearly the consideration and inducement for the act.<sup>56</sup>

In like manner the Supreme Court has adverted to instructions of the President to the Philippine Commission for the purpose of ascertaining the true intent of a law addressed to the Philippine Islands.<sup>57</sup> In another instance the same court has alluded to the message of the President to Congress as corroborative of its interpretation of an act.<sup>58</sup>

The foregoing were cases where a statute of a state other than that wherein the federal court was sitting was under construction, the court adopting the construction placed upon it by the courts of the state where it was enacted. A fortiori the federal courts adopt the construction by the state courts in cases where the federal court is administering the laws of the state in its own territory. "The construction given by the courts of the several states to the legislative acts of those states is received as true, unless they come in conflict with the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States," said Chief Justice Marshall, in Elmendorf v. Taylor, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 160, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 292. That proposition has been reaffirmed in a vast multitude of authorities with various doctrines.

The federal courts in construing a state statute follow the rules of interpretation adopted by the state courts as applicable to that statute. In re Wilde, 133 Fed. 562.

(L. ed.) 292, where Chief Justice Marshall said: "No court in the universe which professed to be governed by principle would, we presume, undertake to say that the courts of Great Britain, or of France, or of any other nation, had misunderstood their own statutes, and therefore erect itself into a tribunal which should correct such misunderstanding."

Where the statute has not been judicially construed, the courts will adopt the interpretation, if any, given to it by officials whose duty it was to apply and administer it. See Consolidated Roller-Mill Co. v. Walker, 43 Fed. 581, and infra, §§ 56, 57.

Reference has been made in the construction of a statute relating to the Indian Territory to the reports of a special committee empowered by Congress to enter negotiations with the Indians with a view to the ultimate creation of a state from the lands embraced in the territory. "So far as these reports antedate the legislation that is under inquiry," said Mr. Justice Pitney, "they may of course be resorted to as aids to interpretation, for the Commission was in a very real sense 'the eyes and the ears' of Congress in matters pertaining to affairs in the Indian Territory, and legislation was framed with a special regard to its recommendations."<sup>59</sup> But a communication from a party interested in a statute to the committee in charge thereof is utterly irrelevant.<sup>60</sup>

43. History of times and condition of country.—A court may recur to the public history of the times in order to ascertain the reason of the law as well as the meaning of particular provisions therein.<sup>61</sup> In construing the provisions of the Harter Act,<sup>62</sup> the Supreme Court remarked that the exigencies which led to the passage of the act were graphically set forth in a petition addressed by the Glasgow Corn Trade Association to the Marquis of Salisbury and embodied in a report of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to the House of Representatives, and that "as a part of the history of the times, this is a proper subject of consideration."<sup>63</sup> The condition of the country when the act was passed, and other circumstances surrounding its enactment, may properly be considered in construing it.<sup>64</sup>

But these considerations cannot vary the clear meaning of the language used.<sup>65</sup>

44. Debates and committee reports.—In respect of the consideration due to debates in Congress, Chief Justice Taney said that in expounding a law “the judgment of the court cannot in any degree be influenced by the construction placed upon it by individual members of Congress in the debate which took place in its passage, nor by the motives or reasons assigned by them for supporting or opposing amendments that were offered. The law as it passed is the will of the majority of both houses, and the only mode in which that will is spoken is in the act itself.”<sup>66</sup> The reason of the rule was clearly explained by Mr. Justice Story. “At the threshold of the argument,” said he, “we are met with the suggestion that when the act was before Congress the opposite doctrine was then maintained in the House of Representatives, and it was confidently stated that no such jurisdiction was conferred by the act as is now insisted on. What passed in Congress upon the discussion of a bill can hardly become a matter of strict judicial inquiry; and if it were, it could scarcely be affirmed that the opinions of a few members, expressed either way, are to be considered as the judgment of the whole house, or even of a majority. But, in truth, little reliance can or ought to be placed upon such sources of interpretation of a statute. The questions can be, and rarely are, there debated upon strictly legal grounds, with a full mastery of the subject and of the just rules of interpretation. The arguments are generally of a mixed character, addressed by way of objection, or of support, rather with a view to carry or defeat a bill than with the strictness of a judicial decision. But if the House entertained one construction of the language of the bill, non constat that the same opinion was entertained either by the Senate or by the President; and their opinions are certainly, in a matter of the sanction of laws, entitled to as great weight as the other branch. But, in truth, courts of justice are not at liberty to look at considerations of this sort. We are bound to interpret the act as we find it, and to make such an interpretation as its language and its apparent objects require. We must take it to be true that the legislature intend precisely what they say, and to the extent which the provisions of the act require for the purpose of securing their just opinion and effect. Any other course would deliver over the court to interminable doubts and difficulties; and we should be compelled to guess what was the law, from the loose commentaries of different debates, instead of the precise enactments of the statute. Nor have there been wanting illustrious instances of great minds which, after they had, as legislators or commentators, reposed upon a short and hasty opinion, have deliberately withdrawn from their first impressions when they came upon the judgment seat to re-examine the statute or law in its full bearings."<sup>67</sup> And where a claimant in the Court of Claims filed interrogatories to be propounded to a former member of Congress to show the object or intention of a certain enactment, the court was "not able to find in the text-books or reported decisions that such an effort was ever before made in a court of law."<sup>68</sup> But the court is at liberty to advert to the view expressed by individual members in debate<sup>69</sup> or by a committee in its report,<sup>70</sup> and gather therefrom, as it may from any other source, the history of the times or of the evil which the legislation was intended to remedy. Reference is frequently made to such debates or to opinions expressed in reports of committees for the purpose of confirming a construction adopted by the court,<sup>71</sup> and, though they should never be

Schilling, (C. C. A.) 53 Fed. 81, it appears that members of conference committees had officially stated that the clerks of the committees, in preparing the committee reports, had made a mistake by ending in the wrong place a parenthesis in a tariff bill. But it was held that these declarations of the members of the committees were not sufficient to authorize a court to change the manifest meaning of the statute as it passed the legislative body and received the approval of the President, and to construe it in accordance with the intention of the committee.

45. Other proceedings in Congress.—The actual proceedings in Congress, apart from opinions expressed in debates and committee reports, may assist in determining the construction of a statute of doubtful import.<sup>74</sup> "In these circumstances, we are entitled to avail ourselves of such light as the history of the steps taken in the enactment of the law, as disclosed by the legislative records, may afford."<sup>75</sup> The rejection by Congress of a specific provision contained in an act as originally reported, is most persuasive to the conclusion that the act should not be so construed as in effect to include that provision.<sup>76</sup> That there was powerful opposition in Congress to the passage of a certain act has been adverted to as a consideration requiring an exact and literal construction thereof.<sup>77</sup> The Supreme Court interpreted a badly expressed and contradictory enactment by a reference to the journals of Congress, where it appeared that the peculiar phraseology was the result of an amendment introduced without due regard to language in the original bill.<sup>78</sup> But the same court has characterized an argument sought to be founded upon the various phases assumed by the provisions of an act in its passage through the two houses of Congress as "very unsafe and unreliable."<sup>79</sup>

Title of Statute

46. In general.—In the legislation of Parliament the title of a statute has been held to be no part of it, for the title is usually framed only by the clerk of the house in which the bill first passes, and is seldom read more than once.<sup>80</sup> But this rule has been modified, and it now seems that when the meaning of the body of the act is doubtful, the title may be relied on as an assumption in arriving at a conclusion.<sup>81</sup> "The title is worthy of more consideration in the case of American statutes, when the legislature passes on the whole statute, title, preamble, if any, and the body of the statute; in many American legislatures the title of the act is agreed to by a distinct vote of the body."<sup>82</sup> In respect of acts of Congress, however, it was observed by Mr. Justice Field that "the title of an act furnishes little aid in the construction of its provisions;" that "it is seldom the subject of special consideration by the legislature;" and that even when the meaning of provisions in the body of the act is doubtful the title "has little weight."<sup>83</sup> Very little significance is attached to headings in tariff acts; they are intended only for general suggestions as to the character of articles within the schedules.<sup>84</sup> Titles to legislative acts have, in some of the states, come to possess very great importance, by Being, then, no part of the act, the title is seen to afford no legislative import."

83. Hadden v. Collector, 5 Wall. 110, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 518, wherein Mr. Justice Field continued as follows: "These observations apply with special force to acts of Congress. Every one who has had occasion to examine them has found the most incongruous provisions, having no reference to matter specified in the title. Thus the law regulating appeals in Mexican land cases to the district courts of the United States from the board of commissioners created under the act of March 3d, 1851, is found in an act entitled, 'An act making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of the government for the year ending June 30th, 1853, and for other purposes.' The law declaring that in the courts of the United States there shall be no exclusion of any witness on account of color, nor in civil actions when he is a party to or interested in the issue tried, is contained in a proviso to a section in the appropriation act of 1864, the section itself directing an appropriation for detecting and punishing the counterfeiting of the securities and coin of the United States. During the past session, whilst a bill was pending before Congress entitled, 'A bill granting the right of way to ditch and canal owners over the public lands and for other purposes,' all after the enacting clause was stricken out and provisions establishing a complete system for the possession and sale of interests in mines were substituted in its place. And thus the most important act in our legislation relating to the mining interests of the country stands on the statute book under a title purporting that the act grants a right of way to ditch and canal owners over the public lands, and for other purposes. The words 'for other purposes,' frequently added to the title in acts of Congress, are considered as covering every possible subject of legislation." See further to the point that the title of an act of Congress does not often give material aid in the construction of it. U. S. v. Distillery No. Twenty-Eight, 6 Biss. 486, 25 Fed. Cas. reason of constitutional provisions which not only require that they shall correctly indicate the purpose of the law, but which absolutely make the title to control and exclude from effect and operation as law everything which is incorporated in the body of the act but is not within the purpose indicated by the title.<sup>85</sup> When the title of an act corresponds with the intention deduced from the body of the act or is not antagonistic thereto it is a common practice of courts to refer to the title as emphasizing that intention or not detracting from it, as the case may be.<sup>86</sup>

47. Ambiguous provisions.—In an early case Chief Justice Marshall said: "On the influence which the title ought to have in construing the enacting clauses, much has been said, and yet it is not easy to discern the point of difference between the opposing counsel in this respect. Neither party contends that the title of an act can control plain words in the body of the statute, and neither denies that, taken with other parts, it may assist in removing ambiguities. Where the intent is plain, nothing is left to construction. Where the mind labors to discover the design of the legislature, it seizes everything from which aid can be derived; and in such

It would, therefore, in advance of an examination of the text of the act, be reasonable to anticipate that the legislation would cover or have regard to the entire field of foreign and interstate commerce, and that its scheme of regulation would not be restricted to a partial treatment of the subject. So, too, it could not be readily supposed that Congress intended, when regulating such commerce, case the title claims a degree of notice and will have its due share of consideration.<sup>87</sup> "Among other things," said Mr. Justice Brewer," which may be considered in determining the intent of the legislature, is the title of the act. We do not mean that it may be used to add to or to take from the body of the statute,<sup>88</sup> but it may help to interpret its meaning."<sup>89</sup> An act the purpose of which, as avowed in its title, is "to extend the jurisdiction of" certain courts "certainly cannot be so construed as to limit and abridge an existing jurisdiction."<sup>90</sup> Where a statute was intended, as declared in its title, to "amend the laws relating to American seamen, for the protection of such seamen, and to promote commerce," the court said: "It cannot therefore apply to seamen, even if they are American by birth or naturalization, that have regularly shipped upon a British vessel, and have thereby become British seamen for the time being."<sup>91</sup> Where the title of an act was "An act for the punishment of certain crimes against the United States," Chief Justice Marshall said: "It would seem that offenses against the United States, not offenses against the human race, were the crimes which the legislature intended by this law to punish;" and it was held under all the circumstances that piracy was not punishable under the act.<sup>92</sup> An act directing moneys to be paid out of the treasury was expressed in its title to be "for relief of the widow and children" of a person named, and the title was regarded as fortifying the conclusion that the money was not to constitute a part of his estate for the payment of his debts.<sup>93</sup> Where an act entitled "An act to correct an error in section twenty-five hundred and four of the Revised Statutes" proceeded to correct a supposed error in "section 25," and by reference to interfere with and interrupt, much less destroy, sources of trade and commerce already existing, nor to overlook the property rights of those who had invested money in the railroads of the country, nor to disregard the interest of the consumers, to furnish whom with merchandise is one of the principal objects of all systems of transportation."

We mean only to hold that the preamble may be referred to in order to assist in ascertaining the intent and meaning of a statute fairly susceptible of different constructions."

to the two sections it was evident that the act was aimed at an error in the section mentioned in the title, the latter was, of course, given conclusive effect in support of the act.<sup>94</sup> Under an act of Congress granting money to the "legal representatives" of a person, the money was awarded to his heirs, and not to his administrator as assets, partly on the ground that the act was described in its title to be "for the relief of the heirs" of the person named.<sup>95</sup> Where the question was whether the act under examination created a new railroad corporation or whether it merely conferred upon a foreign corporation franchises to be enjoyed within the territory of the state, the purpose declared in the title "to incorporate" was accorded "more than ordinary weight" in favor of the court's conclusion that a new corporation was formed.<sup>96</sup> Where an act was entitled "An act to prohibit the importation and migration of foreigners and aliens under contract or agreement to labor," etc., the court was of opinion that Congress clearly had no thought of excluding persons whose toil is that of the brain, and, partly in view of the title, a minister of the gospel was adjudged not to be within the prohibition of the act.<sup>97</sup>

48. Explicit provisions.—It is only when the meaning of provisions in the body of the act is doubtful that resort may be had to the title,<sup>98</sup> and the ambiguity which justifies a resort to the title must arise in the body of the act; ambiguity in the title alone creates no embarrassment.<sup>99</sup> "The title of an act of Congress, when at variance with its provisions, deserves no consideration."<sup>1</sup> A section in "an act to amend the custom revenue laws" was applied to cases arising under the internal revenue laws, these

The foregoing case distinguished.—On the other hand, an act of a similar character entitled "An act for the relief of" a former navy officer in respect of the settlement of his accounts and directing payment to him "or his heirs" of any balance found due was held not to be a gift to his heirs so as to exclude his creditors from all interest in the balance, and the word "heirs" was held necessarily to mean the same thing as personal representatives. Price v. Forrest, 173 U. S. 410, 19 S. Ct. 434, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 749, distinguishing Emerson v. Hall, 13 Pet. 409, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 223, above cited.

And where an act entitled "An act for the relief of the estate of" a deceased person conferred jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine a claim of his "legal representatives," the court, looking at the body of the act, found that its manifest purpose was not to confer a bounty or gratuity upon any one, but to ascertain and provide for the payment of a debt due from the United States for property of the decedent taken by the United States, and consequently the money recovered by his executor was held to constitute assets of the estate subject to the debts and liabilities of the testator. *Briggs v. "Being, however, in the nature of things a mere brief epitome or short description of the act, the title is very liable to be incorrect or incomplete, and therefore it can never be used to control the being covered by the plain language of the section.<sup>2</sup> Although the title of an act giving priority to claims by the United States against bankrupt debtors' estates was limited to "receivers of public money," and several sections of the act were confined to debtors of that class, the explicit and comprehensive language of the enacting clause of another section was held to constitute the United States a preferred creditor against the bankrupt estate of an indorser of a bill of exchange in the ordinary course of business.<sup>3</sup> Explicit provisions of an act making important additions to pre-existing naturalization laws were enforced notwithstanding the title was "An act for the regulation of seamen on board the public and private vessels of the United States."<sup>4</sup> Where the punctuation in the body of the act conforms to the intent otherwise disclosed therein a different punctuation of corresponding language in the title is of no consequence.<sup>5</sup> Nor is the use of the singular number in a title persuasive against application of the plural to the same subject-matter in accordance with the words of the act.<sup>6</sup>

49. Preamble.—The preamble usually contains the motives and inducements to the making of the act, and resort to the preamble may therefore be useful in ascertaining the causes which led to the passage of the act or the mischiefs intended to be remedied by it.<sup>7</sup> "The preamble in the act may be resorted to, to aid in the construction of the enacting clause, when operation of any plain provision of the body of the act." Per Deady, J., in Hahn v. Salmon, 20 Fed. 809. See also Postmaster-Gen. v. Early, 12 Wheat. 148, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 577.

In The New York, (C. C. A.) 108 Fed. 109, Lurton, C. J., enunciated and applied the rule that "the title of an act cannot be used to extend the provisions of an act so as to include within its scope that which without such aid would plainly not be included."

"The title is no part of a statute, and cannot be used to set at naught its obvious meaning." Patterson v. The Eudora, 190 U. S. 169, 23 S. Ct. 821, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 1002.

Preamble to corporation charter.—In The Binghamton Bridge, 3 Wall. 51, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 137, where it was held that certain provisions in the charter of a toll-bridge company constituted a contract by the state not to authorize the erection of a competing bridge, the court quoted the preamble to the charter in order to show that the legislature thought the enterprise did not promise present remuneration, and that large powers and exclusive privileges must be given to get the stock taken and the bridge built.

"In the legislative practice of Parliament all private bills are prefaced by a preamble in which the petitioner is required to set forth the nature of his claim, and the preamble restrains the construction of the act, and aids in the interpretation of its terms. In this country no such legislative practice exists." Per Nott, J., in Braden's Case, 16 Ct. Cl. 404.

any ambiguity exists,"<sup>8</sup> and it is especially helpful when the ambiguity "is not simply that arising from the meaning of particular words, but such as may arise in respect to the general scope and meaning of a statute."<sup>9</sup> But it cannot enlarge or confer powers,<sup>10</sup> nor control the words of the act unless they are doubtful or ambiguous.<sup>11</sup> Hence the necessity of resorting to it in order to ascertain the true intent and meaning of the legislature is fatal to any claim which by ordinary rules of interpretation can be sustained only by clear and unambiguous language.<sup>12</sup>

50. Punctuation.—It is commonly stated that "punctuation is no part of the statute,"<sup>13</sup> and that "for the purpose of arriving at the true meaning of a statute courts read with such stops as are manifestly required."<sup>14</sup> "In the construction of laws," said Mr. Justice Baldwin, "punctuation is no criterion of the sense of the legislature, unless it is in conformity with their intention as expressed in the words they use. Punctuation is generally the act of the clerk or printer, which the court will disregard, if taking the instrument by its four corners and looking at all its provisions a judicial construction points to an intention different

No. 3,209, where the court said the true office of a preamble "is to expound powers conferred, not substantially to create them. A preamble is not only not essential, and is often omitted, but it is strictly speaking, without force in a legislative sense, being but a guide to and not the intent of the statute. And to what is it properly a guide? To the meaning of the enactment? No, but the intentions of the framer, which is only the first stage on the road in the construction of statutes."

from what the mere punctuation indicates."<sup>15</sup> Questions of punctuation usually cause no considerable embarrassment, as a satisfactory construction will generally be obtained by applying established canons of construction; for example, by reference to earlier acts in pari materia,<sup>16</sup> by giving effect to every word and suffering none to be rejected as superfluous,<sup>17</sup> or by

In Durousseau v. U. S., 6 Cranch 307, 3 U. S. (L. ed.) 232, an action of debt for the penalty of an embargo bond under a statute providing that "in every such suit judgment shall be given against the defendant or defendants, unless proof shall be produced of such relanding, or of loss by sea, or other unavoidable accident," Chief Justice Marshall held that the words "loss by sea or other unavoidable accident" meant loss by sea, or loss by other unavoidable accident. But Johnson and Livingston, JJ., were of opinion that "loss by sea is one excuse; unavoidable accident, whether followed by loss or not, is another." The case went off on another point.

16. In Gwathmay v. Clisby, 31 Fed. 220, the punctuation concededly favored the view that bills of exchange and promissory notes were both governed by the restrictive terms in the following section of the Alabama Revised Statutes: "Bills of exchange and promissory notes, payable in money at a bank or private banking-house, or a certain place of payment therein designated, are governed by the commercial law." But the court held that bills of exchange were not qualified by the words "payable in money at a bank," because the original act, to which a resort was justified, and which was eventually reproduced in the section above quoted, read as follows: "The remedy on bills of exchange, foreign and inland, and on promissory notes payable in bank, shall be governed," etc.

In Hammock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 105 U. S. 77, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1111, it appeared that the Illinois Revised Statutes conferred upon the judges of certain courts "power, in vacation, to hear and determine motions, to dissolve injunctions, stay or quash executions," etc., and it was contended that a judge had power to appoint a receiver in vacation, because the comma after the word "motions" indicated that he was authorized to determine motions of every kind, not simply those relating to matters specially defined. But the contention was overruled by recurring to the original enactment in the session laws, wherein there was no comma after the word "motions."

See, generally, §§ 61-66 as to statutes in pari materia.

17. In U. S. v. Three Railroad Cars, 1 Abb. 196, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,513, an information for forfeiture by reason of an unlawful removal of a custom-house seal from certain cars in course of transportation, the question was raised whether the words "as aforesaid" qualifying and immediately following the word "attached" without any point between could be extended to the word "removed" in a preceding part of the sentence. The court conceded that the punctuation prima facie confined the words "as aforesaid" to the word "attached," but decided in favor of the broader application on the ground that by the other construction some of the words in the sentence would have no effect. See also Lees v. U. S., 150 U. S. 479, 14 S. Ct. 163, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 1150.

In In re Irwine, 1 Pa. L. J. Rep. 82, 1 Pa. L. J. 291, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,086, a bankrupt had applied for a discharge under the Bankruptcy Act of 1841, which contained the following provision: "In case it shall be made to appear to the court, in the course of the proceedings in bankruptcy, that the bankrupt, his application being voluntary, has, subsequent to the first day of January last, or at any other time, in contemplation of the passage of a bankrupt law, by assignments or otherwise, given or secured any preference," etc., "he shall not receive a discharge," etc. Irvine having given a preference "subsequent to the first day of January last," though not "in contemplation of the passage of a bankrupt law," it was held that he was not entitled to a discharge, and that the same meaning should be given to the statute as if it read, as suggested by counsel opposing the discharge, "subsequent to the first day of January last (or at any other time in contemplation of the passage of a bankrupt law)," etc. Mr. Justice Baldwin, writing the opinion, pointed out that the construction for which the bankrupt contended would render the words "subsequent to the first day of January last" utterly useless, since Congress might better have said "has at any time in contemplation," etc., if such had been its intention; and that the ordinary rule of construction requires that effect shall be given to every word of a statute when no repugnancy will be caused thereby.

See also Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 480, 19 S. Ct. 722, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 1041, where the court suggested the insertion or omission of a comma in order to give full effect to the words of adopting a reading which will make the entire provision harmonious and sensible.<sup>18</sup> But while punctuation is a fallible standard by which to measure the meaning of a statute, it is in case of ambiguity entitled to consideration.<sup>19</sup> "In a criminal case, where much is to be allowed in favor of liberty, it is unsafe to rely on a mere matter of punctuation" for condemnation of the accused.<sup>20</sup> And a court will not repunctuate a penal the statute and avoid an unreasonable construction.

See § 32 as to giving effect to every word.

18. In Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 471, it was held that the definition of Indian country in the following provision in an Act of Congress of 1834 should be read with a comma after the words "not within any state" or that without the insertion of any point there it should be read so as to apply the words "to which the Indian title has not been extinguished" to all the region mentioned in the section: "All that part of the United States west of the Mississippi, and not within the states of Missouri and Louisiana, or the territory of Arkansas, and also that part of the United States, east of the Mississippi river, and not within any state to which the Indian title has not been extinguished," etc. One consideration which influenced the decision was that omission of the comma would imply "that Indians had title to some state then in existence and that there were other states to which their title had been extinguished," and this meaning was "too absurd to be considered."

Substitution of hyphen for comma.—In the schedule of instruments required by an Act of Congress of 1864 to be stamped, the words "memorandum check" were printed with a comma between them. Construing this provision the court said: "There is probably an error in the punctuation of the statute in regard to the item which reads, 'memorandum, check, receipt, or other written or printed evidence of an amount of money to be paid.' It should read 'memorandum-check (with a hyphen between the words), receipt, or other written or printed evidence.' A 'check' was specifically provided for already in the schedule, and it is not to be assumed that Congress would, in the same schedule, make two provisions, differing from each other, for the same subject. A memorandum-check, however, is an instrument well known in the commercial law, which, it might be claimed, did not come under the general term of a check, and which, therefore, had not been specifically provided for. * * * This reading makes the statute harmonious and sensible, providing the bank-checks, drafts, inland bills, promissory notes, memorandum-checks, receipts, and assigning to each its proper position." U. S. v. Isham, 17 Wall. 502, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 728.

20. U. S. v. Voorhees, 9 Fed. 143, a prosecution for violation of U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5209, which provides: "Every president, director, cashier, teller, clerk, or agent of any association, who embezzles, abstracts, or wilfully misapplies any of the moneys, funds, or credits of the association; or who, without authority from the directors, issues or puts in circulation any of the notes of the association; or who, without such authority, issues or puts forth any certificate of deposit, draws any order or bill of exchange, makes any acceptance, assigns any note, bond, draft, bill of exchange, mortgage, judgment, or decree; or who makes any false entry in any book, report, or statement of the association, with intent, in either case, to injure or defraud the association or any other company, body politic or corporate, or any individual person, or to deceive any officer of the association, or any agent appointed to examine the affairs of any such association; and every person who with like intent aids or abets any officer, clerk, or agent in any violation of this section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not less than five years nor more than ten." The indictment charged that the defendant, president of a national bank, did embezzle, abstract, and wilfully misapply certain funds and credits of the bank, but there was no allegation of any intent. It was held that a motion to quash the indictment must be sustained. McKenna, C. J., said: "Congress may provide that acts of this character may be punished without allegation or proof of criminal intent, and if such provision is clear the courts must enforce them; but if the provision is repugnant to the sense of justice, and the offense is made very highly penal, as in this case, courts are disposed to give effect to any fair doubt as to the intention. If it were not for the punctuation, on which the district attorney has laid so much stress, there would be no doubt that the intent mentioned would apply to all the offenses mentioned; but in a criminal case, where much is to be allowed in favor of liberty, it is unsafe statute so as to make it embrace offenses not properly within its scope.<sup>21</sup> On the other hand, even in a criminal case the court would not be likely to adhere strictly to a rule of punctuation where it would nullify a large part of the statute and enable a person guilty of acts carefully described entirely to escape punishment clearly denounced on him.<sup>22</sup> While it is said that inclosing a portion of a sentence in brackets or marks of parenthesis is simply punctuation, there is much difficulty in applying to such a case the ordinary rule that punctuation is of slight importance.<sup>23</sup>

to rely on a mere matter of punctuation. If these offenses were separated only by commas there would be no doubt that the intent with which the section closes would apply to all its divisions. But we think that, as it stands, the fair construction of the act, and the latter part of the section which provides that any one who aids or abets an officer in doing any of the acts with like intent shall be similarly punished, must be to make it necessary to allege and prove the intent as to all. It cannot be supposed that the legislature intended to require more proof against the abettor than was required against the principal; and this part of the statute makes it necessary to construe the preceding part in such a way as to apply the intent to all of the offenses, notwithstanding the punctuation of the sentences."

23. Thus, in In re Schilling, (C. C. A.) 53 Fed. 81, it was unsuccessfully contended that a paragraph in the tariff act of 1890 which read "Chocolate (other than chocolate confectionery, and chocolate commercially known as 'sweetened chocolate') two cents per pound" should be read with the parenthesis ending at the word "confectionery." Circuit Judge Shipman, writing the opinion of the court, said: "As reported to the two houses by the conference committees, and as passed by Congress, the paragraph was in the form in which it is now printed. It was subsequently officially, and, no doubt, truthfully, stated by members of each branch of the committees on conference that the clerks of the two committees, in preparing the report, made a mistake by ending the parenthesis in the wrong place. The error has not been corrected by Congress, although the subject has received its attention. It is truly said that punctuation is no part of a statute, and that, therefore, punctuation can be changed in accordance with the obvious intent of the legislature; and it is also said that the inclosing a portion of a sentence in brackets is simply punctuation. A 'parenthesis' is defined to be 'an explanatory or qualifying clause, sentence, or paragraph inserted in another sentence, or in the course of a longer passage, without being grammatically connected with it.' Cent. Dict. It is used to limit, qualify, or restrict the meaning of the sentence with which it is connected, and it may be designated by the use of commas, or by a dash, or by curved lines or brackets; but the use of curves or of brackets unmistakably shows that the clause thus included was supposed by the author or by the scrivener to limit or restrict a general meaning of the language with which it is connected or to be of importance in explaining the meaning. The curved lines or brackets are, it is true, punctuation, but they are made with forethought, and for the purpose of clearness and definiteness. They designate much more distinctly than by the use of commas the character of the clause which is included. Apart from the declarations of the members of the conference committees upon the floor of Congress, it could hardly be claimed that the intent of the statute plainly required a change in the punctuation. An inference could be drawn from the history of the statute before it reached the committees of conference, but, in view of the manifest limitation by the parenthesis, such an inference would not be controlling. Are, then, the declarations of the members of the committees sufficient to authorize a court to change the manifest meaning of a statute as it passed the legislative body and received the approval of the President, and to construe it in accordance with the intention of the committees? I think that, such a judicial construction of a statute is akin to judicial legislation, which, as Congress has refused to act upon the subject, it is well to avoid."

24. Sullivan v. Robertson, 37 Fed. 779, where the court said that "of course" a tariff act is not to be construed "according to the very strictest rules of grammar." See also Heydenfeldt v. Daney Gold, etc., Min. Co., 93 U. S. 638, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 995.

in order to destroy rights honestly acquired.”<sup>25</sup> The true meaning, if clearly ascertained, must prevail, though contrary to the apparent grammatical construction,<sup>26</sup> and the same rule applies in respect of faulty collocation of words or clauses.<sup>27</sup> There is, however, some presumption that the grammatical reading of a statute gives its correct sense.<sup>28</sup> The lawmaker “is presumed to know the meaning of words and the rules of grammar.”<sup>29</sup> Relative words should ordinarily be referred to the word or clause with which they are grammatically connected,<sup>30</sup> but “this rule is not controlling, and has often been disregarded.”<sup>31</sup> Where the same statute is printed in more than one language, resort may be had to the one version for the purpose of determining the antecedent of a relative used in the other. Thus “it” was held to refer to “company” rather than “railroad” where a statute was printed in both French and English, and “elle” was used for “it” in the French version, the conclusion being logical that since “compagnie” was feminine, “elle” referred thereto rather than to “chemin de fer,” a masculine noun.<sup>32</sup>

Policy; Usage or Custom; Practical Construction

52. Policy; public or governmental.—Where it was contended that the imposition by Congress of penalties for carrying on any business prohibited by state laws, without payment of the license or special tax required by Congress, was contrary to public policy, since it was an attempt to draw revenue by law from taxes on crimes, Chief Justice Chase said: “This court can know nothing of public policy except from the Constitution and the laws, and the due course of administration and decision. It has no legislative powers. It cannot examine questions as expedient or inexpedient, as politic or impolitic. Considerations of that sort must, in general, be addressed to the legislature. Questions of policy determined there are concluded here.”<sup>33</sup>

"What is termed the 'policy of the government' with reference to any particular legislation is generally a very uncertain thing, upon which all sorts of opinions, each varying from the other, may be found by different persons. It is a ground too unstable upon which to rest the judgment of the court in the interpretation of statutes." This was the language of Mr. Justice Field, speaking for the Supreme Court, in the construction of a tariff act, and in response to an argument that the policy of the government was to encourage manufactures by imposing restrictions on goods manufactured in whole or in part abroad, and hence that it was against such policy to impose duties on the raw material.<sup>34</sup>

53. Legislative policy.—Legislative policy clearly deducible from the consistent legislation of Congress is a legitimate factor in determining the meaning of subsequent acts open to construction.<sup>35</sup> Thus, in construing a federal statute as operating prospectively only, the court referred to other acts which strikingly illustrated the policy of Congress to abstain from retroactive enactments on the particular subject.<sup>36</sup> The policy of Congress to encourage immigration of the better and more intelligent classes,<sup>37</sup> to insist upon the right to have the mails carried over subsidized railroads at reasonable charges,<sup>38</sup> to have the legal rights of the United States settled in its own courts,<sup>39</sup> to give the government priority of payment in the distribution of the estates of insolvent debtors, whether individuals or corporations,<sup>40</sup> to give to federal revenue officers the right to remove from state to federal courts cases against them arising out of their official acts,<sup>41</sup> to confine the Supreme Court, in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction over judgments of state courts, to the examination of questions of a federal character,<sup>42</sup> to administer in the federal courts the same rules of property

No. 8,548, where a libellant claimed extra pilotage fees on the ground of an alleged usage of the port, which, however, was not established. The court said: "'Where the words of the act are doubtful,' says Grose, J., in Rex v. Hogg, 1 T. R. 728, 'usage may be called in to explain them.' In that case, which involved the construction of an act of Parliament applicable to the whole kingdom, it was very properly held that, as a universal law could not receive different constructions in different towns, therefore a statute of general application could not be explained by the usage of this or that particular place. And the cases of Rex v. Saltrem, Bott. 3, and Rex v. Harman, cited in Rex v. Hogg, 1 T. R. 724, were cited from the early reports, as showing that it is only by a universal usage, and not by the usage of a particular place, that an act of general application could be expounded. But I should think it entirely consistent with this principle to hold that a statute may be construed by the usage of a particular place or pursuit, when the act has relation to that place or special business. So, had a long uninterrupted practice been shown under the state laws to charge pilotage for every crippled vessel as for a vessel in distress, such practice would be good evidence of the true meaning of the act.

custom or usage is offered as an aid in the construction of a statute and with a view of altering the ordinary meaning of ordinary words or phrases, the evidence concerning the usage ought to show that it was universal in all sections where it prevailed, so as to leave no room for doubt that the usage was known to the lawmaker, and that the statute which it serves to modify was enacted with reference thereto.<sup>60</sup> And an alleged custom which is in fact only a toleration and as such extended by government officials cannot modify the terms of a statute.<sup>61</sup>

55. Practical construction.—The practical construction which has been given to an ambiguous act of Congress by the government or the courts and by individuals for a long time since its enactment has much weight when the question of its construction is brought before a court, especially if a new construction will cause serious mischief.<sup>62</sup> It was held by the Court of Claims, however, that when an administrative officer and a claimant under a statute containing the elements of a contract with the government had given a practical construction to the act, the court could not be influenced by that construction as it might by cases of contracts between individuals. "In cases resting upon statute," said the court, "there is no mutuality of agreement to be sought out. The only will is that of the legislative power."<sup>63</sup> "A contemporaneous construction of a local act by those immediately interested will have no slight weight in turning the scale in favor of that construction which will validate the acts of those who are called upon to execute the statute, and who have induced innocent third persons to part with value on the faith of the validity of their acts."<sup>64</sup> But this rule has no application unless the construction is a doubtful one and the ambiguity which arises from the language is so great as to compel the court to seize upon extraneous circumstances to aid in reaching a conclusion.<sup>65</sup>

Departmental Construction

56. Acts of Congress; statement and force of rule.—It is a well-settled rule “that the contemporaneous construction of a statute by those charged with its execution, especially when it has long prevailed, is entitled to great weight, and should not be disregarded or overturned except for cogent reasons, and unless it be clear that such construction is erroneous.”<sup>66</sup> “When an act of Congress has, by actual decision, or by continued usage and practice, received a construction at the proper department, and that construction has been acted on for a succession of years, it

In one of the first cases on departmental construction Mr. Justice Trimble said that in the construction of a doubtful and ambiguous law the contemporaneous construction of those who were called upon to act under the law and were appointed to carry its provisions into effect "is entitled to very great respect."<sup>68</sup> After the lapse of sixty years Judge Brewer, tracing "the growth of this principle in our law," observed that "from the time Justice Trimble announced it so cautiously in 1827 it has gained strength every time it was again considered by the court. Impelled by the force of its inherent justice, every judge who has taken it up has stated it more strongly than it was stated before."<sup>69</sup> "The

The weight to be given to departmental practice is increased when Congress, in re-enacting the law or another law in pari materia, fails to indicate in any way its disapproval of the settled construction of the department.<sup>72</sup> "The re-enactment by Congress, without change, of a statute, which had previously received long continued executive construction," said Mr. Justice McKenna, "is an adoption by Congress of such construction."<sup>73</sup> The force of a departmental construction is also enhanced where an implied approval of the departmental construction may otherwise be deduced from subsequent legislation<sup>74</sup> or failure to alter the practice by legislation.<sup>75</sup> On the other hand, nothing can be inferred from subsequent legislation where the construction in question was made under such circumstances that Congress could not be presumed to have knowledge of it,<sup>76</sup> nor will the court apply a departmental construction which has been prohibited in subsequent legislation relating to matters of the same nature,<sup>77</sup> and a departmental construction in plain conflict with the statute cannot be adopted upon the extravagant officers, must yield to the positive language of the statute."<sup>82</sup> But ambiguity on the face of a statute "is abundantly established by the fact that courts of eminent learning and ability have arrived at different results in the interpretation of the phraseology, which being so, it opens the field of controversy for the consideration of executive construction and usage."<sup>83</sup>

Departmental construction which has not been uniform is of no force as such<sup>84</sup> and is of value only as showing the interpretation given a statute by competent men having to do with its enforcement.<sup>85</sup> "Merely recent or occasional practice" does not constitute that departmental construction to which weight is given as hereinbefore stated.<sup>86</sup>

Since departmental construction "can only be resorted to in aid of interpretation,"<sup>87</sup> that is, in cases of ambiguity or doubt, it would seem that the question whether a statute has been repealed by implication cannot be resolved in the affirmative by the assistance of departmental construction,<sup>88</sup> and, likewise, that a departmental construction can have no influence in the interpretation of substantive penal enactments in favor of the government.<sup>89</sup>

<sup>90.</sup> In 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 722, Atty.-Gen. Olney, in 1894, discussing the question of the legal force of the rulings of his department, said: "The Act of 1870, section 4, establishing the department of justice, provided that written opinions prepared by a subordinate in the department may be approved by the attorney-general, and that 'such approval so indorsed thereon shall give the opinion the same force and effect as belong to the opinions of the attorney-general.' This provision is embraced in substantially the same language in section 358 of the Revised Statutes. Evidently, therefore, Congress contemplates that the official opinions signed or indorsed in writing by the attorney-general shall have some actual and practical force. Congress's intention cannot be doubted that administrative officers should regard them as law until withdrawn by the attorney-general or overruled by the given greater weight by courts than is conceded to departmental constructions in general.<sup>91</sup>

59. Treaties.—Where the department of state has uniformly given a particular construction to a treaty, such construction, if not repugnant to the letter or obvious intent of the instrument, should receive great weight when the treaty is sought to be practically construed.<sup>92</sup>

60. State or foreign statutes.—The principle that the contemporaneous and uniform construction of an act of Congress by the executive officers who are called upon to administer it is ordinarily adopted by the courts in cases of doubt<sup>93</sup> applies in the construction of state or foreign statutes; in the absence of judicial decisions construing them, a construction by the local executive officers is entitled to the same consideration as would be accorded to a construction of acts of Congress by corresponding officers of the national government.<sup>94</sup> And “when, for a considerable time, a statute

In 9 Op. Atty.-Gen. 36, Attorney-General Black, advising the secretary of the navy, in 1857, said that “the duty of the attorney-general is to advise, not to decide. A thing is not to be considered as done by the head of a department merely because the attorney-general has advised him to do it. You may disregard his opinion if you are sure it is wrong. He aids you in forming a judgment on questions of law; but still the judgment is yours, not his. You are not bound to see with his eyes, but only to use the light which he furnishes, in order to see the better with your own. But though opinions from this office have technically no binding effect, it is generally safer and better to adopt them. Uniformity of decision in the different departments, on similar subjects, is necessary, and cannot be secured otherwise.”

In 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 699, in 1856, Attorney-General Cushing said: “I suppose it must be conceded that an opinion of the attorney-general is not conclusive—that is, it is not compulsory on the President, or even on a head of a department. It is inconvenient, however, to have conflict of opinion between the attorney-general and a head of department; and that inconvenience is placed in the strongest light by the facts of this case, where the affirmative opinion of one attorney-general went disregarded by one secretary, and a negative opinion of another attorney-general by the succeeding secretary. There could be no more flagrant example of confusion of opinion and action. A secretary, undoubtedly, is entitled to have and to act upon his conscientious opinion of a question, even after he has taken the opinion of the attorney-general; but the interest of parties and the credit of the government require decision; and it would seem that any such conflict of opinion between the secretary asking, and the attorney-general giving, official advice should be referred at once to their common superior, the President, in order that the particular question of administration itself may receive the authoritative decision of the executive government.” Similar opinions were expressed by the same attorney-general in 6 Op. Atty.-Gen. 334.

In 5 Op. Atty.-Gen. 97, in 1840, Attorney-General Johnson said: “The duties of the attorney-general are prescribed by the Judiciary Act of 1789, and are ‘to give his advice and opinion upon questions of law when required by the President of the United States, or when requested by the heads of any of the departments, touching any matters that may concern their departments.’ The act does not declare what effect shall be given to such advice and opinion, but it is believed that the practice of the government has invariably been to follow it. This has been done from the great advantage and almost absolute necessity of having uniform rules of decision in all questions of law in analogous cases—a result much more certain under the guidance and decision of a single department, constituted for the very purpose of advising upon all questions, and with supposed special qualifications for such a duty. In my opinion this practice should be considered as law.”

Statutes in Pari Materia

61. Rule stated.—"In the exposition of statutes the established rule is that the intention of the lawmaker is to be deduced from a view of the whole statute, and every material part of the same; and where there are several statutes relating to the same subject, they are all to be taken together, and one part compared with another in the construction of any one of the material provisions, because, in the absence of contradictory or inconsistent provisions, they are supposed to have the same object, and as pertaining to the same system. Resort may be had to every part of a statute, or, where there is more than one in pari materia, to the whole system, for the purpose of collecting the legislative intention, which is the important inquiry in all cases where provisions are ambiguous or inconsistent." <sup>96</sup> Penal statutes are not excluded from the operation of Illustration.—An act of Congress of 1861 exempted from duty "animals of all kinds; birds, singing and other, and land and water fowls," and a later act levied a duty of twenty per cent. "on all horses, mules, cattle, sheep, hogs, and other live animals." It was held that birds were not included in the term "other live animals." The court said it was quite manifest that Congress, in the Act of 1861, "adopting the popular signification of the word 'animals,' applied it to quadrupeds, and placed birds and fowls in a different classification. Congress having, therefore, defined the word in one act, so as to limit its application, how can it be contended that the definition shall be enlarged in the next act on the same subject, when there is no language used indicating an intention to produce such a result? Both acts are in pari materia, and it will be presumed that if the same word be used in both, and a special meaning were given it in the first act, that it was intended it should receive the same interpretation in the later act, in the absence of anything to show a contrary intention." Reiche v. Smythe, 13 Wall. 162, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 566.

Stat., provided that 'any person who * * * has accepted any preference having reasonable cause to believe that the same was made or given by the debtor contrary to any provisions of the act of March 2, 1869, c. 176, * * * shall not prove or revision of laws contains provisions which are substantially reproduced from previous acts of the legislature, and doubts arise from the ambiguity of the language employed, a safe rule by which to ascertain the meaning is to resort to the original sources for the purpose of ascertaining the legislative intent.<sup>11</sup> The application of this rule in the construction of the United States Revised Statutes is discussed in another place;<sup>12</sup> the cases herein cited pertain to state legislation. The title of the original act<sup>13</sup> or its punctuation<sup>14</sup> may be material in construing the provisions in the subsequent compilation. The general rule in the construction of revisions is that the new law should be held to mean what the prior law meant, unless a purpose to change or alter is manifested by clear, unambiguous language.<sup>15</sup> "Upon a revision of statutes a different interpretation is not to be given them without some substantial change of phraseology—some change other than what may have been necessary to abbreviate the form of the law."<sup>16</sup>

63. Subsequent statutes.—In one of the early cases Chief Justice Marshall said that "if in a subsequent clause of the same act provisions are introduced which show the sense in which the legislature employed doubtful phrases previously used, that sense is to be adopted in construing those phrases. Consequently, if a subsequent act on the same subject affords complete demonstration of the legislative sense of its own language, the rule which has been stated, requiring that the subsequent should be incorporated into the foregoing act, is a direction to courts in expounding the debt or claim on account of which the preference is made or given, nor shall he receive any dividend therefrom until he shall first surrender to the assignee all property, money, benefit, or advantage received by him under such preference. The words in italics are omitted from the act of 1898. Was the omission without purpose? The omission of a condition is certainly not the same thing as the expression of a condition. Was it left out in words to be put back by construction? Taken from the certainty given by prior use and prior decisions, and committed to doubt and controversy? There is a presumption against it." The court then laid down the rule stated in the text and proceeded as follows: "This rule we lately applied in Bardes v. Hawarden First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 20 S. Ct. 1000, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1175. In that case, in determining whether the jurisdiction of the Circuit and District courts of the United States was concurrent with the state courts in certain suits at law and equity between the assignee in bankruptcy and the adverse claimant of property of the bankrupt, the statutes of 1841 and 1867 were compared with that of 1898, and from the omission from the latter of certain provisions of the former statutes it was decided that such jurisdiction did not exist. It was said by the court, speaking by Mr. Justice Gray: 'We find it impossible to infer that when Congress, in framing the act of 1898, entirely omitted any similar provision, and substituted the restricted provisions of section 23, it intended that either of those courts should retain the jurisdiction which it had under the obsolete provisions of the earlier acts.'" To the same effect see Meyer v. Herrera, 41 Fed. 67, construing a statute prescribing the jurisdiction of federal courts. U. S. v. Wong You, 223 U. S. 67, 32 S. Ct. 195, 56 U. S. the provisions of the law."<sup>17</sup> The doctrine was reaffirmed by Mr. Justice Wayne, speaking for the Supreme Court: "If it can be gathered from a subsequent statute in pari materia what meaning the legislature attached to the words of a former statute, they will amount to a legislative declaration of its meaning, and will govern the construction of the first statute."<sup>18</sup> Where a right is created by one statute, and a penalty for the infringement is inflicted by a later statute, they are to be considered as one statute.<sup>19</sup> And a remedy provided by one statute may extend to cases arising on the same subject-matter under a subsequent statute.<sup>20</sup> But the construction of statutes is a function which ordinarily belongs to the judiciary alone,<sup>21</sup> and "where Congress has expressly legislated in respect to a given matter, that express legislation must control, in the absence of subsequent legislation equally express, and is not overthrown by any mere inferences or implications to be found in such subsequent legislation."<sup>22</sup>

64. When in pari materia.—Acts are in pari materia when they have a common purpose which they are the means of carrying into effect.<sup>23</sup> The revenue or tariff laws of the United States are regarded as constituting practically one system;<sup>24</sup> all that have not been repealed must be harmonized, if possible, so as to make a consistent whole.<sup>25</sup> "It would be an unsound and unsafe rule of construction which would separate from the tariff revenue system, consisting of numerous and diverse enactments, each new act altering it in any of its details, or prescribing new duties in lieu of existing ones on particular articles. The whole system must be regarded in each alteration and no disturbance allowed of existing rules of general application beyond the clear intention of Congress."<sup>26</sup> The public-land laws are all in pari materia; no particular law should be construed as an insulated act upon its own letter, but as having relation to the general system.<sup>27</sup> The statutes in relation to letters patent for inventions constitute legislation in pari materia.<sup>28</sup> A special act of Congress in favor of a patentee must be considered as engrafted on the general patent law then in force, and must be construed in connection with the latter.<sup>29</sup> The act of Congress of 1888, giving jurisdiction to federal Circuit and District Courts of proceedings instituted by any officer of the government to condemn land for public purposes,<sup>30</sup> and the act of 1890 authorizing the secretary of war to proceed for the condemnation of land for military purposes "in any court having jurisdiction of such proceedings,"<sup>31</sup> are in pari materia, and consequently a federal District Court has jurisdiction of proceedings brought under the act of 1890.<sup>32</sup> An act of 1878, commonly called the Thurman Act, providing for retention by the government of compensation for services performed by certain trans-continental railroad companies,<sup>33</sup> was interpreted by means of provisions in divers earlier acts granting government aid in the construction of those railroads.<sup>34</sup>

Statutes not in pari materia.—Where two statutes have no common purpose,<sup>35</sup> or where the language of two statutes relating to kindred subjects and having similar objects is not alike and the state of facts to which they apply is different,<sup>36</sup> each must be construed according to its own terms. Thus, statutes providing for the admission of separate states are not in pari materia, neither relating to identical subjects nor constituting parts of a homogeneous whole.<sup>37</sup> Two acts have no necessary connection with each other because they happened to be approved on the same day.<sup>38</sup> The Supreme Court held that the Captured and Abandoned Property Act of 1863<sup>39</sup> was not in pari materia with the Confiscation Law of 1862,<sup>40</sup> and that the two acts could not be construed together so as to

The Confiscation Law concerns rebels and their property; was intended as a measure to cripple their resources; and in so far as it claims the right to seize and condemn their property, as a punishment for their crimes, recognizes that certain legal proceedings are necessary to do so. But by the act in question the government yielded its right to seize and condemn the property which it took in the enemy's country if it belonged to a faithful citizen, and substantially said to him: 'We are obliged to take the property of friend and foe alike, which we will sell and deposit the proceeds of in the treasury; and if, at any time within two years after the suppression of the rebellion, you prove satisfactorily that of the property thus taken you owned a part, we will pay you the net amount received from the sale.' The two acts cannot be construed in pari materia. The one is penal, the other remedial; the one claims a right, the other concedes a privilege."

Where a statute authorized municipal aid to a railroad corporation only on the assent of "a majority of the legal voters of a township," the court presumed that all qualified voters who absented themselves from a meeting duly called, assented to the expressed will of a majority of those voting, since "any other rule would be productive of the greatest inconvenience, and ought not to be adopted, unless the legislative will to that effect is clearly expressed."<sup>47</sup> An act of Congress requiring masters of vessels to deposit their ships' papers with the consuls on their "arrival" at a foreign port was construed not to apply where a vessel merely touched at a port, without making an entry or transacting any business; the inconvenience of any other construction of the word "arrival" had great influence with the court.<sup>48</sup> Arguments of inconvenience will prevail against a literal construction of the statute which would be too narrow and technical for practical and business methods that should obtain in the administration of law.<sup>49</sup> But "if the intention of the legislature be expressed

In U. S. v. Wong Sing, 51 Fed. 79, the Chinese Exclusion Act of 1892 was held not to require criminal prosecutions and jury trials in all cases before deportation, but that summary proceedings as under prior acts were still authorized. "These people have, since the date of the first law enacted to restrict their immigration, demanded jury trials," said Judge Hanford, "and now if, by the new law, this government has, in effect, acceded to such demand, they may easily defeat the law by coming, in such numbers as to paralyze the courts." See also In re Wong Fock, 81 Fed. 558, and U. S. v. Chong Sam, 47 Fed. 884.

In Minnick v. Union Ins. Co., 40 Fed. 371, where it was held that the provision for removal of causes from state to federal courts upon affidavit of local prejudice or influence did not authorize a general affidavit without statement of the facts, the court remarked that "if the allegation is not controvertible, it makes it all the more necessary to attend to the argument from inconvenience in allowing such great facility in bringing cases into the federal courts under this clause of the statute. This argument from inconvenience could not prevail against plain language; but when the statute is open to construction, it is of considerable weight. Broom Leg. Max. 184."

In U. S. v. Burr, 159 U. S. 78, 15 S. Ct. 1002, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 82, certain provisions in the Tariff Act of 1894 were held not to operate upon imported goods where the entry thereof was liquidated at the custom house on the day when the act was signed by the President, partly because the act ought not to be construed "so as to turn what was intended to secure a period of time to enable business men to act understandingly under the new law into a source of confusion and mischief to the contrary."

In Central Trust Co. v. Sheffield, etc., Coal, etc., Co., 60 Fed. 9, the court declined to give a retrospective operation to an act regulating sales under orders and decrees, for the reason that certain provisions in the act "would impose a necessity of again applying to the court in the case of every unexecuted decree rendered prior to the passage of the act."

The argument ab inconvenienti had weight in determining the construction in In re Newberry, 97 Fed. 24; Wilson v. Mason, 1 Cranch 101, 2 U. S. (L. ed.) 30.

<sup>49</sup> In People's Sav. Bank, etc., Co. v. Batchelder Egg Case Co., (C. C. A.) 51 Fed. 130, it was held that the Arkansas statute declaring that no provisional remedy shall be issued by the clerk of the County Court in any action before the complaint or petition "is filed in his office" did not render void a writ of attachment issued by the clerk, outside of his office and at the office of an attorney, the writ being duly stamped "filed" by the clerk and duly signed and attested by him with his official seal. "It not infrequently occurs," said Caldwell, C. J., in terms which are sufficiently intelligible to leave no doubt in the mind when the words are taken in their ordinary sense, it would be going a great way to say that a strained interpretation must be put upon them to avoid an inconvenience which ought to have been contemplated in the legislature when the act was passed, and which, in their opinion, was probably overbalanced by the particular advantages it was calculated to produce."<sup>50</sup> "It is better to submit to a temporary inconvenience than to set the laws all afloat by laying down a canon of construction which leaves the plain words and seeks to spell out, or guess at, the supposed intent of the legislature, contrary or supplementary to that which is clearly embodied in the words it has used."<sup>51</sup> "When a statute is clear and imperative, reasoning ab inconvenienti is of no avail. It is the duty of the court to execute it."<sup>52</sup> The argument ab inconvenienti does not address itself to the court with much force where it amounts merely to an assertion that an act "is defective in some of its details, and does not reach all the cases which ought to be provided for."<sup>53</sup> And, of course, considerations of inconvenience are of no importance where they operate equally against each of two opposite constructions.<sup>54</sup>

68. Unreasonableness.—It is one of the primary canons of construction that all statutes should receive a reasonable interpretation, if the meaning of the statute is at all doubtful,<sup>55</sup> and "that certainly is not a reasonable

Examples of unreasonable construction.—In Venice v. Murdock, 92 U. S. 497, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 583, an action upon municipal bonds, their validity being upheld, the court said: "It is very obvious that if the act of the legislature which authorized an issue of bonds in aid of the construction of the railroad, on the written assent of two-thirds of the resident taxpayers of the town, intended that the holder of the bonds should be under obligation to prove by parol evidence that each of the two hundred and fifty-nine names signed to the written assent was a genuine signature of the person who bore the name, the proffered aid to the railroad company was a delusion. No sane person would have bought a bond with such an obligation resting upon him whenever he called for payment of principal or interest. If such was the duty of the holder, it was always his duty. It could not be performed once for all. The bonds retained in the hands of the company would have been no help in the construction of the road. It was only because they could be sold that they were valuable. Only thus could they be applied to the construction. Yet it is not to be doubted that the legislature had in view, and intended to give, substantial aid to the railroad company, if a sufficient number of the taxpayers assented. They must have contemplated that the bonds would be offered for sale; and it is not to be believed that they intended to impose such a clog upon their salableness as would rest upon it if every person proposing to purchase was required to inquire of each one whose name appeared to the assent whether he had in fact signed it."

In U. S. v. Saunders, 22 Wall. 496, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 736, the court said: "It is not reasonable to suppose that Congress intended to single out this particular employee from all the government employees as alone entitled to a double addition of twenty per cent. to his compensation, which he certainly would receive for the year named, if his construction of the act * * * is the correct one."

The building of vessels in the United States for sale to neutrals during war between other nations is a profitable business which Congress cannot be intended to have prohibited unless that intent be manifested by express words or a very plain and necessary implication. Murray v. Schooner Charming Betsy, 2 Cranch 118, 2 U. S. (L. ed.) 208.

"To so construe this statute as to make a mere vendor of materials the agent of his vendee's vendee, with authority to charge the property of the latter with a lien in favor of his vendor, would be extremely unreasonable." *Per Hanford, A. An act of Congress regulating the manner of bidding for supplies for the executive department designated two o'clock P. M. "for the opening of all such proposals in each department." The attorney-general advised that a reasonable construction authorized the opening of bids received after two o'clock, all those received before that time not having been opened when the belated bid arrived. 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 546 (McKenna, 1897).

"It cannot be supposed that Congress intended to limit wages directly by one statute and increase them in a roundabout way by another. It would be disrespectful to Congress for a court to ascribe such childlike vacillation to the national legislature. them involves a forfeiture, the other is to be preferred.<sup>58</sup> It would be unreasonable to construe an act of Congress in such a manner as would enable individuals to hamper the commerce of the country with foreign nations, or embarrass the treaty-making power in its negotiations with foreign governments.<sup>59</sup> "It could not be supposed, without very plain words to show it, that Congress intended to give to the states the power of prescribing the rules of evidence in trials for offenses against the United States, for this construction would in effect place the criminal jurisprudence of one sovereignty under the control of another."<sup>60</sup> Where a state statute prohibited corporations from doing business therein except upon condition of filing a certificate designating their principal place of business, etc., "to require such a certificate as a prerequisite to the doing of a single act of business when there was no purpose to do any other business or have a place of business in the state would be unreasonable and incongruous."<sup>61</sup> "A statute of the United States should not be so interpreted as to require the aid of the officers of a state for its administration, unless its language is plain that state officers were intended to be employed in administering it."<sup>62</sup> It would be unreasonable to give to an act of Congress, considered as a revenue measure, a construction which would defeat the right of an owner to pay a tax assessed on his land and relieve his lands from the lien thereof.<sup>63</sup> "In order to justify a court in holding that Congress has by an act narrowed the rights of the United States in any particular as to any remedy, that intention ought clearly to appear."<sup>64</sup> A construction of an act of Congress which would indirectly defeat the policy of a state in respect of divorce regulations will not be adopted if any other construction can be discerned.<sup>65</sup> "We cannot impute to Congress," said the Supreme Court in a suit to cancel a patent for an invention, "the intention of narrowing the appellate jurisdiction of this court in a suit brought by the United States as a sovereign in respect of alleged miscarriage in the exercise of one of its functions as such, deeply concerning the public interests."<sup>66</sup> In an act regulating commerce express language must be used in order to justify a conclusion that Congress intended to destroy an existing branch of commerce, of value to common carriers and to consumers within the United States.<sup>67</sup> A statute will not be interpreted to dissimilate the pay of army and navy officers.<sup>68</sup> Reasonable construction of an act of Congress providing for compensation of clerks of Circuit Courts of Appeals would not award to them more than is received by the clerk of the Supreme Court and nearly twice as much as the amount received by clerks of the Circuit Courts.<sup>69</sup> The rule of strict construction of penal statutes "does not exclude the application of common sense to the terms made use of in the act in order to avoid an absurdity which the legislature ought not to be presumed to have intended."<sup>70</sup> If the language employed in a statute necessarily forbids any other construction than one leading to an unreasonable result, it is the duty of the court to adopt and enforce that construction.<sup>71</sup> For example, it is not within the province of the court to decide upon the reasonableness or unreasonableness of a tariff clearly imposed by Congress.<sup>72</sup> And an act of Congress prohibiting further suspension, without thirty days' notice, of payments of pensions theretofore ordered to be suspended necessarily required the pension office to continue payment of a pension to one who had been convicted on his own confession and sentenced for the offense of fraudulently procuring his pension.<sup>73</sup> Unreasonableness of one construction may, of course, be balanced by unreasonableness of an opposite construction.<sup>74</sup>

69. Unequal operation.— Nothing but clear and unmistakable language will warrant a court in a construction which will produce injustice by the unequal operation of the statutes.<sup>75</sup> Tax laws should not be construed as requiring any one to contribute more than his just share of the public burdens in the absence of an express declaration to that effect.<sup>76</sup> And in construing an act of Congress providing for removal to federal courts of separable controversies in suits in state courts, the court avoided a construction which would enable an alien defendant to remove his separate controversy as against a citizen while the citizen would not have the same privilege against him.<sup>77</sup>

70. Mischievous or disastrous results.— "Doubtful words and phrases are to be construed, if possible, so as not to produce mischievous results."<sup>78</sup> A court should be astute in avoiding a construction which may be productive of much litigation and insecurity of a multitude of titles.<sup>79</sup> In one case the Supreme Court declared it impossible to adopt a construction of an act of Congress which would lead to the result that no court of the country, national or state, would have jurisdiction of patent suits involving a less sum or value than five hundred dollars.<sup>80</sup> An act of Congress regulating the jurisdiction of territorial courts was so construed as not to make an unreasonable and unaccountable disruption of the judicial system of the territory.<sup>81</sup> Congress is not presumed to destroy inchoate rights on language which is susceptible of other interpretation.<sup>82</sup> A statute will not be construed to allow unlimited and unrestrained gambling.<sup>83</sup> But when the words are plain and unambiguous, nothing is left for the court but to give them their full effect.<sup>84</sup> Thus, in refusing to limit the plain and ordinary meaning of the Sherman Anti-trust Law of 1890 so as to except from its prohibition a certain agreement relating only to traffic rates entered into by the defendants, competing common carriers by railroad, the Supreme Court said: "It may be that the policy evidenced by the passage of the act itself will, if carried out, result in disaster to the roads and a failure to secure the advantages sought from such legislation. Whether that will be the result or not we do not know and cannot predict. These considerations are, however, not for us. If the act ought to read as contended for by defendants, Congress is the body to amend it, and not this court, by a process of judicial legislation wholly unjustifiable."<sup>85</sup> And when it was urged in the Court of Claims that a construction of an eight-hour law of Congress which the court adopted might operate as a bounty on tardiness and unnecessary delay in the executive departments in Washington, the court replied that "these are evils to be corrected by statutes and regulations; they cannot be prevented by a strained construction of the law."<sup>86</sup> An act directly and positively prohibiting the payment of advance wages to seamen before leaving port was enforced as against a complaint by shipowners that a literal compliance with the act would make it practically impossible to ship crews in our ports.<sup>87</sup>

Absurdity

71. Generally.—If the words of a statute are susceptible of more than one meaning, the absurdity of the result of one construction is a strong argument against its adoption.<sup>88</sup> An ancient and oft-quoted instance of saying: "To impose on the court an obligation to hear and determine a motion, and, at the same time, allow the motion to be filed on a day or at an hour when it would be clearly impossible to hear and determine it within the two years, would be too patent an inconsistency to be imputed to the legislative authority;" Converse v. U. S., 26 Ct. Cl. 10, where the court said: "The literal import of the language of the statute is that although a court be not opened and no judge be present, nevertheless it may proceed to the transaction of judicial business, and that if it does so, the clerk will be entitled to his per diem. to the surgeon who opened the vein of a person that fell down in the street in a fit. Another is a ruling cited by Plowden that the statute of 1 Edward II. which enacted that a prisoner who broke prison should be guilty of felony did not extend to a prisoner who broke out when the prison was on fire, "for he is not to be hanged because he would not stay to be burnt." Those instances were cited in what is perhaps the leading American case exemplifying the rule that "all laws should receive a sensible construction," where in a federal statute punishing any person who "shall knowingly and wilfully obstruct or retard the passage of the mail, or of any driver or carrier, or of any horse or carriage carrying the same," was held inapplicable to an officer who temporarily detained the mail by the arrest of its carrier upon a bench warrant issued by a state court of competent jurisdiction upon an indictment found therein for murder.<sup>89</sup> In another case to which the courts frequently refer, it was held, in construction of the Chinese Restriction Act of 1882, as amended by an act of 1884, that the act did not apply to Chinese merchants already domiciled in the United States who, having left the country for temporary purposes, animo revertendi, sought to re-enter it on their return to their business and their homes, and that a sensible construction of the statute removed such merchants from the predicament of persons who, in the language of the act, "shall be about to come to the United States."<sup>90</sup> Where a statute authorized municipal aid to a railroad company upon the approval of the "inhabitants" of a town and a majority vote at an election, to require a vote of the "inhabitants" in the broadest sense of the word, including all sexes, ages, and conditions, "would be an absurdity," said the court; and the act was construed as requiring the approval of the inhabitants to be indicated by the vote of a majority of the legal voters.<sup>91</sup> In one case "impeachment of legislative wisdom" was something from which the court shrank with horror and declined to "assume that the legislature would be guilty of the monstrous absurdity of requiring the application of the complicated machinery of equitable remedies when a simple remedy at law would suffice."<sup>92</sup> A construction which would deny to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals appellate jurisdiction of judgments of conviction for infamous crimes in the Indian Territory Court of Appeals, but authorize such jurisdiction to be exercised in cases of conviction of crimes not infamous, was avoided because it savored of absurdity.<sup>93</sup> "Any construction which implies that the legis-

72. *Lex non intendit aliquid impossibile.—Lex non intendit aliquid impossibile is a familiar maxim which was applied in several cases construing the provisions of the Chinese Exclusion Act of 1882, and it was held that the requirement of a certificate, as prescribed therein, to be produced by Chinese laborers as a condition to their right to re-enter this country did not apply to certain Chinese laborers whose rights in that behalf were saved by a prior treaty, since it was physically impossible for them to perform such condition, and the avowed intention of Congress was faithfully to execute the treaty. <sup>95</sup> A statute making bills of lading negotiable by indorsement and delivery " in the same manner as bills of exchange and promissory notes " was not regarded as charging the negotiation with all the consequences which usually attend or follow the negotiation of bills and notes. " Some of these consequences," said the court, " would be very strange, if not impossible; such as the liability of indorsers, the duty of demand ad diem, notice of nondelivery by the carrier, etc., or the loss of the owner's property by the fraudulent assignment of a thief. If these were intended, surely the statute would have said something more than merely make them negotiable by indorsement." <sup>96</sup>

73. *Clear intention controlling.—Few cases have arisen where courts have been unable, by employing accepted canons of interpretation, especially by closely scrutinizing the context of the statute, to escape from a construction approximating absurdity. It is, however, an adamant rule of interpretation that the intention of the legislature is to be gathered from the words of the statute; <sup>97</sup> and where the phraseology admits of no doubt, the definitely expressed meaning must be recognized, notwithstanding the statute as thus construed may be deemed irrational legislation. <sup>98</sup> For example, it was held by a bare majority of the United States Supreme Court that under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act of 1898, payments in money made by an insolvent debtor to a creditor, the debtor not intending to give a preference, and the creditor not having reasonable cause to believe a preference was intended, did nevertheless constitute a preference within the meaning of the act and were required to be surrendered as a condition of proving the balance of the debt or other claims of the creditor; although it was vigorously contended on behalf of the creditor that such

(L. ed.) 431, where the authority of the township of Montclair to issue certain bonds was upheld, the court saying: " We should assume that the legislature was aware when the act . . . was passed that a previous statute had expressly excepted Bloomfield township from all of its provisions. When, therefore, they declared that the new township [Montclair] should come under the operation of any act from which Bloomfield had been specially excepted by any proviso thereof, the established canons of statutory construction require us to presume that the legislature understood the full legal effect of such a declaration. The purpose manifestly was to relieve the new township from the disabilities imposed by the bonding act upon the township of Bloomfield as then established." To the same effect see U. S. v. a construction was manifestly absurd.<sup>99</sup> The same court also held that the act of Congress of 1891 creating the Circuit Courts of Appeals conferred no jurisdiction upon the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit over judgments of the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico in capital cases or in cases of infamous crimes, although by construction of the same act it was conceded that such appellate jurisdiction was conferred in cases of minor offenses.<sup>1</sup> The case was one where the court considered that it was "not justified in refusing to follow the plain meaning of the statute by reason of the apparently absurd result caused thereby."<sup>2</sup>

<sup>99</sup> Pirie v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., 182 U. S. 451, 21 S. Ct. 908, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1171, where Mr. Justice McKenna, speaking for the majority of the court, said: "It is but one rule of construction that the consequences of a statute may be considered in construing its meaning. The rule may be counterpoised by other rules; it may be prevailed over by that one which requires the intent of the statute to be looked for in its words. Where they are clear and involve no absurdity, they are its only expositors. It is not contended that the provisions which we are considering are not clearly expressed and adequate to convey a definite meaning. It is true, it is urged that the word 'preference' imports the conscious participation of the creditor and debtor in the same intent. We cannot concur in that view, and we are brought to the consequences of the construction which we have put upon section 60. It is denominated absurd by appellants. What is the test of absurdity? The contradiction of reason, it may be said, and to make an immediate application to legislation, the contradiction of the reason which grows out of the subject-matter of the legislation and the purpose of the legislators. But all legislation is not simple nor its consequences obvious or to be controlled, even if obvious. Whether there should be any legislation at all and its extent and form may be matters of dispute. Its consequences may be viewed with favor or with alarm; some regretted but accepted as inevitable — accepted as the shadow side of the good. In such situation it is for the legislature to determine, and it is very certain that the judiciary should not refuse to execute that determination from its view of some consequence which (to use the thought and nearly the words of Chief Justice Marshall) may have been contemplated and appreciated when the act was passed, and considered as over-balanced by the particular advantages the act was calculated to produce. U. S. v. Fisher, 2 Cranch 389, 2 U. S. (L. ed.) 304. Therefore the sound rule expressed in Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 202, 4 U. S. (L. ed.) 529: 'It would be dangerous in the extreme to infer from extrinsic circumstances that a case for which the words of an instrument expressly provide shall be exempted from its operation. Where words conflict with each other, where the different clauses of an instrument bear upon each other, and would be inconsistent unless the natural and common import of words be varied, construction becomes necessary, and a departure from the obvious meaning of words is justifiable. But if, in any case, the plain meaning of a provision, not contradicted by any other provision in the same instrument, is to be disregarded, because we believe the framers of that instrument could not intend what they say, it must be one in which the absurdity and injustice of applying the provision to the case would be so monstrous that all mankind would, without hesitation, unite in rejecting the application.'" 1. Folsom v. U. S., 160 U. S. 127, 16 S. Ct. 222, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 363, where the court said: "It is said that this involves the absurdity that convictions for minor offenses are reviewable on a second appeal, while convictions for capital and infamous crimes are not. Doubtless in some cases where the language of a statute leads to an absurdity, hardship, or injustice, presumably not intended, a construction may be put upon it modifying the meaning of the words so as to carry out the real intention, but where the intention is plain it is the duty of the court to expound the statute as it stands. As far as Congress went in conferring this right to a second appeal, the intention is clear and the language used unambiguous. The objection really is that Congress should have gone farther and given by this act a second review in this court in cases of convictions of capital and infamous crimes in the territories. It may be that there was an oversight in that particular, but if there were, we certainly cannot supply it."

Hardship or Injustice

74. Language susceptible of interpretation.—When endeavoring to ascertain the intention of the legislature courts are justified, under some circumstances, in giving weight to considerations of injustice or hardship that may arise from a particular construction of a statute.<sup>3</sup> The terms employed by the legislature are not to receive an interpretation which conflicts with acknowledged principles of justice if another sense, consonant with those principles, can be given to them.<sup>4</sup> "It is a universal rule in the exposition of statutes," said Mr. Justice Davis, "that the intent of the law, if it can be clearly ascertained, shall prevail over the letter, and

"We cannot suppose the legislature intended to compel the payment of taxes twice," said the court in McHenry v. Alford, 168 U. S. 672, 18 S. Ct. 242, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 614, where it was held that a state statute providing for the payment by a corporation of all taxes in arrear under a prior act as a condition for the acceptance of the act under construction, implied that such a payment should also be in full for all other claims for taxes assessed for the same years.

A construction of an act of Congress providing compensation for clerks of courts which "results in reducing compensation as labor increases" was avoided in Butler v. U. S., 23 Ct. Cl. 162.

"It is not in matters of doubt to be admitted that the legislature requires duties and services from a public officer, and yet intends to take from him the compensation which it has itself deemed a fit compensation therefor under like circumstances." Per Justice Story, in *U. "A law that would require the citizen to appear in his own proper person to pay the tax on his land, and that denied to his agents and his creditors the right to pay such tax, would be such a departure from the known purpose and object of revenue laws, such an infringement upon the well-established rights of the citizen, and so opposed to the plain and obvious dictates of reason and justice, that nothing but the most irresistible language, affirming the one proposition and expressly excluding the other, would induce a court of justice to suppose a design on the part of the law-making power to effect such objects." Schenck v. Peay, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,451.

this is especially true where the precise words, if construed in their ordinary sense, would lead to manifest injustice." <sup>5</sup> And "where it can be shown that a government has once adopted a certain rule of justice for its conduct, it is fair to infer that in legislating afterwards upon the same subject, it intended to pursue the same rule, unless the contrary shall be clearly expressed." <sup>6</sup> A state statute providing for the levy of a privilege tax upon sleeping-cars run wholly within the state was limited by construction to a single privilege tax for the state, since if each county through which the cars ran were permitted to levy such a tax, according to the construction contended for, it would be "so preposterous, unjust, and oppressive" that the court could not sanction the construction "unless forced to it by a necessity that knows no denial." <sup>7</sup> An act of Congress literally authorizing certain suits to be brought "in any court of the United States," thereby requiring a defendant to leave his home and travel thousands of miles, it may be, to defend the suit, was construed, in view of other statutory provisions, not to confer jurisdiction except on courts of the district of which the defendant was an inhabitant. <sup>8</sup> In the construction of a highly penal statute courts are disposed to give effect to any fair doubt as to the intention to punish an act without allegation or proof of criminal intent, where such a provision would be repugnant to the sense of justice. <sup>9</sup> of the Hudson river at a point sixty miles above New York was held to be embraced in the condemnation of a federal statute prohibiting the discharge of mud "in the tidal waters of the harbor of New York, or its adjacent tributary waters," despite an argument as to the harshness of a statute containing so comprehensive a condemnation of acts the doing of which could, it was urged, work no harm to the harbor. The court said it might well be that Congress was satisfied that the only way to preserve the harbor and waterways was by legislation of a drastic character.<sup>12</sup> And in another case where it was urged in vain that explicit provisions of a statute should be controlled by the apparent injustice of a literal construction the court said: "Different minds may entertain different views of the policy of the same statute and of the equity or hardship of its application to a given case coming within its terms. In the opinion of one judge the hardship which would result from the operation of the law in a certain case might be so great as to lead him to the conclusion that the legislature could not have intended the law to apply to that case; while another judge might hold that a precisely similar case came clearly within the operation of the law, either on account of his failure to recognize any such hardship, or because, recognizing the hardship, he might still be of opinion that the legislature intended the law to be uniform in its operation."<sup>13</sup> If a statute of limitations operates with apparent hardship on a creditor in some cases, courts cannot add to the statute an exception in his favor which the legislature has not seen fit to provide.<sup>14</sup>

Distinction without Difference

76. In general.—When the legislature has clearly laid down a rule for one class of cases, it is not readily to be supposed that in its choice of words and phrases, or in the enactment of various provisions in the same act, it has prescribed a different rule for another class of cases within the same reason as the first; a construction which will avoid such senseless discrimination should be adopted where the meaning of the statute as evidenced by its language is debatable. This is simply the general principle that all statutes should receive a reasonable construction stated in more concrete form, and it is applied with great persuasiveness in very many cases.<sup>15</sup> Courts should strive to avoid imputation of a design to distinguish between occur, merely because they may be thought in some cases to impose a hardship." Per Justice Story, in Pennock v. Dialogue, 2 Pet. 21, 7 U. S. (L. ed.) 327.

In U. S. v. Clark, 46 Fed. 637, where it was held that the federal statute punishing the crime of murder, and not the Oregon statute, was in force in Alaska, the court said: "However harsh it may seem to apply to Alaska, with its large population of uncivilized natives, the law of 1790 making murder under all circumstances a capital crime; however strongly the punishments for crime, such as murder, rape, arson, piracy, and the like, contrast with the more humane punitive legislation of states and territories—it is difficult to see wherein the United States law is locally inapplicable to this district."

"If the true construction" of a statute "has been followed with harsh consequences, it cannot influence the courts in administering the law. The responsibility for the justice or wisdom of legislation rests with Congress, and it is the province of the courts to enforce, not to make, the laws." U. S. v. Detroit First Nat. Bank, 234 U. cases upon "a course of reasoning too unsubstantial and too finely drawn for the regulation of human action."<sup>16</sup> Thus, Chief Justice Marshall found insuperable difficulty in attributing to Congress an intention to confer on the Supreme Court appellate jurisdiction over judgments rendered by a district court sitting as a district court, and over judgments rendered by a circuit court, as it had clearly done, and at the same time to deny such jurisdiction over judgments rendered by a district court exercising circuit court powers, it being demonstrated that Congress made no distinction in the judgments from their nature and character.<sup>17</sup> The court refused to believe that Congress intended to deny to federal revenue officers when sued in state courts for amounts exceeding five hundred dollars the benefit of provisions for removal of such cases to the federal courts, where the right of removal was confessedly accorded to them when sued for less than that sum.<sup>18</sup> And where a fine or forfeiture under a penal statute may be recovered by an action of debt as well as by information, to declare that an information was barred while an action of debt was left without limitation would convict the legislature of unaccountable capriciousness on the subject, not to be presumed.<sup>19</sup> So it was deemed inconceivable that the legislature intended a distinction in a remedial statute whereby an unacknowledged deed or one improperly acknowledged, if recorded the required length of time, should be admissible in evidence by a certified copy of the record, without proof of the execution of the original instrument, while an original deed properly acknowledged and recorded for the same time should not be admissible without proof of its execution.<sup>20</sup>

In the Interstate Commerce Act of 1887, 24 Stat. at L. 379, c. 104, § 22, provided that nothing in the act should apply to "the issuance of mileage, excursion or commutation tickets," thus allowing a carrier to make reduced rates on such tickets. In construing that provision Judge Jackson said: "Section 22 should be regarded as a legislative declaration that not merely mileage and excursion, but passenger tickets generally, based upon the commutation principle of conceding a reasonable deduction from regular local rates in consideration of the frequency or quantity of the traffic, if reasonable and just in their charges, did not come within the evils so to be remedied. To contend that a 'party-rate' ticket to ten or more persons traveling together on a single ticket at reduced rates per mile does not come within the reason or principle of commutation tickets, which are generally issued for only one way, because generally needed for only one direction, while admitting, as counsel for complainant does, that a roundtrip ticket for ten or more persons, traveling together at the same reduced rate, would be considered as coming within the meaning of a commutation ticket as explained by complainant's expert witnesses, is drawing a distinction without any substantial difference. It rests upon no reasoning, involves no public policy or convenience, and is altogether too narrow and refined, to suppose that Congress intended to make any such nice discriminations in the language employed to express, in a general way, what the law was intended not to prevent." *Interstate Commerce Commission v. 77. Criminal case.—The presumption that the lawmaker has not drawn distinctions where there is no rational difference may be applied, but perhaps with caution, in criminal cases. The words "high seas" in an act of Congress providing for the punishment of certain assaults committed on board any vessel "upon the high seas" or "in any river, haven, basin, or bay within the admiralty jurisdiction of the United States and out of the jurisdiction of any particular state" were applied to the open unclosed waters of the Great Lakes between which the Detroit river is a connecting stream. "If they be considered as not thus applying," said Mr. Justice Field, "it is difficult to give any force to the rest of the statute without supposing that Congress intended to provide against violence on board of vessels in navigable rivers, havens, creeks, basins, and bays, without the jurisdiction of any particular state, and intentionally omitted the much more important provision for like violence and disturbance on vessels upon the Great Lakes. All vessels in any navigable river, haven, creek, basin, or bay of the lakes, whether within or without the jurisdiction of any particular state, would sometimes find their way upon the waters of the lakes, and it is not a reasonable inference that Congress intended that the law should apply to offenses only on a limited portion of the route over which the vessels were expected to pass, and that no provision should be made for such offenses over a greater distance on the lakes."<sup>21</sup> On the other hand, an act of Congress punishing any person who should "commit manslaughter on the high seas" was held not to extend to the tidal waters of a river about half a mile wide, and in the interior of a foreign country; and replying to the suggestion of "the extreme improbability that Congress could have intended to make those differences with respect to place which their words import" Chief Justice Marshall said: "We admit that it is extremely improbable. But probability is not a guide which a court, in construing a penal statute, can safely make. We can conceive no reason why other crimes which are not comprehended in this act should not be punished. But Congress has not made them punishable, and this court cannot enlarge the statute."<sup>22</sup>

78. Statute unambiguous.—Where by language perfectly clear the legislature has distinguished between two classes of cases, without any apparent reason, "it is sufficient to say that it has clearly done so."<sup>23</sup> And "it is not for the courts to vindicate the wisdom of laws which it is their duty to administer" by departing from the plain language of the statute and speculating on probabilities of intention.<sup>24</sup> Thus, in construing a tariff act, Chief Justice Marshall said: "Where the legislature distinguishes between different objects, and in imposing a duty on them evidences a will to charge them in different situations, it is not for the court to beat down these distinctions on the allegation that they are capriciously made, and therefore to be disregarded. It is the duty of the court to discover the intention of the legislature, and to respect that intention."<sup>25</sup> Though an act of Congress allowed longevity pay to retired officers of the army, retired officers of the navy could not claim longevity pay under an act omitting them from the class entitled to it. "We are not called on to explain," said the court, "why Congress should apply one rule to the officers of the army and another to the officers of the navy." <sup>26</sup> And in a case where a state statute required all contracts made by cities "of the second class," so called, to be countersigned by the comptroller, while contracts made by cities "of the first class" were so to be countersigned only when made by the board of public works, it was held that an uncountersigned contract of a city of the second class, though not made by its board of public works, was invalid. While confessing its inability to understand why the legislature made the distinction in respect of the necessity of countersigning, "it is not our duty," said the court, "because we cannot perceive the reason, to say that the legislature had no reason." <sup>27</sup> Even a curative act, entitled on general principles to a liberal construction, which validated certain deeds proved "by one or more of the subscribing witnesses thereto, in any court of record, or before any judge of the superior courts of the state," was held not to impart validity to a deed proved only by the acknowledgment of the grantor; although it was conceded that the legislature probably intended otherwise. <sup>28</sup>

Ultra Vires Operation

79. Extraterritorial effect.—However general and comprehensive the phrases used in a statute may be, they should always be restricted in construction to places and persons within the authority and jurisdiction of the legislature. <sup>29</sup> "It is so unusual," said Chief Justice Marshall, "for a legislature to employ itself in framing rules which are to operate only on contracts made without their jurisdiction that courts can never be justified in putting such a construction on their words, if they admit of any other interpretation which is rational and not too much strained;" and accordingly an exception in a state statute of limitations in favor of transactions between parties "which are not residents within this province" was applied to dealings between a nonresident creditor and a resident debtor. <sup>30</sup> General words used in the patent laws are not construed to extend the edgment of the grantor. In most cases, if not in all, proof of acknowledgment would be deemed more satisfactory than by witnesses; but the legislature having made a distinction between the cases, whether it was intentional or not, reasonable or unreasonable, the court are bound by the clearly expressed language of the act."

<sup>30</sup>. Bond v. Jay, 7 Cranch 350, 3 U. S. (L. ed.) 367, where the court said: "The words 'which are not residents' refer, it is said, to both parties, plaintiff and defendant. They comprehend all the persons previously enumerated. Let this be conceded. Then read the exception as if the patentee's right of property and exclusive use beyond the limits of the United States.<sup>31</sup> An act of Congress forbidding advances of wages to seamen is not applicable to the shipment of seamen in foreign ports.<sup>32</sup> The act of Congress which subjected to the operation of state laws original packages of intoxicating liquors transported into the state<sup>33</sup> was limited by construction to such goods as had been delivered to the consignee, since a contrary construction would give to the laws of the state extraterritorial operation.<sup>34</sup> And a state statute imposing personal liability on directors of a corporation who fail to perform certain acts must be presumed to require the acts to be done within the state, unless it is otherwise clearly provided.<sup>35</sup>

80. Unconstitutionality.—"No canon of construction is better established or more universally observed than this, that if a statute will bear two constructions, one within and the other beyond the constitutional power of the lawmaking body, the courts should adopt that which is consistent with the Constitution, because it is to be presumed that the legislature intended to act within the scope of its authority."<sup>36</sup> Accordingly a state statute must be interpreted so as, if possible, to make it consistent with the state and federal constitutions and with valid acts of Congress.<sup>37</sup> The principle has more than ordinary influence in cases where the federal courts are asked to overthrow revenue laws of a state.<sup>38</sup> And a state statute may be presumed to have been enacted in view of prior decisions of the United States Supreme Court prescribing constitutional limits for legislation on the precise subject of the statute.<sup>39</sup> Mr. Justice Story, speaking for the Supreme Court in an early case, said that if an act of Congress "admits of two interpretations, one of which brings it within and the other word 'both' or 'all' were inserted, yet it will bear the same construction without as with either of those words, and the subject-matter of the law so clearly requires this interpretation that the court think it may be made."

presses it beyond the constitutional authority of Congress, it will become our duty to adopt the former construction, because a presumption never ought to be indulged that Congress meant to exercise or usurp any unconstitutional authority, unless that conclusion is forced upon the court by language altogether unambiguous."<sup>40</sup> Especially should this rule be observed in the interpretation of a penal statute enacted by Congress relating to offenses upon the border line of the national jurisdiction.<sup>41</sup> But where the language of a statute is plain and unambiguous, courts are not at liberty to look outside of it for some specious meaning or import that may impart validity to it when assailed for palpable violation of the Constitution.<sup>42</sup>

Imputation of Bad Faith to State or United States

81. Generally; violation of international law.—A state statute or an act of Congress will, if possible, be construed so as not to convict the state or the United States of a breach of good faith.<sup>43</sup> In construing the act of Congress of 1800, providing for suspension of intercourse between the United States and France, Chief Justice Marshall said that "an act of Congress ought never to be construed to violate the law of nations, if any other possible construction remains, and consequently can never be con-

"It is but a decent respect to the wisdom, the integrity, and the patriotism of the legislative body, by which any law is passed, to presume in favor of its validity, until its violation of the Constitution is proven beyond all reasonable doubt. This has always been the language of this court, when that subject has called for its decision; and I know that it expresses the honest sentiments of each and every member of this bench." Per Justice Washington in Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 270, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 606.

Explaining this maxim, Mr. Justice White in U. S. v. Delaware, etc., Co., 213 U. S. 366, 29 S. Ct. 527, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 836, said: "Unless this rule be considered as meaning that our duty is to first decide that a statute is unconstitutional and then proceed to hold that such ruling was unnecessary because the statute is susceptible of a meaning, which causes it not to be repugnant to the Constitution, the rule plainly must mean that where a statute is susceptible of two constructions, by one of which grave and doubtful constitutional questions arise and by the other of which such questions are avoided, our duty is to adopt the latter."

strued to violate neutral rights or to affect neutral commerce further than is warranted by the law of nations as understood in this country."<sup>44</sup>

82. Violation of treaty.—Before the court will impute to Congress an intention to violate the provisions of a treaty with a foreign power,<sup>45</sup> or with an Indian tribe,<sup>46</sup> that intention must be clearly and unequivocally manifested, and the language of the law which is supposed to constitute the violation must admit of no other reasonable construction.<sup>47</sup> This rule operates with special force where a conflict would lead to the abrogation of a stipulation in a treaty making a valuable cession to the United States<sup>48</sup> or where the alleged violation of a treaty is found in an act of Congress declared in its title to be an act to execute certain stipulations in that treaty.<sup>49</sup> Stipulations and obligations in treaties will not be deemed annulled by acts of mere general legislation which can reasonably be construed otherwise.<sup>50</sup> However, if the statute is clear and unambiguous, the prior treaty must yield to the extent of any repugnancy between them.<sup>51</sup> But in such a case the statute should, if possible, be so construed as to produce the least possible conflict.<sup>52</sup>

Congress making United States notes a legal tender for "debts" was construed not to include taxes imposed by a state, as these were not "debts" within the ordinary sense of the word.<sup>59</sup> The term "corporation" does not include stockholders, and a statute imposing a liability upon the corporation does not thereby impose the same upon the stockholders.<sup>60</sup> Where one section of an act of Congress provided that "this section shall not apply to" certain matters, the court found no reason to suppose that Congress intended that any part of that section should so apply.<sup>61</sup> But there are innumerable instances, cited in other parts of this article, where the meaning of words in a statute has been enlarged or restricted and qualified to carry out the intention of the legislature.<sup>62</sup>

84. Words of more than one meaning.—It sometimes happens that a word has more than one natural and ordinary meaning, in which case the court must ascertain from the context, or from acts in pari materia, or by the application of some rule of construction, which meaning the word was intended to convey.<sup>63</sup> Thus, when it appears that the word "street" is uniformly prefixed to the word "railway" or "railroads" in acts intended to apply to street railroads, there is a strong inference that other acts passed at the same session using the word "railroad" are intended to apply only to the railroads of commerce.<sup>64</sup> Reference to the context of a statute has determined the meaning of the word "domestic," as used in the statute, to be "local" rather than "household."<sup>65</sup>

85. Words of technical or other special meaning.—Technical words or phrases in a statute are presumed to be used in a technical sense.<sup>66</sup> In legislating upon the subject of "depositions" Congress was presumed to use the word in its legal sense as testimony in writing.<sup>67</sup> "Enlistment" was treated as a technical word in an act of Congress relating to army pay, the court holding that a cadet was not an enlisted man.<sup>68</sup> In the absence of anything to the contrary in the context the term "legal representative" in a statute means an executor or administrator.<sup>69</sup> In the acts of Congress forbidding money appropriated for contingent, incidental, or miscellaneous purposes to be used for official or clerical compensation<sup>70</sup> the adjectives "contingent," "incidental," and "miscellaneous" have a technical and well understood meaning; and where a specific appropriation is made for specific objects, such as clerks, messengers, light, or fuel, no disbursement can be made therefor from the appropriation for "miscellaneous expenses."<sup>71</sup> The words "contingent expenses" as used in appropriation acts mean such incidental, casual expenses as are necessary or at least appropriate and convenient for the performance of the duties required by law of the department or the office for which the appropriation is made.<sup>72</sup> But the presumption that technical words have a technical meaning must yield to a contrary intention indicated by the context or otherwise.<sup>73</sup> Thus an act of Congress exempting from taxation the "right of way" of a railroad, in view of the context, was construed to exempt not merely the right of passage, but all structures erected on the land.<sup>74</sup> And the words "null and void" in a statute declaring bonds sold in violation of the statute to be null and void were interpreted in the sense of "voidable" in view of the objects of the statute.<sup>75</sup> In construing an act of Congress conferring on the Court of Claims jurisdiction of claims against the District of Columbia consisting of "sewer certificates," it became a question whether a certain class of securities was included in that term, and Chief Justice Richardson said: "The court cannot avoid taking judicial notice of passing events of great public interest and widespread notoriety, well known and familiar alike to suitors, counsel, and judges, and of the commonly understood meaning of words and phrases specially applied to particular subjects and things in the community and among business people, when such words and phrases are introduced into states legislating upon those subjects;" and he ascertained the meaning of the words "sewer certificates" by referring to congressional investigations reported and commented upon in the public press, discussions in Congress, and sundry acts of Congress following thereon.<sup>76</sup>

86. Similar expressions in same statute; inferior and superior words; terms defined in statute.—It is a well settled general rule that if the same words occur in different parts of a statute they must be taken to have been everywhere used in the same sense when applied to the same subject-matter.<sup>77</sup> "Where a term is used and defined in the opening part of a statute," said Mr. Justice Brewer, "the use of that term thereafter in the statute is with the same meaning and the same definition."<sup>78</sup> But words and phrases may be used with different significations and with different shades of meaning in different connections. In such cases, for example in the United States Revised Statutes, similar words are not to be interpreted invariably as expressing precisely the same idea.<sup>79</sup> It is a general rule of construction that in legislative enumeration the inferior does not include the superior. Federal cases applying that precise rule are extremely rare. One, however, has been fully noticed in a preceding part of this article.<sup>80</sup> The legislature may properly define the meaning of terms used by it in a statute, and where this has been done, the definitions prescribed are binding for the purposes of that statute.<sup>81</sup>

87. "Or" construed as "and" and vice versa.—The word "or" in a statute should be taken conjunctively where, as was said in one case, the court "cannot help seeing" that the obvious intent was to use it in that sense;<sup>82</sup> or where, for example, the word "or" must be a clerical error for the word "and" by reason of utter absurdity if the literal import of the language be adopted.<sup>83</sup> But "the intention of Congress must be very clearly contrary to the language of the act to authorize so important a change in the signification of the words employed."<sup>84</sup>

"It is right to interpret the word 'and' with a disjunctive meaning when such meaning entirely coincides with the rest of the statute and with the evident intention of the legislature. If there is evidence that a disjunctive meaning does not harmonize with the whole statute, and does not represent the intention of the legislature, then such meaning is not admissible."<sup>85</sup> Where a statute made a sheriff liable to an execution creditor if he should wilfully "and" negligently suffer the escape of a prisoner in custody on an execution, the court substituted "or" for "and," as an obviously necessary construction.<sup>86</sup> A clause in a tariff act imposing a duty on "printing paper suitable for books and newspapers" was construed to impose the duty on printing paper suitable either for books or newspapers.<sup>87</sup> "Undoubtedly 'and' is not always to be taken conjunctively. It is sometimes read as if it were 'or' and taken disjunctively and distributively, but this is only done where that reading is necessary to give effect to the intention of the legislature, as plainly expressed in other parts of the act, or deducible therefrom. In a case of doubtful construction 'and' would probably be used disjunctively, to prevent the imposition of fines and penalties, but it would not be so used for the purpose of imposing them;<sup>88</sup> and so in a doubtful case it will not be used disjunctively for the purpose of imposing a tax or charge upon the citizen."<sup>89</sup>

88. Interpretation declared by statute.—The first five sections of the United States Revised Statutes extend the meaning of various words and phrases for the purposes of construction.<sup>90</sup>

89. Terms judicially construed.—Where the terms used in a statute have acquired a settled meaning through judicial interpretation, and the same terms are used in a subsequent statute upon the same subject, they are to be understood in the same sense, unless by qualifying or explanatory additions the contrary intention of the legislature is made clear.<sup>91</sup> "Such a construction in the supposed case becomes a part of the law, as it is presumed that the legislature, in passing the latter law, knew what the judicial construction was which had been given to the words of the prior enactment."<sup>92</sup> A federal statute enacted in 1862 and providing that "the laws of the state in which the court shall be held shall be the rules of decision as to the competency of witnesses in trials at common law, in equity, and in admiralty,"<sup>93</sup> was declared inapplicable to criminal trials, since the words "trials at common law" in a section of the Judiciary Act of 1789 relating to the same subject<sup>94</sup> had, by judicial construction, been limited to civil cases.<sup>95</sup> Ordinarily, a question of federal law cannot be regarded as settled until it has been determined by the Supreme Court,<sup>96</sup> and almost invariably the decisions of that tribunal alone are those which have been treated as incorporated by construction into subsequent statutes.<sup>97</sup>

Thus a construction given by one inferior court but doubted by another and by the attorney-general is not to be regarded as incorporated into an act.<sup>98</sup> The doctrine was applied, however, to provisions affecting the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims which had been re-enacted after that court had construed them in several cases, the Supreme Court construing the later enactment likewise, although other decisions of the Court of Claims had, in the meanwhile, given the original act a contrary construction; these later decisions not having been reported, it seems, at the time of the re-enactment, and being unknown to Congress, or probably not as well known as the earlier.<sup>99</sup> A judicial determination of the meaning of an expression in a statute is, however, overruled by a subsequent statutory construction of that expression both as to the original statutes and as to later acts dealing with the same subject.<sup>1</sup> In another part of this article it has been shown that departmental constructions of acts of Congress resemble judicial constructions in this behalf.<sup>2</sup>

90. Where any particular word is obscure or of doubtful meaning, taken by itself, its obscurity or doubt may be removed by reference to associated words. And the meaning of a term may be enlarged or restrained by reference to the object of the whole clause in which it is used."<sup>3</sup> In the section of the Bankruptcy Act of 1867 which set forth the classes of debts exempt from the operation of a discharge, debts created by "fraud" were associated directly with debts created by "embezzlement," and this association was held to justify, if not imperatively to require, the conclusion that the "fraud" referred to in that section meant positive fraud, or fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong as does embezzlement, and not implied fraud or fraud in law, which may exist without the imputation of bad faith or immorality.<sup>4</sup> The association of "mistake" and "accident" in a statute furnishes strong ground to presume that the legislature had in mind mistakes of fact, not mistakes in the construction of a law.<sup>5</sup> Under a mechanics' lien statute providing that "every contractor, subcontractor, architect, builder, or person having charge," etc., shall be the agent of the owner for certain purposes, a subcontractor, to be an agent of the owner, must be one "having charge," etc.<sup>6</sup> The rule of noscitur a sociis is frequently applied in the construction of revenue laws.<sup>7</sup>

"Words which standing alone might have a wide and comprehensive import will, when joined with those defining specific acts, be interpreted in their narrower sense and understood to refer to things of the same nature as those described in the associated list, enumeration or class." U. S. v. Salen, 235 U. S. 237, 35 S. Ct. 51, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 210.

or public purposes.<sup>11</sup> In a state statute subjecting to taxation "all real estate, to wit," enumerating various kinds of private property under the videlicet, "and all other real estate not exempt by law," the quoted clause was held to mean only real estate ejusdem generis of that specified, and did not include real estate belonging to the United States.<sup>12</sup> Birds were held not to be included in an act of Congress levying a duty upon imported "horses, mules, cattle, sheep, hogs, and other live animals."<sup>13</sup> In construing a federal statute forbidding confinement of animals by interstate carriers for more than a specified number of consecutive hours unless prevented from unloading them "by storm or other accidental cause," the court observed that "a storm is unavoidable in the sense that it cannot be prevented," and the expression "other accidental causes" was taken to mean other unavoidable accidental causes.<sup>14</sup> The word "other" also marks the words preceding it as of common quality with those following it.<sup>15</sup> Thus, the expression "John and James and other men" is one in which by a necessary implication it is asserted that John and James are men.<sup>16</sup> While the maxim ejusdem generis "is usually applied to instances where the general words follow several of a limited or restricted character, yet it is applicable where but one of the species is mentioned."<sup>17</sup>

But ejusdem generis "is only a rule of construction to aid us in arriving at the real legislative intent. It is not a cast-iron rule, it does not override all other rules of construction, and it is never applied to defeat the real purpose of the statute, as that purpose may be gathered from the whole instrument."<sup>18</sup>

"Counsel for defendant invokes the rule of ejusdem generis, and says that the words 'any other person' are confined by the earlier specifications of the section to those who are engaged in the carriage of the liquors either as principal or employee. The rule invoked is not much in favor at the present time. Stroud's Judicial Dictionary, after a full review of the English authorities on the subject, says: 'It may be doubted whether the rule is of much practical value at the present day.' " U. S. v. be taken distributively, reddenda singula singulis.<sup>19</sup> Thus, an act of Congress provided that all fines, penalties, and forfeitures accruing under the laws of the states of Maryland and Virginia which by adoption had become laws of the District of Columbia should be recovered with costs, by indictment or information in the name of the United States, or by action of debt in the name of the United States and of the informer. It was held that the act must be construed reddenda singula singulis; that is, where the mode of prosecution under the state laws was by indictment or information in the name of the commonwealth, it would in future be by indictment or information in the name of the United States; and where by the state laws the mode of prosecution was an action qui tam, or an action of debt in the name of the informer, it should, in future, be an action qui tam in the name of the United States and of the informer, or an action of debt in the name of the informer alone.<sup>20</sup>

93. Expressio unius est exclusio alterius.—It is a general principle of interpretation that the mention of one thing implies the exclusion of another thing.<sup>21</sup> "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius," said Mr. Justice Baldwin, "is a universal maxim in the construction of statutes."<sup>22</sup> According to this rule of interpretation the enumeration of the objects to which money specified in an appropriation act of Congress is to be applied manifests a purpose to exclude all other objects.<sup>23</sup> Where an act makes substantive provisions and then expressly repeals specified acts, the rule expressio unius, etc., strongly repels any presumption that acts not specified are impliedly repealed.<sup>24</sup> Enumeration in a charter of incorporation of the purposes for which the corporation may acquire title to real estate is necessarily exclusive of all other purposes.<sup>25</sup> Acts of Congress conferring appellate jurisdiction on the Supreme Court operate as a negation or exception of such jurisdiction in other cases.<sup>26</sup> When a statute directs that a thing shall be done in a given manner, it ordinarily excludes all other modes of doing it.<sup>27</sup> Thus, an act providing a mode by which a

VI. CONSTRUCTION OF PARTICULAR CLASSES OF STATUTES

Remedial and Declaratory Statutes; Indian Legislation

94. Remedial.—A remedial statute must be construed liberally so as to afford all the relief within the power of the court which the language of the act indicates that the legislature intended to grant.<sup>31</sup> The intention in remedial statutes is more liberally inferred and to a greater extent dominates the letter than is admissible in dealing with those which must be strictly construed.<sup>32</sup> It is not unusual to extend the enacting words of a remedial statute beyond their literal import and effect in order to include cases within the same mischief.<sup>33</sup>

Among those statutes which have been declared remedial are statutes exempting property of a debtor from execution,<sup>34</sup> and from seizure in bankruptcy proceedings,<sup>35</sup> laws allowing liens to mechanics<sup>36</sup> and certain purpose, and that entries shall be made therein in a certain way, it seems obvious that it is unlawful to make entries in such record in any manner other than has been prescribed."

In Wetmore v. Markoe, 196 U. S. 68, 25 S. Ct. 172, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 390, it was held that a judgment for alimony rendered against the bankrupt was not a debt barred the patent laws of Congress,<sup>52</sup> and the copyright laws,<sup>53</sup> the federal statute prohibiting an injunction against any proceeding in a state court,<sup>54</sup> donation land grants made in order to encourage settlement of distant public lands,<sup>55</sup> statutes giving the government priority of payment out of the estates of insolvent debtors,<sup>56</sup> the federal civil rights act,<sup>57</sup> land bounty acts,<sup>58</sup> statutes designed to give to a class of claimants a legal remedy for the enforcement of their claims where none exists available to them,<sup>59</sup> a statute adjusting conflicting land grants,<sup>60</sup> and an act of Congress for the purpose of meeting and obviating hardships resulting from the rejection of claims to lands under supposed or defective grants.<sup>61</sup> The captured and abandoned property act of Congress of 1863<sup>62</sup> was liberally construed to give effect to the beneficent intention of Congress.<sup>63</sup> In the construction of statutes which fix the compensation of public officers, if the words are loose and obscure and admit of two meanings they should be construed in favor of the officer.<sup>64</sup>

95. Declaratory.—"When a statute is merely declarative of the common law, or in affirmance of it, and is in the general terms of the common law, there is no safer rule for its construction than 'to construe it as near to the rule and reason of the common law as may be, and by the course which that observes in other cases.'"<sup>65</sup> Accordingly, where a statute declares an obligation existent at common law and prescribes for the breach thereof severe penalties, that statute should be construed to impose the penalties only for a breach of the duty as it existed at common law though a strict adherence to the language used would warrant the imposition of a broader obligation.<sup>66</sup> Similarly, an act affirming a prior statute by a discharge in bankruptcy, the court saying: "Unless positively required by direct enactment the courts should not presume a design upon the part of Congress in relieving the unfortunate debtor to make the law a means of avoiding enforcement of the obligation, moral and legal, devolved upon the husband to support his wife and to maintain and educate his children."

should not be construed to enlarge or diminish the scope of its provisions. "The true purpose and the designed effect of statutes, declaratory of the common or existing law and preservatory of the rights vested thereunder, is to dispel doubt and to make plain the fact that such laws and rights shall remain undisturbed." <sup>67</sup>

96. Indian legislation.—A statute in the nature of a contract with Indians should never be construed to their prejudice when susceptible of any other interpretation, those people being wards of the nation and wholly dependent on its good faith for protection.<sup>68</sup> Thus, doubtful expressions in such a statute as to the exemption of Indian property from taxation are liberally construed and an exemption is held an incident to the property rather than a personal privilege.<sup>69</sup> But this rule is limited strictly to statutes contractual in nature, and other acts affecting Indians are construed according to generally prevailing canons.<sup>70</sup>

Statutes Derogatory of Common Law and Common Right; Denouncing Forfeitures

97. Derogatory of common law.—"No statute is to be construed as altering the common law, farther than its words import," said Mr. Justice Strong. "It is not to be construed as making any innovation upon the common law which it does not fairly express."<sup>71</sup> Thus, a legislative intention to place bills of lading on the same footing in all respects with bills of exchange ought not to be inferred from words that can be fully satisfied without it,<sup>72</sup> and statutes giving administrators power over realty, being in derogation of common law, must be strictly construed.<sup>73</sup> For the same reason a statute giving married women the right to sue for torts committed against them as fully and freely as if they were unmarried, does not authorize a suit by a married woman against her husband for personal injuries of his infliction.<sup>74</sup> And a statutory right is preferably held cumulative and additional to, rather than exclusive of, an existing common law right if the two are not clearly inconsistent.<sup>75</sup> But where the purpose of the legislature to repeal or modify the common law is clear the statute must be executed according to its terms.<sup>76</sup> And a rule of construction prescribed by the legislature that all statutes including those in derogation of common law be liberally construed is binding on the judiciary.<sup>77</sup>

98. Derogatory of common right.—Statutes in derogation of common right are to be strictly construed and will be given no effect beyond the fair meaning of the words employed.<sup>78</sup> The rule applies to statutes which abridge the power to make contracts.<sup>79</sup> "All legislation interfering with the right of the individual, whether he be a natural person or a corporation, to enter into contracts or to exercise his preferences as to the person with whom he shall do business, should be cautiously construed. It is legislation of a novel character, and should not be extended beyond the plain import

74. Thompson v. Thompson, 218 U. S. 611, 31 S. Ct. 111, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1180. Mr. Justice Day, voicing the opinion of the court in that case, said: "It must be presumed that the legislators who enacted this statute were familiar with the long established policy of the common law, and were not unmindful of the radical changes in the policy of centuries which such legislation as is here suggested would bring about. Conceding it to be within the power of the legislature to make this alteration in the law, if it saw fit to do so, nevertheless such radical and far-reaching changes should only be wrought by language so clear and plain as to be unmistakable evidence of the legislative intention." Mr. Justice Harlan, however, with whom concurred Mr. Justice Hughes and Mr. Justice Holmes, submitted a dissenting opinion wherein among other things this was said: "My brethren feel constrained to say that the present case illustrates the attempt, often made, to effect radical changes in the common law by mere construction. On the contrary, the judgment just rendered will have, as I think, the effect to defeat the clearly expressed will of the legislature by a construction of its words that cannot be reconciled with their ordinary meaning."

"The dogma as to the strict construction of statutes in derogation of the common law only amounts to the recognition of a presumption against an intention to change existing law, and as there is no doubt of that intention here, the extent of the application of the change demands at least no more rigorous construction than would be applied to penal laws. And, as Chief Justice Parker remarked, conceding that statutes in derogation of the common law are to be construed strictly, 'they are also to be construed sensibly, and with a view to the object aimed at by the legislature.'" *Johnson v. of the language used by the lawmakers." <sup>80</sup> The power of eminent domain is an inherent and essential attribute of sovereignty, but it is arbitrary in character, and is subversive of the right of private property wherever it is resorted to. Therefore, before it can be exercised, its delegation must plainly appear, and may not be deduced from ambiguous language by doubtful inference. <sup>81</sup>

99. Denouncing forfeitures.—By the settled doctrine of the United States Supreme Court, "whenever a statute enacts that upon the commission of a certain act specific property used in or connected with that act shall be forfeited, the forfeiture takes effect immediately upon the commission of the act; the right to the property then vests in the United States, although their title is not perfected until judicial condemnation; the forfeiture constitutes a statutory transfer of the right to the United States at the time the offense is committed, and the condemnation, when obtained, relates back to that time and avoids all intermediate sales and alienations, even to purchases in good faith." <sup>82</sup> The rule was early applied under statutes enacting that whenever goods, the importation of which was prohibited, should be imported, they should be forfeited, and that if any ship should leave port without clearance or giving bond as required by law, the ship and the cargo should be forfeited. <sup>83</sup> It has been recognized and acted on in cases of goods imported in fraud of the customs laws, <sup>84</sup> and it has been steadfastly upheld under the internal revenue laws; <sup>85</sup> in one case under an enactment punishing by fine and imprisonment any person removing distilled spirits from the distillery contrary to law, with intent to evade the payment of the tax thereon; <sup>86</sup> and in another case under an enactment that any person fraudulently executing an instrument required by the internal revenue laws should be punished by fine and imprisonment, and the property to which the instrument related should be forfeited. <sup>87</sup> But unless the words of the statute are absolute, the right of property is not divested until the property is condemned. <sup>88</sup> Where by the terms of the act the government may elect to proceed against the property or the person who committed the wrongful act,<sup>89</sup> or the declaration of forfeiture is declared disjunctively of the property or its value,<sup>90</sup> the title does not vest in the government until condemnation of the property. And a statute must be clear and unequivocal which imposes upon a court the duty of declaring a forfeiture of one man's property for the fault of another.<sup>91</sup> Thus, a team and wagon used in the unlawful removal of unstamped barrels of whiskey was not forfeited to the government under the drastic provisions of the revenue laws as against a mortgagee thereof who, by reason of condition broken, had become the legal owner and who was ignorant of the purpose for which it was used.<sup>92</sup>

Statutes Validating Unlawful Acts; Statutes of Limitation; Maritime Lien Acts

100. Validation of unlawful acts.—Where an act of Congress legalized a bridge across a navigable river which theretofore constituted a public nuisance, the effect of the act was to put an end to suits instituted to prevent the maintenance of the bridge, even though judgment in such suits had been rendered against the defendant.<sup>93</sup> Upon the same principle the United States Supreme Court has dismissed appeals where by the repeal of a statute or the occurrence of some other event the court found itself unable to grant any effectual relief to the plaintiff in the suit.<sup>94</sup>

101. Statutes of limitation.—Statutes of limitation, "which are among the most beneficial to be found in our books,"<sup>95</sup> are now regarded favorably in all our courts.<sup>96</sup> Their provisions should not be lightly overturned<sup>97</sup> by any construction not warranted by the natural import of the words.<sup>98</sup> "No creditor has a right to complain of a strict construction," said Mr. Justice Story, "since it is only by his own fault and laches that it can be brought to bear injuriously upon him."<sup>99</sup> Courts uniformly decline to read into statutes of limitation exceptions not named therein.<sup>1</sup> Acts of limitation operate only prospectively unless the contrary clearly appears.<sup>2</sup>

102. Maritime lien acts.— Construing a statute of the state of Maine giving certain artisans and materialmen maritime liens for work done on or material furnished a vessel at its home port, Judge Curtis said: "Privileged liens constituting a jus in re, accompanying the property into the hands of bona fide purchasers, and operating to the prejudice of general creditors, are matters stricti juris, which cannot be extended from one case to another argumentatively, or by analogy or inference. They must be given by the law itself, and the case must be found described in the law."<sup>3</sup> And in numerous other instances the courts have confined such liens strictly within the terms of the statutes creating them.<sup>4</sup>

Penal Statutes

103. Rule of strict construction.— In a leading federal case expounding the rule, which is as old as construction itself, that penal statutes must be construed strictly, Chief Justice Marshall said: "The case must be a strong one, indeed, which would justify a court in departing from the plain meaning of words, especially in a penal act, in search of an intention which the words themselves did not suggest. To determine that a case is within the intention of a statute, its language must authorize us to say so. It would be dangerous, indeed, to carry the principle that a case which is within the reason or mischief of a statute is within its provisions, so far as to punish a crime not enumerated in the statute, because it is of equal atrocity or of kindred character with those which are enumerated. If this principle has ever been recognized in expounding criminal law, it has been in cases of considerable irritation which it would be unsafe to consider as precedents forming a general rule for other cases."<sup>5</sup> Accordingly, it was held that an act of Congress punishing certain offenses committed on the "high seas" could not be extended to an offense committed on the tidal waters of a navigable river in the interior of a foreign country.<sup>6</sup> "There can be no constructive offenses," said Chief Justice Fuller, "and before a man can be punished his case must be plainly and unmistakably within the statute."<sup>7</sup> In the construction of penal statutes "every case must come, not only within its letter, but within its spirit and purpose."<sup>8</sup> "Courts will not give an equitable construction to a penal law, even for the purpose of embracing cases clearly within the mischief intended to be remedied."<sup>9</sup> It has been said that the rule of strict construction "has been much relaxed and given a more liberal application than in days when there were a great many more offenses punishable with death."<sup>10</sup> A penal statute "must be construed with such strictness as to carefully safeguard the rights of the defendant and at the same time preserve the obvious intention of the legislature. 104. Limitations of rule.—The evident intention of the legislature ought not to be defeated by a forced and over-strict construction.<sup>12</sup> "Criminal statutes, like other acts of legislation, are to receive a reasonable construction, with a view to effecting the purpose of their enactment."<sup>13</sup> "Where the words are general," said Mr. Justice Story in one of the leading cases, "and include various classes of persons, I know of no authority which would justify the court in restricting them to one class, or in giving them the narrowest interpretation, where the mischief to be redressed by the statute is equally applicable to all of them. And where a word is used in a statute which has various known significations, I know of no rule that requires the court to adopt one in preference to another, simply because it is more restrained, if the objects of the statute equally apply to the largest and broadest sense of the word."<sup>14</sup> Expressing the same thought, Mr. Justice Swayne said that "the rule of strict construction is not violated by permitting the words of the statute to have their full meaning, or the more extended of two meanings, as the wider popular instead of the more narrow technical one; but the words should be taken in such a sense, bent neither one way nor the other, as will best manifest the legislative intent."<sup>15</sup> And chief Justice Marshall conceded that the rule of strict construction of penal statutes "is not to be so applied as to narrow the words of the statute to the exclusion of cases which those words, in their ordinary acceptation, or in that sense in which the legislature has obviously used them, would comprehend."<sup>16</sup> It was held that sheep were within the meaning of the word "cattle" in an act of Congress punishing any person who should drive "horses, mules, or cattle to range or feed upon" Indian lands.<sup>17</sup> In one case certain words in a penal statute were rejected as surplusage, since by giving them effect the entire act would have been made inoperative and impossible of execution.<sup>18</sup> Judge Deady said that "nothing more is meant" by the rule of strict construction of penal statutes "than that such statutes shall not be extended by what is known as equitable construction to cases other than those which clearly appear to have been intended by the legislature, and are fairly included in the language used to express such intention. The intention, then, of the legislature is as proper a subject of inquiry for the court in the case of a penal statute as any other; and that intention, when ascertained by applying the usual rules of construction, is to govern in the one case as well as the other."<sup>19</sup> "The natural inference, when a statute prescribes two independent penalties, is that it means to inflict them so far as it can, and that if one of them is impossible, it does not

No. 15,744, where Judge Deady said: "The mischief to be prevented or remedied * * * was the depasturing of the Indian lands by the stock of white persons. Sheep are as much within the reason of the enactment as horses or mules. It can hardly be presumed that Congress intended to impose a penalty upon persons for feeding horses upon the Indian range, and at the same time permit them to cover it with sheep with impunity. Although the word cattle in its primary sense includes horses and mules, at this day it is not often so applied in the United States. Therefore, I presume, Congress, out of abundance of caution, particularized that class of animals, and used the word cattle to describe all others included in the term. If the act had read other cattle, there would be some reason for holding that the general phrase was restrained to other cattle of the horse genus or kind, if there be any such. But here the term cattle is not used merely to round a period, or as an expletory embellishment of what precedes it, but as an independent and particular enumeration of a class of subjects in addition to those already named."

18. U. S. v. Stern, 5 Blatchf. 512, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,389, where an act of Congress provided that persons who shall offer a bribe to a public officer "and shall be thereof convicted" shall be liable to indictment, etc., and the quoted words were rejected and a conviction upheld.

But the authorities cited do not fully sanction the broad statement that "the usual rules of construction" invariably govern the interpretation of penal statutes. In U. S. v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 95, 5 U. S. (L. ed.) 37, above cited, Chief Justice Marshall merely said that "the intention of the lawmaker must govern in the construction of penal as well as other statutes," and that penal laws "are not to be construed so strictly as to defeat the obvious intention of the legislature."

In a penal statute the words "this act" are literally construed and cannot be extended to another act in pari materia, which is contrary to the prevailing rule of construction of statutes not penal. See U. S. v. Stocking, 87 Fed. 859; and in other parts of this article it will appear that courts apply ordinary rules of mean on that account to let the defendant escape."<sup>20</sup> That inference should be given effect.

105. Rule of reasonable doubt.—In construing penal statutes the intention of the legislature "must be gathered from the words, and," said Mr. Justice Swayne, "they must be such as to leave no room for reasonable doubt upon the subject."<sup>21</sup> The same rule has been declared in numerous other cases,<sup>22</sup> but questioned in a case in the federal Circuit Court.<sup>23</sup>

106. Meaning of words.—In construing penal statutes the legislative intent "is, in most cases, to be found by giving to the words the meaning in which they are used in ordinary speech."<sup>24</sup> Thus, lager beer is not "spirituous liquors," nor "wine," within the meaning of those terms in construction with some degree of caution where the result may be prejudicial to a person on trial for a crime.

No. 4,499, where Livingston, J., said: "If it be the duty of a jury to acquit where such doubts exist concerning a fact, it is equally incumbent on a judge not to apply the law to a case where he labors under the same uncertainty as to the meaning of the legislature;" U. S. v. Williams, 3 Fed. 491, where Commissioner Allen said: "If there is a fair doubt whether the act charged is embraced within the prohibition of the statute, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of the defendant."

23. U. S. v. Huggett, 40 Fed. 637, where

Judge Hammond said: "The defendants first insist that where there is a reasonable doubt the construction should be in their favor. I am not quite prepared to hold that this rule of reasonable doubt by analogy to the well-known principle which governs a jury in trying the facts should exempt the defendants from that penalty which they have incurred if the statute be against them, for this would be to abrogate by judicial action every dubious or doubtful enactment; and the elasticity of language is such, and the carelessness of legislation is so fruitful of ambiguity in drawing statutes, that it would be a dangerous doctrine to establish by that broad expression of it. Nor do I find that the Supreme Court of the United States has so expressed it in the cases cited for it in U. S. v. Whittier, 5 Dill. 35, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,688; U. S. v. Clayton, 2 Dill. 226, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,814; 12 Myers, Fed. Dec., § 345, and U. S. v. Comerford, 25 Fed. 903. That court has undoubtedly enforced the rule of a strict, though reasonable, construction of penal statutes, confines them within the clearly expressed or necessarily implied meaning of the language used, and refuses to enlarge the words to include other conduct of like, equal, or greater atrocity, simply because it may be within the same mischief to be remedied, when it is not fairly included in the language of the act; but I do not observe that it lays down any rule that a reasonable doubt as to the interpretation of a statute is to be resolved in favor of the accused. * * * Such a formulary of a rule for expounding statutes may be found elsewhere, perhaps, but not in these decisions, I think; and nowhere, it seems to me, can the doctrine mean more than they express."

an act of Congress forbidding their sale to Indians.<sup>25</sup> A statute prohibiting the removal from public lands of certain "trees or other timber" does not embrace articles manufactured from the trees, such as shingles or boards.<sup>26</sup> Under an act of Congress of 1812, making it a misdemeanor to "transport" articles of provision and munitions of war from the United States to Canada, living fat oxen were held to be included in the description of prohibited articles, but driving them on foot was not a "transport" of them in the ordinary sense of that word, and was therefore not an offense.<sup>27</sup> An act of Congress punishing the unlawful transportation of live stock by "any company, owner, or custodian of such animals" does not extend to receivers operating a railroad by appointment and order of court.<sup>28</sup> Where words which have acquired a technical meaning by frequent judicial interpretation are used in a statute they are presumed to be used with that meaning.<sup>29</sup> The literal import of words will be restrained, if necessary, to conform to what it must reasonably be supposed the legislature intended.<sup>30</sup> Thus, in an act of Congress making it the duty of the master of a vessel to deposit his ship's papers with the consul on "arrival at a foreign port," the word "arrival" means an arrival for purposes of business, not the mere touching at a port for advices or to ascertain the state of the market, or an arrival by compulsion of adverse winds, the vessel sailing again as soon as the wind changes.<sup>31</sup> When acts of Congress use words which have a familiar common-law meaning they are supposed to be used with that meaning,<sup>32</sup> and this rule applies to penal statutes.<sup>33</sup> And a statute providing that "there is no common law in any case where the law is declared by the codes" does not prevent courts from referring to the common law in order to determine the meaning of a term used in the codes, when they fail to define it, any more than it prevents courts from looking into the dictionary for the meaning of words.<sup>34</sup> Under an act of Congress punishing offenses committed by "Indians," one whose mother is an Indian and whose father is a negro cannot be convicted, since at common law the rule partus sequitur patrem prevails in determining the status of free persons.<sup>35</sup> But where an act of Congress defining a crime used a common-law name therefor, associated, however, with other words in such a way as clearly to indicate that it was not used in a technical sense, the court gave it a more extended meaning than it had at common law.<sup>36</sup>

107. Intent as implied element of offense.—At common law, and usually in statutory crimes, the intention with which the act is done constitutes an element of the crime; and ordinarily the legislature is supposed to pass penal laws with the understanding that courts will not inflict the penalties for such violations as are unintentional.<sup>37</sup> But a contrary inference may arise where the legislature studiously avoids the use of any terms or words making the intention of the party an ingredient of the offense.<sup>38</sup> for violation of the Alien Contract Labor Act of Congress of 1885,<sup>41</sup> have been held to be penal and subject to the rule of strict construction. A section of a statute may be penal as to some of its provisions and not penal as to others. Thus, "if Congress see fit to impose a penalty on any individual who attempts to enter a homestead without possessing the statutory qualifications, the clause imposing the penalty may require a strict construction in a proceeding against the alleged wrongdoer, but that does not give to the residue of the statute prescribing the qualifications a penal character."<sup>42</sup> Statutes denouncing forfeitures, other than acts constituting a part of the revenue laws,<sup>43</sup> are within the category of penal statutes to be construed strictly.<sup>44</sup>

Grants

109. Generally.—Legislative grants are to be regarded not merely as contracts, but also as laws; and being so regarded, are subject to the rules governing the interpretation of other laws.<sup>45</sup> "And where words are ambiguous," said Mr. Justice Peckham, "legislative grants must be interpreted most strongly against the grantee and for the Government, and are not to be extended by implication in favor of the grantee beyond the natural and obvious meaning of the words employed. Any ambiguity must operate against the grantee and in favor of the public."<sup>46</sup> Thus, "if the terms of an act of Congress, granting public lands, 'admit of different meanings, one of extension and the other of limitation, they must be accepted in a sense favorable to the grantor. And if rights claimed under the government be set up against it, they must be so clearly defined that there can be no question of the purpose of Congress to confer them.'"<sup>47</sup> But since the policy of Congress in making grants for educational purposes has been generous, such grants must be construed so as to further that policy.<sup>48</sup> "Whenever a statute is passed containing a general provision for the disposal of public lands, it is, unless an intent to the contrary is clearly manifest by its terms, to be held inapplicable to lands which for some special public purpose have been in accordance with law taken full possession of by and are in the actual occupation of the Government."<sup>49</sup>

110. Powers and franchises to private and public corporations.—Charters of private corporations duly accepted are in general executed contracts, but the different provisions, unless they are clear, unambiguous, and free of doubt, are subject to construction, and their true intent and meaning must be ascertained by the same rules of interpretation as apply to other legislative grants, the universal rule being that whenever the privileges granted to such a corporation come under revision in the courts the grant is to be strictly construed against the corporation and in favor of the public, and that nothing passes to the corporation but what is granted in clear and explicit terms.<sup>50</sup> "Whatever is not unequivocally granted in such charters is taken to have been withheld, as all such charters and acts extending the privileges of corporate bodies are to be taken most strongly against the corporations."<sup>51</sup> And this rule of construction applies with still greater force to articles of association organizing a corporation under general laws.<sup>52</sup> A power granted to a canal company to charge certain tolls for commodities passing through the canal and for empty vessels, except such as returned empty, gave no power to take toll from passengers, or from a vessel on account of passengers on board.<sup>53</sup> In a statute making specific grants to a corporation, the use of the words "successors or assigns" in a proviso does not give the corporation implied power to transfer all its property and franchises to another corporation.<sup>54</sup> It is an unbending rule that a grant of corporate existence is never implied; in the construction of a statute every presumption is against it.<sup>55</sup> But public grants are not to be so construed as to defeat the intent of the legislature or to withhold what is given either expressly or by necessary and fair implication.<sup>56</sup> When an act operating as a general law, and manifesting clearly the intention of Congress to secure public advantages or to subserve the public interests and welfare by means of benefits more or less valuable, offers to individuals or to corporations inducements to undertake and accomplish great and extensive enterprises or works of a quasi-public character in or through an immense and undeveloped public domain, such legislation stands upon a different footing from a mere private grant, and should receive at the hands of the court a more liberal construction in favor of the purposes for which it was enacted.<sup>57</sup> Accordingly, an act of Congress giving to a railroad company the right to take timber "necessary for the construction of said railroad" from the public lands adjacent to the line of the road is not limited to what is necessary for the construction of such portion of the road as is adjacent to the place from which the timber is taken.<sup>58</sup> Exclusive rights to public franchises are not favored, and can rest only upon express language or the clearest implication.<sup>59</sup> Thus,

But whatever may have been the intent in the minds of the legislators in using these words, it is not precisely the form in which we would expect to find a grant of the power to sell, to lease, or to transfer the title, ownership, or use of railroad lines, the property belonging thereto, and the franchises necessary to carry them on, by one corporation to another. One of the most important powers with which a corporation can be invested is the right to sell out its whole property together with the franchises under which it is operated, or the authority to lease its property for a long term of years. In the case of a railroad company these privileges, next to the right to build and operate its railroad, would be the most important which could be given it, and this idea would impress itself upon the legislature. Naturally, we would look for the authority to do these things in some express provision of law. We would suppose that if the legislature saw fit to confer such rights it would do so in terms which could not be misunderstood. To infer, on the contrary, that it either intended to confer them or to recognize that they already existed, by the simple use of the word 'assigns,' a very loose and indefinite term, is a stretch of the power of the court in making implications which we do not feel to be justified."

the right given to a corporation to establish a bridge and fix its rate of toll does not bind the state or its instrumentalities not to establish another in case of necessity.<sup>60</sup> But where an exclusive privilege is granted in words clear and unambiguous, effect must be given to them according to their ordinary signification.<sup>61</sup> When in the early and declaratory sections of a statute the scope and extent of the powers and privileges granted to a corporation are once stated, the character of the grant as thus disclosed controls and interprets all subsequent sections; and it is unnecessary in each subsequent section to restate or use words and expressions which shall fully disclose the extent of those powers and privileges.<sup>62</sup>

It is a rule of construction of grants to public corporations that only such powers and rights can be exercised under them as are clearly comprehended within the words of the act or derived therefrom by necessary implication, regard being had to the objects of the grant.<sup>63</sup> But the powers granted should not be so strictly construed as to defeat the manifest intention and design of the legislature.<sup>64</sup>

away the public money are to be interpreted strictly against the party to whom it is given."<sup>69</sup>

112. Taxation.—"A tax cannot be imposed without clear and express words for that purpose."<sup>70</sup> This rule is most reasonable since "it is fairly and justly presumable that the legislature, which was unrestrained in its authority over the subject, has so shaped the law as, without ambiguity or doubt, to bring within it everything it was meant should be embraced."<sup>71</sup> But statutes levying taxes "are to receive a reasonable construction with a view to carrying out their purpose and intent."<sup>72</sup> And statutory exemptions from taxation are construed with the utmost strictness.<sup>73</sup>

113. Revenue.—It is well established by decisions of the United States Supreme Court that "statutes to prevent frauds upon the revenue are considered as enacted for the public good and to suppress a public wrong, and therefore, although they impose penalties or forfeitures, are not to be construed, like penal laws generally, strictly in favor of the defendant; but they are to be fairly and reasonably construed, so as to carry out the intention of the legislature."<sup>74</sup> The construction of provisions for forfeitures

<sup>69.</sup> 9 Op. Atty.-Gen. 59, where Attorney-General Black said: "He who claims a payment out of the treasury, and bases that claim upon an act of Congress, must show the payment to be authorized either expressly or by very clear implication. Ambiguous phrases will not serve his turn. When two meanings can be assigned to an act like this, and the arguments in favor of both are nearly balanced, the public is entitled to the benefit of the doubt. Of course, I do not now mean to say that a claim ought to be defeated by straining the sense of the law against it. But if Congress has all the money of the United States under its control, it also has the whole English language to give it away with; and it is so easy to use definite terms in a law like this, that when they are not used we will presume them not to be meant. All legislative grants, whether of money or of privileges, are and ought to be construed strictly against the grantees."

Tariff Acts

114. Rule of construction.—While it is declared that acts imposing duties are not to be construed strictly against the government, like penal laws, but so as most effectually to accomplish the intention of the legislature in passing them,<sup>76</sup> yet as duties are never imposed on the citizen upon vague or doubtful interpretations, the question whether an article is dutiable, if one of doubt, must be resolved in favor of the importer.<sup>77</sup> But the doubt here meant is one of legal interpretation; a mere doubt as to the commercial meaning of a term, the importer seeking a reduction of duty, and the question being submitted to a jury, does not entitle the importer to a verdict in his favor.<sup>78</sup> Moreover, it has been said that the rule which gives the importer the benefit of a doubt is "limited to cases where it relieves from the ordinary signification of such word or phrase, in order that the former prevail over the latter it must appear that the commercial designation is the result of established usage in commerce and trade, and that at the time of the passage of the act that usage was definite, uniform, and general, and not partial, local, or personal.<sup>83</sup> And the word "commercial" in this connection is to be understood in its comprehensive sense of buying, selling, and exchange in the general sales or traffic in our own markets.<sup>84</sup> The commercial designation of an imported article is not a matter of which courts can take judicial notice, but is a fact to be proved by evidence,<sup>85</sup> and the burden is upon the importer to prove the interpretation for which he contends,<sup>86</sup> for a word will always be understood to have the same meaning in commerce that it has in the community at large, unless the contrary is shown.<sup>87</sup> The phrase "of similar description" is not a commercial term, and does not present a case of commercial designation of articles.<sup>88</sup> Where the words in a tariff act are unequivocal, and there is no reference in the statute, either expressly or by implication, to any commercial usage, and no language in it which requires for its interpretation the aid of any extrinsic circumstances, it is not a case for application of a commercial meaning to the terms used.<sup>89</sup>

Thus, in a case where it was unsuccessfully contended that by commercial usage certain shawls were not embraced within the phrase "wearing apparel of every description, of whatever material composed,"

116. Ordinary or scientific meaning.—Where there is no evidence that words have acquired any special meaning in trade or commerce,<sup>90</sup> they must receive their ordinary meaning.<sup>91</sup> Of that meaning the court is bound to take judicial notice, as it does in regard to all words in our own tongue; and upon such a question dictionaries are admitted, not as evidence, but only as aids to the memory and understanding of the court.<sup>92</sup> While the scientific designation of an article may be of value in some cases in fixing a proper classification,<sup>93</sup> it is usually of no importance if it conflicts with the ordinary or commercial meaning of the terms used.<sup>94</sup> It certainly cannot prevail when diametrically opposed both to the popular idea of an article and to its actual use in the arts.<sup>95</sup>

etc., the court said: "The effort has been to substitute for the literal and lexicographical and popular meaning of the phrase 'wearing apparel' some supposed mercantile or commercial signification of these words. * * * In instances in which words or phrases are novel or obscure, as in terms of art, where they are peculiar or exclusive in their signification, it may be proper to explain or elucidate them by reference to the art or science to which they are appropriate; but if language which is familiar to all classes and grades and occupations—language the meaning of which is impressed upon all by the daily habits and necessities of all—may be wrested from its established and popular import in reference to the common concerns of life, there can be little stability or safety in the regulations of society. * * * If therefore the strange concession were admissible that, in the opinion of a portion of the mercantile men, shawls were not considered wearing apparel, it would still remain to be proved that this opinion was sustained by the judgment of the community generally, or that the legislature designed a departure from the natural and popular acceptance of language." Mailard v. Lawrence, 16 How. 261, 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 930.

But compare Hedden v. Richard, 149 U. S. 346, 13 S. Ct. 891, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 763, where Mr. Justice Shiras said: "While a customs law taxing an article which every one in the community might be expected to import, such as 'wearing apparel,' may use words which every one understands, and which, unless taken in the ordinary sense, would mislead the whole community, and cannot, therefore, be supposed to be intended in any other sense, unless there is something to indicate such intention, yet, on the other hand, a tariff law may use language not intended for the community at large, but for merchants, or for a particular trade, and such as to mislead those for whom it is intended if not taken in the commercial or trade sense; and such language is that under consideration, speaking of a manufactured article in various stages of its construction. In such a case, as in the other case, the words are to be taken in the sense in which they will naturally be understood by those to whom they are addressed."

90. "It is only when no commercial meaning is called for or proved that the common meaning of the words is to be adopted." Cadwalader v. Zeh, 151 U. S. 176, 14 S. Ct. 288, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 117. administrative officers of the government under earlier statutes which contained the same words and phrases.<sup>96</sup>

118. "Not otherwise herein provided for"; "manufactures." — The words "not otherwise herein provided for" in an act providing for customs duties mean not otherwise provided for in the act of which they are a part;<sup>97</sup> and the words "not herein otherwise provided for" have the same meaning.<sup>98</sup>

The application of labor to an article, either by hand or by mechanism, does not necessarily make it a "manufactured" article within the meaning of that term as used in the tariff laws.<sup>99</sup> In order to constitute an article a manufacture of another, the labor bestowed upon it must be carried to such an extent as to transform it into an article which has a different character, name, or use from the article that it was in the first place.<sup>1</sup> Thus, hay pressed into bales, ready for market, is not a manufactured article.<sup>2</sup> Round copper plates turned up and raised at the edges from four to five inches by the application of labor, to fit them for subsequent use in the manufacture of copper vessels, but which were still bought by the pound as copper for use in making copper vessels, were held not to be manufactured copper.<sup>3</sup> Marble which had been cut into blocks for convenience of transportation was held not to be manufactured marble, but was free from duty as unmanufactured.<sup>4</sup> But where an article has been advanced through one or more processes into a complete commercial article, known and recognized in trade by a specific and distinctive name other than the name of the material, and is put into a completed shape designed and adapted for a particular use, it is deemed to be a manufacture.<sup>5</sup> India-rubber shoes, made in Brazil by simply allowing the sap of the india-rubber tree to harden upon a mould, were held to be manufactured articles, because they were capable of use in that shape as shoes, and had been put into a new form capable of use and designed to be used in such new form.<sup>6</sup> An article does not lose its character as a manufacture by reason of age or relative unfitness for its normal use; but is classified under that head so long as it remains vendible for the purposes for which it was made.<sup>7</sup>

119. Specific designation.— Where Congress has designated an article by a specific name and imposed a duty upon it, general terms in the same or a subsequent act, though sufficiently broad to comprehend such article, are not applicable to it; in other words, the article will be classified by its specific designation rather than under a general description.<sup>8</sup> The rule is not arbitrary, however; and a classification will be made with respect to a general description rather than a direct reference if that course seems consonant with the legislative intent.<sup>9</sup> The specific designation of an article is not indicative of an intention to classify it exclusively under the section wherein the designation is made when the specific words follow and serve to explain a preceding general description.<sup>10</sup> When articles have been specially dealt with and classified, apart from a larger class which might have included them, and a new statute changes the duty on the larger class and is silent as to the smaller, it is not to be considered as intending to change the duty on the latter.<sup>11</sup> Thus, where almonds had been mentioned in several statutes and classed differently from fruits, an amendment which reduced the duty on all fruits did not apply to almonds.<sup>12</sup> And where birds had been for a long time placed in a separate list from other animals, a duty imposed on horses, mules, cattle, sheep, hogs, and other live animals was held not to include canary birds.<sup>13</sup> So where sheepskins, with the wool on them, had been specially mentioned in several acts, and there separated from hides or skins, they were not held to be included in the general description of hides or skins in a new statute.<sup>14</sup> If an article is reached in some of its aspects by provisions found in separate paragraphs, it is to be controlled by that paragraph which is the more definite in its application.<sup>15</sup> In determining which is the general and

Though an article may be bought and which is the specific, it seems that the court may adopt that provision as the more specific which fixes the rate of duty on an article by the specific use to which that particular article is put.<sup>16</sup>

120. Intent of importer; goods unknown at date of act.—It is a well-settled doctrine that intent is not an element in determining the proper classification of imported articles, and that merchants are at liberty so to manufacture and so to import their goods as to subject them to the lowest possible duties under the tariff laws;<sup>17</sup> they are to be classified according to their actual character and condition when imported into the country, and the use to which they will be ultimately put is not to be considered.<sup>18</sup>

Tariff laws are made for the future, and the fact that at the date of an act imposing duties goods of a certain kind had not been manufactured does not withdraw them from the class to which they belong when the language of the statute clearly and fairly includes them.<sup>19</sup>

Exemptions

121. Contracts of exemption from taxation.—It is competent for a state to make a contract not to exercise the taxing power, or to exercise it only within certain limits with respect to a particular subject, and such a contract once made cannot be rescinded.<sup>20</sup> In the case of a corporation created by a state legislature the exemption, if contained in the act of incorporation, is ordinarily a contract supported upon the consideration of the duties and liabilities which the corporators assume by accepting the charter, and is within the protection of the Federal Constitution.<sup>21</sup> It is not necessary that the charter should contain an express declaration that the exemption given shall not be withdrawn.<sup>22</sup> And when the exemption is made by an amendment of the charter, it is supported upon the consideration of the greater efficiency with which the corporation will thus be enabled to discharge the duties originally assumed by the corporators to the public, or of the greater facility with which it will support its liabilities and carry out the purposes of its creation.<sup>23</sup> A like stipulation in a general corporation law is binding upon the state,<sup>24</sup> unless the subject sold under a particular name, yet it may be described with like articles by one comprehensive term, and such an article, when not referred to with greater particularity, must be classified under the group to which it belongs. Lueders v. U. S., 140 Fed. 970.

matter of the law shows that no contract could have been intended.<sup>25</sup> But a statute providing for exemption from taxation is not construed to be an irrevocable contract, unless the language used be too clear to admit of doubt.<sup>26</sup> "Certainly it is not to be inferred from the imposition of a tax that no additional tax shall be laid."<sup>27</sup> The right to withdraw a charter exemption may be sustained by existing provisions in the constitution or statutes expressly reserving that power,<sup>28</sup> unless, in the case of a statutory provision of the character last mentioned, they are expressly repealed or suspended in connection with the granting of the exemption.<sup>29</sup> A mere spontaneous concession of exemption to a corporation without the imposition of any service or duty or other remunerative condition may be revoked at the pleasure of the state.<sup>30</sup> And a statutory exemption by way of a bounty or other form of mere gratuity may be repealed at any time, if it contains no pledge to the contrary.<sup>31</sup>

122. Construction of exemptions from taxation.—In the leading case on statutory exemptions from taxation, Chief Justice Marshall, speaking of a partial release of the power of taxation by a state in a charter to a corporation, said: "That the taxing power is of vital importance; that it is essential to the existence of government, are truths which it cannot be necessary to reaffirm." "As the whole community is interested in retaining it undiminished, that community has a right to insist that its abandonment ought not to be presumed in a case in which the deliberate purpose of the state to abandon it does not appear." "We must look for the exemption in the language of the instrument; and if we do not find it there, it would be going very far to insert it by construction."<sup>32</sup> In a later case Mr. Justice Lurton declared: "The power of taxation is never to be regarded as surrendered or bargained away if there is room for rational doubt as to the purpose."<sup>33</sup> In the subsequent decisions the same rule has been strictly upheld and constantly reaffirmed in every variety of under an original act; for though full legislative power is generally presumed, in such an instance that presumption has no application.<sup>35</sup> "Nor does the rule rest merely upon the authority of adjudged cases," said Chief Justice Taney. "It is founded in principles of justice, and necessary for the safety and well-being of every state in the Union. For it is matter of public history, which this court cannot refuse to notice, that almost every bill for the incorporation of banking companies, insurance and trust companies, railroad companies, or other corporations is drawn originally by the parties who are personally interested in obtaining the charter, and that they are often passed by the legislature in the last days of its session, when, from the nature of our political institutions, the business is unavoidably transacted in a hurried manner, and it is impossible that every member can deliberately examine every provision in every bill upon which he is called on to act. On the other hand, those who accept the charter have abundant time to examine and consider its provisions before they invest their money. And if they mean to claim under it any peculiar privileges, or any exemption from the burden of taxation, it is their duty to see that the right or exemption they intend to claim is granted in clear and unambiguous language."<sup>36</sup> "Courts are astute to seize upon evidence tending to show either that exemptions were not originally intended, or that they have become inoperative by changes in the original constitution of the corporations in whose favor they were granted."<sup>37</sup> On the other hand, it has been said that the court is not "required to hunt for an escape from the exemption;" that "it is a question of sound and reasonable construction, with the presumption against an intent to create or transfer it;" and that "if the intent clearly appears the court is bound, without evasion, to give it effect."<sup>38</sup> When a statute creates an exemption with the evident design of aiding in accomplishing a particular result, the exemption should be expected to cease when that result has been accomplished, and the statute should be read in the light of such expectation.<sup>39</sup>

"We recognize the force and salutary character of the rule, but it must not be misunderstood. It is not a substitute for all other rules. It does not mean that whenever a controversy is or can be raised of the meaning of a statute, ambiguity occurs, which immediately and inevitably determines the interpretation of the statute. The decisive simplicity of such effect is very striking. It conveniently removes all difficulties from judgment in many cases of controverted construction of laws. But we cannot concede such effect to the rule, nor is such effect necessary in order to make the rule useful and, at times, decisive. Its proper office is to help to solve ambiguities, not to compel an immediate surrender to them—to be an element in decision, and effective, maybe, when all other tests of meaning have been employed which experience has afforded, and which it is the duty of courts to consider when rights are claimed under a statute." *Citizens' Bank v. from taxation has been granted in any instance require similar distinctness of expression before the immunity will be extended to others than the original grantee.<sup>40</sup> The exemption of a corporation from taxation must be construed to be a personal privilege of the very corporation specifically referred to, and to perish with that, unless the express and clear intention of the law requires the exemption to pass as a continuing franchise to a successor.<sup>41</sup> It will not pass merely by a conveyance of the property and franchises of a corporation, although such corporation holds its property exempt from taxation.<sup>42</sup> The presumption is that when two railroads are consolidated each of the united lines will be respectively held with all the privileges and burdens originally attaching thereto,<sup>43</sup> although where one of them thus preserving its identity holds as to its own property an exemption from taxation, such exemption will not be extended to the property of the other without express words to that effect.<sup>44</sup> But where two companies agree to consolidate their stock, issue new certificates, take a new name, and elect a new board of directors, and the constituent companies are to cease their functions, a new corporation is thereby formed, subject to existing laws in respect of taxation.<sup>45</sup>

124. Particular provisions.—A grant to a corporation of all the "rights, privileges, and immunities" of another corporation is certainly full and ample for the purpose of granting an exemption from taxation enjoyed by the latter corporation, the word "immunities" expressing more clearly and definitely an intention to include therein an exemption from taxation than does either of the other words; yet when in granting to still another corporation certain rights the word "immunities" is dropped, it must be deemed to signify that the exemption from taxation is omitted.<sup>46</sup> Although the grant of "all the rights, powers, and privileges" conferred on another corporation has been held to grant to the former an exemption from taxation if the latter possessed by law such right of exemption,<sup>47</sup> the later authorities show that there must be other language than the mere word "privilege" or other provisions in the statute removing all doubt as to the intention of the legislature before the exemption will be admitted.<sup>48</sup> "A statute authorizing or directing the grant or transfer of the 'privileges' of a corporation, which enjoys immunity from taxation or regulation, should not be interpreted as including that immunity."<sup>49</sup> A general exemption of the property of a corporation from taxation is to be construed as referring only to the property held for the transaction of the business of the company.<sup>50</sup> "It is a general rule of construction that a clause exempting from taxation does not release the property so exempted from liability for assessments for local improvements."<sup>51</sup> But where the exemption of land is contained in a statute providing for the improvement thereof, and to encourage purchases of land, the exemption extends to taxes imposed for the cost of the improvements.<sup>52</sup> The fact that in an act amending the charter of a railroad corporation special provision is made for ascertaining the taxes to become due by the corporation to the state, nothing being said about the matter of ascertaining other taxes, is not of itself enough to work an exemption of the corporation from county or municipal taxation.<sup>53</sup> Where the charter of a railroad company exempted its property from taxation "for ten years after the completion of said road," it was held that there was no exemption until the completion of the road, despite the contention that the exemption was designed to aid the road, and was, therefore, much more needed during its construction than when completed.<sup>54</sup> A charter exemption from taxation "for a term of twenty years from the completion of said railroad to the Mississippi river, but not to extend beyond twenty-five years from the date of the approval of this act," was construed to confer exemption beginning at the completion of the road to the river and to continue for twenty years thereafter if the road was completed to the river in five years from the date of the act, but subject to reduction of the time in excess of five years consumed by the completion of the road to the river.<sup>55</sup> A charter exemption of "the property" of a railroad corporation exempts its franchise as well as its rolling stock and real estate.<sup>56</sup>

125. Exemptions from governmental control.—"Grants of immunity from legitimate governmental control are never to be presumed. On the contrary, the presumptions are all the other way, and unless an exemption is clearly established the legislature is free to act on all subjects within its general jurisdiction as the public interest may seem to require."<sup>57</sup> For example, a surrender of legislative control of tolls to be exacted by a corporation established by authority of law for the construction of a public highway should never be implied; if it can be bargained away at all, it can be only by words of positive grant, or something which is in law equivalent.<sup>58</sup>

VII. CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTES REFERRED TO OR ADOPTED—PROVISOS AND EXCEPTIONS—AMENDMENTS

126. Statutes referred to or adopted by reference.—A general reference in one statute to another antecedent one embraces also its amendments and additions, because all the provisions must be construed together as composing the act.<sup>59</sup> Where laws enacted by a foreign legislative body are adopted by reference, the adoption is considered as referring to the law existing at the time of adoption, and does not carry with it changes afterwards made in the adopted law.<sup>60</sup> Where an act of Congress adopts by reference certain penal statutes of a state, the act stands as if it defined the offenses in the very words of the state statutes.<sup>61</sup> When a prior act is incorporated in a subsequent one in terms or by relation, the repeal of the former leaves the latter in force, unless also repealed expressly or by necessary implication.<sup>62</sup>

127. Rule as to statutes judicially construed.—When a statute enacted by one state is literally or substantially adopted by another state,<sup>63</sup> separation from the British empire, if they were enacted prior thereto, is construed as forming an integral part of those statutes;<sup>74</sup> but the subsequent English decisions, though entitled to great respect, are not of absolute authority.<sup>75</sup> In speaking of our patent act, which was largely taken from the English statute of monopolies, Mr. Justice Story said: "The words of our statute are not identical with those of the statute of James, but it can scarcely admit of doubt that they must have been within the contemplation of those by whom it was framed, as well as the construction which had been put upon them by Lord Coke."<sup>76</sup> It is to be presumed that the Interstate Commerce Act, so far as it adopts the language of the English Traffic Act, bears the construction given to the latter by the English courts.<sup>77</sup> Provisions in federal bankrupt acts have been construed in accordance with English decisions upon like provisions in various acts of Parliament on the same subject, from which much of the bankrupt acts was drawn.<sup>78</sup> The general rule applies with more than ordinary force, if possible, where, in adopting English statutes, the legislature adds the very language used by the English courts construing them.<sup>79</sup> Where the provisions of the Louisiana Code and the Code of Napoleon are identical, the exposition of the civil-law writers and the adjudications of the French courts are persuasive<sup>80</sup> as to the proper construction of the Louisiana Code, though not binding.<sup>81</sup>

In U. S. v. Dickson, 15 Pet. 141, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 689, the enacting clause gave to a receiver a commission of one per cent. upon all public moneys received by mortgage, with a proviso that if the prior lien, etc., was given or executed for the purpose of raising money with which to erect the buildings or make the improvements, then such prior lien, etc., should be superior to the lien of the mechanics or materialmen. Applying the rule of strict construction to the proviso, the court held that the prior lien, etc., was entitled to precedence only when the money raised thereby was actually used for the purpose mentioned, and only to the extent that it was so used.<sup>92</sup> The decision in the case would seem to warrant the proposition that when the enacting clause of a statute is of a character which entitles it to a liberal construction, a proviso thereto should be construed with more than ordinary strictness.

130. Same: relation to enacting clause.—The general rule of interpretation is that a proviso must be confined by construction to the subject-matter of the section of which it forms a part.<sup>93</sup> Nevertheless, effect must be given to a manifest legislative intention that the proviso shall limit the operation of other sections.<sup>94</sup> No proviso should be construed so as to destroy the enacting clause,<sup>95</sup> for it is fundamental in the construction of statutes that if possible a statute should be so construed that all parts of it shall stand.<sup>96</sup> The same principle, on the other hand, requires that some effect shall be given to a proviso.<sup>97</sup> And in cases of irreconcilable repugnancy, the proviso, as the last expression of the legislative will, must prevail.<sup>98</sup> Most frequently, perhaps, a proviso is intended to restrain the enacting clause and to except something which would otherwise have been within it.<sup>99</sup> As a corollary, in such cases the general language in the

him. A proviso limited that percentage to an amount not exceeding twenty-five hundred dollars for any one year. The receiver having resigned before the expiration of the fiscal year, the government contended that he was entitled only to a pro rata commission. But the court held that he was entitled to the commission upon the entire amount received until the percentage reached the maximum specified in the proviso.

enacting clause is to be construed as covering the matters contained in the proviso, if the enacting clause had stood alone.<sup>1</sup> "But this rule must not be carried too far. Such clauses are often introduced from excessive caution and for the purpose of preventing a possible misinterpretation of the act by including therein that which was not intended; the rule is, therefore, not one of universal obligation, and must yield to the cardinal rule which requires the court to give effect to the general intent, if that can be discovered within the four corners of the act. If such general intention would be defeated by construing the act as embracing everything of the same general description as those particularly excepted therefrom, an arbitrary application of the rule is not admissible."<sup>2</sup>

131. As independent legislation.—Then, too, an enactment in the form of a proviso may have no relation to anything preceding it, and may be clearly designed to have an independent operation.<sup>3</sup> "It is a common practice in legislative proceedings, on the consideration of bills, for parties desirous of securing amendments to them to precede their proposed amendments with the term 'provided,' so as to declare that, notwithstanding existing provisions, the one thus expressed is to prevail, thus having no greater signification than would be attached to the conjunction 'but' or 'and' in the same place, and simply serving to separate or distinguish the different paragraphs or sentences."<sup>4</sup> It is a familiar practice of Congress to enact general and permanent legislation in the form of provisos in annual appropriation acts.<sup>5</sup> However, the general rule is that a proviso

"The practice, however, of embodying general laws in appropriation bills has become so common that to adopt a narrow and restrictive construction confining their language to the subject-matter generally dealt with by the appropriation act would go far to nullify a good deal of the legislation of Congress. These pro-

in an appropriation act should be limited to the appropriations made by the act, and not be extended to all future appropriations, unless the intention so to extend it is expressed in clear and positive terms.<sup>6</sup> A proviso clearly contemplating independent legislation should not receive a construction so narrow as to defeat its purpose.<sup>7</sup> And where a restriction of the proviso to the matter preceding it would make the proviso mean precisely the same thing as the clause to which it is appended, the language employed should be given the natural and ordinary meaning it conveys as an independent clause.<sup>8</sup>

132. Exceptions.—“Doubtless there is a technical distinction between an exception and a proviso, as an exception ought to be of that which would otherwise be included in the category from which it is excepted, and the office of a proviso is either to except something from the enacting clause or to qualify or restrain its generality, or to exclude some ground of misinterpretation of it, as extending to cases not intended to be brought within its operation; but there are a great many examples where the distinction is disregarded and where the words are used as if they were of the same signification.”<sup>9</sup> It is a maxim of interpretation that “an exception in a statute amounts to an affirmation of the application of its provisions to all other cases not excepted.” Exceptio probat regulam de rebus non exceptis.<sup>10</sup> As in the case of provisos,<sup>11</sup> it is presumed that a clause or section to which an exception is attached relates to matters of the general character indicated by the exception; but an exception will not support such an inference, or, rather, the exception will be construed as a substantive enactment, if the evident purpose of the legislature would be defeated and an arbitrary and unjust result would be produced by construing it technically as an exception.<sup>12</sup>

133. Amendments.—By amending a statute the legislature demonstrates an intent to change the pre-existing law, and the presumption must be that it was intended to change the meaning of the statute in all the particulars wherein there is a material change in the language of the amending act.<sup>13</sup> In the absence of constitutional restriction an amendatory statute will be upheld though it purports to amend a statute which

visos that are attached to appropriation acts for the purpose of procuring what is believed to be needed legislation, but which could not be accomplished by an independent statute by reason of the press of business before Congress, must be treated the same as if they were separate and independent enactments.” *National Bank of Commerce v. had already been amended or which was for any reason invalid.<sup>14</sup> And an unconstitutional amendment in no wise affects the validity of the original act.<sup>15</sup> When in the United States Revised Statutes there is found a general system of law regulating a subject, it seems that subsequent legislation by Congress on the same subject must be understood as enacted with reference to that system, and should be construed as a part of it, if it can be so construed;<sup>16</sup> and this is the general rule of construction of statutes in pari materia.<sup>17</sup> An amendatory statute clearly intended as a substitute for the statute amended impliedly repeals provisions omitted from the amendatory statute.<sup>18</sup> An amendatory act usually operates only prospectively from the time of its enactment.<sup>19</sup>

VIII. TERMINATION AND REVIVAL OF STATUTES

Suspension; Expiration; Express Repeal

134. Suspension.—Where an act is repealed and simultaneously the repealing act is suspended until a day certain, the manifest legislative intent is that the repeal shall not take effect until the day named and that in the meanwhile the act shall remain in force.<sup>20</sup> Where Congress by joint resolution directed that the execution of an act passed by the preceding Congress be suspended "until the further order of Congress," and Congress made no "further order" in the premises, it was held that the act was suspended and would remain suspended until any future Congress should dispose of the matter.<sup>21</sup> A territorial statute providing for the punishment of the crime of incest was not repealed by the Edmunds-Tucker Act of 1887 relating to the same offense, but was superseded thereby, and when the territory became a state and the act of Congress ceased to operate, the territorial statute went into force as a law of the state, pursuant to the provisions of the state constitution.<sup>22</sup>

135. Expiration.—When an act expires by its own limitation the effect upon past transactions is the same as if it were repealed at that time.<sup>23</sup>

Thus, an offense against a temporary penal act cannot be punished after the expiration of the act, unless some special provision be made therefor by statute.<sup>24</sup> The effect of repeals is elsewhere considered in this article,<sup>25</sup> as also the effect of expiration of a repealing statute.<sup>26</sup>

136. Express repeals.—Where a prior act is incorporated in a subsequent one in terms or by relation, the repeal of the former leaves the latter in force, unless also repealed expressly or by necessary implication.<sup>27</sup> Thus, where a section of the United States Revised Statutes defined an offense and affixed thereto the penalties "prescribed in the preceding section," a repeal of the preceding section did not obliterate the reference made in the other section nor render it ineffectual.<sup>28</sup> Few cases have arisen in the federal courts touching the construction of express repealing provisions in statutes. Cases relating to the effect of repeals are considered in another section of this article.<sup>29</sup> Where a state legislature was accustomed to sit twice a year, the first session being always styled the summer session and the other the winter session, and the laws of both sittings were published in separate volumes and always referred to as the acts of the different sessions, a statute repealing all laws of a specified description passed at the "last session" was construed to repeal only those passed at the immediately preceding winter session.<sup>30</sup>

Repeal by Implication

33. This alternative, viz., that in order to operate as an implied repeal the later statute must be affirmatively repugnant to the earlier, or contain negative words, is the form in which the rule is commonly stated, as will appear in some of the cases cited in the preceding note. But, in London v. Reg., 13 Q. B. 33, 66 E. C. L. 33, quoted with approval in Rogers v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A.) 91 Fed. 322, Baron Alderson said: "The words 'negative' and 'affirmative' statutes mean nothing. The question is whether they are repugnant or not to that which before existed. That may more easily be shown when the statute is negative than when it is affirmative, but the question is the same."

34. If the later act not repugnant to the earlier and containing no negative words is not clearly intended to cover the whole ground of the earlier, there is no implied repeal. U. S. v. New York, 160 U. S. 598, 16 S. Ct. 402, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 551; Frost v. Wenie, 157 U. S. 46, 15 S. Ct. 532, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 614; Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 601, 1 S. Ct. 434, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 696; Henderson's Tobacco, 11 Wall. 652, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 235.

"A second law on the same subject does not repeal a former one without a repealing clause or negative words, unless so clearly repugnant as to imply a negative." Beals v. Hale, 4 How. 53, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 865.

"Where two statutes cover, in whole or in part, the same matter, and are not absolutely irreconcilable, the duty of the court — no purpose to repeal being clearly expressed or indicated — is, if possible, to give effect to both. In other words, it must not be supposed that the legislature intended by later statute to repeal a prior one on the same subject, unless the last statute is so broad in its terms and so clear and explicit in its words as to show that it was intended to cover the whole subject, and therefore to displace the prior statute." Per Justice Harlan; in Frost v. Wenie, 157 U. S. 58, 15 S. Ct. 532, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 614.

35. Per Atty.-Gen. Black, in 9 Op. Atty.-Gen. 47.

intended both statutes to stand.<sup>36</sup> Repugnancy in principle merely is not enough to work a repeal.<sup>37</sup> Where a statute would still be consistent and harmonious if the provisions of a later statute were incorporated therein, it is evidently not repealed by the later statute.<sup>38</sup>

138. Presumptions, tests and manifestation of intent.—It would be extremely difficult to adjudge irreconcilable conflict between two acts passed on the same day or with only a few days between them; the presumption is very strong against so sudden a change or revolution of the minds of the legislators.<sup>39</sup> Where a repeal, if admitted, would operate to the prejudice of the government, the supposed repugnancy ought to be clear and controlling before it can be held to have that effect.<sup>40</sup> This principle was applied where such repeal would operate to reopen accounts at the treasury department long since settled and closed.<sup>41</sup> The right of the government to examine a claimant before trial and withhold or use his deposition is a statutory prerogative which is not taken away by a subsequent statute, except by special and particular words.<sup>42</sup> A long-established policy of the government can scarcely be held to have been abrogated by an implied repeal of statutes enacted in furtherance of that policy.<sup>43</sup> Thus, the court declared it most unreasonable to suppose that Congress intended, by doubtful inference, to repeal salutary provisions in a very early statute which, in numerous enactments, it had cautiously preserved.<sup>44</sup> In the absence of specific language so providing a statute will not be construed to end the government's right to prosecute for an offense on account of the grand jury's delay in returning an indictment when the adoption of that construction would work a radical change in the existing law.<sup>45</sup> The purpose of Congress to embody in a private act a repeal, suspension, or change of a public law must clearly appear.<sup>46</sup> Courts are especially averse to an implied repeal that may have the effect of unsettling titles to land.<sup>47</sup> Where an act expressly provides that designated portions of a prior act shall not affect its provisions, it cannot be held that the prior act is otherwise repealed or modified.<sup>48</sup> Where a statute expressly repeals so much of an earlier statute as is inconsistent

36. Per Harlan, J., in U. S. v. Cook County Nat. Bank, 9 Biss. 60, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,853.

"The repeal of a law by implication and construction of a subsequent law should be so clear as to leave no reasonable doubt that such was the intention of the legislature; it should be as certain as an express repeal. It should not be deduced by an ingenious course of argument, but should appear at once. It can seldom be satisfactory to arrive at this conclusion by taking a phrase from one section of the subsequent act and putting it into another section, where the legislature had not put it. The general presumption is that if a repeal was intended, it would have been expressly declared; and such is the usual practice of legislation." Per Hopkins, J., in *U. S. v. therewith, it evinces a clear legislative intent that the earlier statute shall stand in respect of its other provisions.<sup>49</sup> Where an act of Congress expressly designates certain sections of the Revised Statutes,<sup>50</sup> or a state statute certain sections of the state code,<sup>51</sup> as repealed or supplied thereby, it may be presumed that no other sections are repealed. Express reference in one statute to another in pari materia is a significant indication that the repeal of the latter was not intended.<sup>52</sup> Where Congress attempts by legislation to harmonize an earlier law with a still earlier treaty, the fact indicates that Congress believed that the law impliedly repealed the treaty to some extent.<sup>53</sup> And the enactment of statutes for the purpose of removing certain statutory restrictions imports a legislative understanding that those restrictions were not removed by earlier acts.<sup>54</sup> Express repeal of a statute is perhaps some evidence that it was not impliedly repealed by previous legislation.<sup>55</sup>

139. Effect of general repealing clause.—Where a statute repeals "all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with" its provisions, it is quite inadmissible to engraft upon this express declaration of legislative intent an implication of more extensive repeal.<sup>56</sup> Such repealing clauses are merely declaratory of the general principle that absolutely irreconcilable provisions in prior statutes are repealed by implication.<sup>57</sup> Indeed, the common formula in a repealing clause that "all acts and parts of acts in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed" implies very strongly that there may be acts on the same subject which are not thereby repealed.<sup>58</sup> But an act repealing "all laws and parts of laws that come within the meaning and purview of this act" repeals former acts upon the same subject, though the latter are reconcilable with the former.<sup>59</sup> Where the repealing clause in an unconstitutional statute repeals all inconsistent acts, the repealing clause is to stand and have effect, notwithstanding the invalidity of the rest.<sup>60</sup>

140. Statutes relating to different subjects.—"It may be doubted whether a statute relating to one subject can be construed to repeal by implication a prior statute relating entirely to another subject."<sup>61</sup> A statute declaring a forfeiture of goods imported contrary to law cannot be inconsistent with a purely criminal statute which deals only with the person of the offender.<sup>62</sup>

141. Cumulative or auxiliary statutes.—An earlier act will not be repealed by a later act merely because the latter repeats some of the provisions of the former, and omits others or adds new provisions. In such cases there is an implied repeal only where it plainly appears that the last act was intended as a substitute for the first.<sup>63</sup> A statute obviating the future application of a prior act conferring jurisdiction on a particular court does not operate as a repeal of the prior act and has no effect on jurisdiction already acquired thereunder.<sup>64</sup> An act conferring jurisdiction over a certain class of actions upon one court is not repealed by a subsequent act conferring like jurisdiction upon another court; the effect of the later act is simply to confer concurrent jurisdiction.<sup>65</sup> The provision of a new and more convenient mode of exercising an appellate jurisdiction does not necessarily take away the old.<sup>66</sup> The presumption against implied repeals is of great cogency where it is sought to abrogate provisions concerning the revenue and its collection by later laws on the same subject.<sup>67</sup> It is a very common thing for cumulative remedies to be thus provided in the revenue laws,<sup>68</sup> and "the more natural if not the necessary inference in all such cases is that the legislature intended the new law to be auxiliary to and in aid of the purposes of the old law, even when some of the cases provided for may be equally within the reach of each."<sup>69</sup> A statute authorizing an acknowledgment to be taken before a mayor or a justice is not repealed as to acknowledgments before a mayor by a later statute authorizing such acknowledgments to be taken by a

142. Special and general statutes on same subject.—It is a well-established rule that general and specific provisions in apparent contradiction, whether in the same or different statutes, and without regard to priority of enactment, may subsist together, the specific qualifying and supplying exceptions to the general.<sup>71</sup> “Where there are two statutes, the earlier special and the later general—the terms of the general broad enough to include the matter provided for in the special—the fact that the one is special and the other is general creates a presumption that the special is to be considered as remaining an exception to the general, unless a repeal is expressly named, or unless the provisions of the general are manifestly inconsistent with those of the special.”<sup>72</sup> This principle is

One of those referred to is strikingly like the present case. An act was passed by the legislature of Indiana January 16, 1849, which, among other things, provided that the auditor of the county of La Grange shall receive $700 per annum, which sum shall be in full compensation for all services which he may perform as such officer. The next day, January 17, 1849, an act was passed by the same legislature which, after requiring county auditors to perform duties theretofore belonging to the office of school commissioners, provided that for the discharge of such duties they should be allowed one-half of one per cent. upon the amount of school funds on loan in the respective counties. This last provision applied in terms to all county auditors, and was broad enough to include the auditor of La Grange county. But the Supreme Court of Indiana held that the two acts must be construed in pari materia, and that 'the intention evinced in the statutes under consideration, when taken together, may be stated thus: For services relative to the school funds each county auditor shall receive as a compensation one-half of one per cent. upon the amount of that fund on loan in his county; provided, the auditor of the county of La Grange shall not be allowed such per centum in addition to his fixed salary of $700.' *La Grange County v. "In Michell v. Brown, 1 El. & El. 267, 102 E. C. L. 267, it was ruled in the Court of Queen's Bench, that if a later statute again describes an offense created by a former statute, and affixes a different punishment to it, varying the procedure, etc., the later operates by way of substitution, not cumulatively, and the former statute is repealed. A similar rule was asserted by Baron Bramwell, in In re Baker, 2 H. & N. 219. So in Parry v. Croydon Commercial Gas, etc., Co., 15 C. B. N. S. 568, 109 E. C. L. 568, an act imposing a penalty of £200 upon the undertaker of any gasworks for fouling any stream, etc., to be recovered by the person into whose water the foul substance should be conveyed, was held to repeal by implication a former act describing the same offense and imposing the same penalty, to be sued for by any common informer. The two penalties were held not to be cumulative. The principle of these rulings has been frequently recognized by courts in this country." U. S. v. Claffin, 97 U. S. 551, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 1085.

provisions contained in the original act, the parts omitted cannot be kept in force by construction, but are annulled.<sup>88</sup> Where an amendatory statute purporting to amend a statute which has already been amended covers the entire subject-matter of the prior amendment, the latter is repealed by implication.<sup>89</sup> In a case wherein a construction of certain provisions in a state code of civil procedure was in question, the court said that "where a statute upon a specific subject has been repealed, not expressly, but by implication, by the enactment of a later statute upon the same subject, inconsistent with the first, and both laws are subsequently re-enacted in a revision or codification, they still have the same relative force and effect as before the codification; that is to say, the earlier remains repealed by the later statute. In such a case the presumption arises that the repeal of the earlier statute has been overlooked by the codifiers, and therein lies the reason of the rule."<sup>90</sup>

145. Repeal by inference arising from subject-matter.—When, to a board having general administrative supervision of the affairs of a community, and with plenary powers in the matter of appointment and removal of subordinates, is added the control of another department, and no express words of limitation are found in the act making the transfer, it is to be presumed that such board has the same plenary power in respect to this new department, and is not hampered by limitations attached to the board which theretofore had control of it. In such a case the court said: "The presumption against implied repeal obtaining in the construction of ordinary statutes yields to the inferences arising from the subject-matter of the legislation."<sup>91</sup>

But in Taylor v. Bowker, 111 U. S. 110,

4 S. Ct. 397, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 368, it was held that if a statute confers upon a judgment creditor of a corporation an equitable remedy on the issue of an execution on the judgment and its return unsatisfied, and in a revision of the statutes the same equitable remedy is given, but without mention of the issue and return of execution, it is not to be presumed that the legislature intended by the omission to abrogate or modify an established rule of equity; and that when it is attempted by equitable process to reach equitable interests fraudulently conveyed, the bill should set forth a judgment, issue of execution thereon, and its return unsatisfied. 146. By constitution or treaty.—Legislative enactments are repealed by the subsequent adoption of provisions inconsistent therewith in a constitution<sup>92</sup> or a treaty.<sup>93</sup> In accordance with the rule that repeals by implication are not favored, however, "a later treaty will not be regarded as repealing an earlier statute by implication, unless the two are absolutely incompatible and the statute cannot be enforced without antagonizing the treaty."<sup>94</sup> But a constitutional provision imposing liability in exemplary damages for death by wrongful act is not repugnant to, and does not repeal, a prior legislative enactment authorizing recovery of compensatory damages in such cases.<sup>95</sup>

147. Subsequent legislative recognition of repealed act.—When an act of Congress is impliedly repealed by a later act, a subsequent recognition of the earlier act by Congress as a still subsisting law will not operate to prevent such repeal. The question of repeal "is a judicial question to be determined by the courts," it was said, "and is not for the legislative branch of the government to determine."<sup>96</sup> However, it seems that such subsequent recognition may be so positive as to amount to a re-enactment of the earlier act.<sup>97</sup>

Effect of Repeal

148. Simultaneous repeal and re-enactment.—Where a statute is repealed and its provisions are substantially re-enacted in the repealing statute, the latter is held to be substituted in the place of the old one, and to continue in force, with modifications, the provisions of the old act, instead of abrogating or annulling them and re-enacting the same as a new and original act.<sup>98</sup> In the leading federal case on this subject an action was brought to recover pilotage fees allowed by statute, which statute was repealed and substantially re-enacted during the pendency of the action, and it was held that the new statute did not impair the right to prosecute the action to effect.<sup>99</sup>

149. Vested rights.—The repeal of a statute does not affect vested rights acquired under it.<sup>1</sup> “If, for example, a statute of descents be repealed, it has never been supposed that rights of property already vested during its existence were gone by such repeal. Such a construction would overturn the best-established doctrines of law, and sap the very foundations on which property rests.”<sup>2</sup> The repeal of patent laws cannot impair the right of property then existing in a patentee or his assignee.<sup>3</sup> When a right has arisen upon a contract, or a transaction in the nature of a contract authorized by statute, and has been so far perfected that nothing remains to be done by the party asserting it, the repeal of the statute does not affect it or an action for its enforcement. It has become a vested right which stands independent of the statute.<sup>4</sup> The repeal of a mechanics’ lien law after the lien has attached by performance of work does not defeat the lien.<sup>5</sup>

150. Original jurisdiction of courts.—Where a statute conferring original jurisdiction (or jurisdiction by removal from a state court) is repealed expressly or by implication, jurisdiction of cases pending at the time of repeal, no judgment having been rendered therein, fails with the passage of the repealing act, unless pending cases are expressly excepted from its operation.<sup>6</sup> Upon the same principle, where an act of Congress confirmed a certain pre-emption entry for public lands and directed the issuance of a patent therefor, it put an end to the jurisdiction of the land department over the question of the validity of the entry in a contest pending therein.<sup>7</sup> An administrator has no power to sell real estate pursuant to an order of the court, where the statute authorizing the court to make such order is repealed before the sale is effected.<sup>8</sup> If a court proceeds to judgment after jurisdiction has been thus divested, the judgment will be coram non judice and absolutely void on collateral attack. For that reason no title was acquired by a purchaser of property at a judicial sale under judgment and order of a state court in statutory proceedings instituted for forfeiture and sale of property of persons who adhered to the enemies of the state in the war of 1812, a treaty ratified during the pendency of the proceedings having provided that no future confiscations should be made for such cause.<sup>9</sup> But an Indian prosecuted before a tribal court for an offense within its jurisdiction cannot defeat such jurisdiction by becoming naturalized as a citizen of the United States before conviction, pursuant to an act of Congress.<sup>10</sup> Upon the admission of a territory as a state, jurisdiction of the territorial courts is thereby abrogated, and subsequent suits instituted therein must be dismissed.<sup>11</sup> When a final determination by judgment or sentence has been reached before repeal of a statute conferring jurisdiction on a court, such repeal does not affect the judgment or sentence,<sup>12</sup> and it may be reviewed on appeal or error by the proper appellate court, if the jurisdiction of the latter is not in terms cut off by the repealing statute.<sup>13</sup> But such appellate jurisdiction cannot be exercised where the repealing act abolishes the court wherein the judgment or sentence was pronounced, since a judgment of reversal by the appellate tribunal could not be executed by mandate and proceedings thereon.<sup>14</sup> And where the Court of Claims rendered judgment from which an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, and pending the appeal Congress repealed the act conferring the jurisdiction upon which the judgment was founded, enacting that all proceedings under the act should be vacated and that no judgment rendered pursuant to the act should be paid, the appeal was dismissed for want of jurisdiction and without any determination of the rights of the parties.<sup>15</sup>

Under these circumstances, a court should be slow to spell out a repeal by implication of such important provisions so clearly expressed, when the result of such repeal would be to leave the decision of the court of first instance standing as res adjudicata between the parties, with no machinery for reviewing it, or for re-examining into its justice or propriety." The case was decided upon the authority of U. S. v. Boisdoré, 8 How. 113, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 1009.

The case first above cited is contrary, it seems, to the ruling in U. S. v. McCrory, (C. C. A.) 91 Fed. 295, and in U. S. v. Kelly, (C. C. A.) 97 Fed. 460, where, under apparently the same circumstances, the Circuit Court of Appeals abated a writ of error.

A distinction has been drawn in cases where appeal suspends the judgment, as in admiralty, and it is the rule in such cases that the appellate court loses jurisdiction if the law conferring jurisdiction on the court below is repealed pending the appeal. *Yeaton v. deprives the appellate court of jurisdiction of appellate proceedings instituted after the last statute takes effect.<sup>16</sup> The repeal of a statute conferring appellate jurisdiction on a court does not vacate or annul any judgment already rendered by that court; it destroys no vested rights.<sup>17</sup> But a party has no vested rights in an appeal or writ of error; and while the repeal of a statute conferring appellate jurisdiction does not vacate or annul an appeal or a writ of error already taken or sued out, it takes away the right of the appellate court to hear and determine the cause, and the proceeding must be dismissed, unless the repealing act makes special provision to the contrary.<sup>18</sup> This rule applies whether the repealing act takes effect before or after argument of the cause in the appellate court.<sup>19</sup> Where the appellate power of the United States Supreme Court over judgments of a territorial court depends upon laws regulating the judicial proceedings of the territory, a writ of error pending when the territory is admitted as a state must be dismissed, since the laws conferring appellate jurisdiction fall with the termination of the territorial government.<sup>20</sup> There is always a strong presumption that a statute withdrawing jurisdiction by a repeal of the act which conferred it is not limited to future cases, but applies to pending cases, unless the latter are expressly excepted from its operation.<sup>21</sup> But where a repealing act provides that no appeal or writ of error shall "hereafter" be allowed, the evident intention is to prevent a failure of jurisdiction of pending appellate proceedings, and these will not be affected by the repeal.<sup>22</sup> In one instance where a statute conferring jurisdiction of suits against the United States was repealed without a saving clause, pending cases which were consequently dismissed by the court were reinstated by a subsequent act of Congress.<sup>23</sup>

152. Criminal prosecutions; penal actions by government.—It is a clear rule that if a statute creating an offense is repealed expressly or by implication, no prosecution can be instituted for any offense committed against the statute previous to its repeal,<sup>24</sup> unless there be a saving clause or a general statute reserving the right of prosecution.<sup>25</sup> "The end of punishment," said Judge Washington, speaking nearly a hundred years ago, "is not only to correct the offender, but to deter others from committing like offenses. But if the legislature has ceased to consider the act in the light of an offense, those purposes are no longer to be answered, and punishment is then unnecessary."<sup>26</sup> If the repealing act contains no provision saving pending prosecutions, such prosecutions can proceed no further.<sup>27</sup> "There can be no legal conviction nor any valid judgment pronounced upon conviction, unless the law creating the offense be at the time in existence. By the repeal, the legislative will is expressed that no further proceedings be had under the act repealed."<sup>28</sup> This effect is produced as well when the statute is repealed by implication as when it is expressly repealed,<sup>29</sup> but the power to punish in pending cases may be saved by the express language of the repealing act.<sup>30</sup> Where a criminal action on behalf of the government for the recovery of a penalty, or a proceeding to enforce a forfeiture prescribed in a legislative act, is pending at the time of the repeal of the act, or instituted after the repeal, such repeal is a bar to the action or proceeding, in the absence of a saving clause in the repealing act.<sup>31</sup>

Revival

156. Common-law rule as to revival by repeal.—Where an act repealing another is itself repealed, the act originally repealed is restored as it was before its repeal, unless the effect of the last repealing act is by its terms, or by some general statute, limited to the abrogation of the act repealed thereby.<sup>65</sup> If a statute abrogates the common law and is afterwards repealed, the common law revives.<sup>66</sup> But the repeal of a repealing act cannot effect the revival of any previous act which is repugnant to the provisions of the last repealing act.<sup>67</sup> And the doctrine that repeal of a repealing act revives the first act is not applicable where such a conclusion would be opposed to the obvious legislative intention in the enactment of the last repealing act.<sup>68</sup> Thus, it would be impossible to impute to a legislature the intention, in amending parts of a code and repealing other parts which had been declared unconstitutional, to revive earlier laws which might render the amended law liable to the same objections.<sup>69</sup>

157. Rule under statutory provisions.—It has been said that an act declaring that the repeal of a repealing act shall not revive the first act repealed, being in derogation of the common law, is to be strictly construed;<sup>70</sup> and that it does not, for example, apply to an act temporarily suspending a former repealing act.<sup>71</sup> In like manner on the repeal of a special act excepting certain cases from the operation of a general statute, the general statute governs the cases formerly covered by the special act.<sup>72</sup> But a statute prohibiting revivals by repeal does apply where an act is repealed by implication arising from repugnancy in a later act which, in turn, is expressly repealed, and in such a case the original act is not revived.<sup>73</sup> A federal statute provides that "whenever an act is repealed which repealed a former act, such former act shall not thereby be revived unless it shall be expressly so provided."<sup>74</sup> The statute not only prevents an express repeal,<sup>75</sup> but also an implied repeal<sup>76</sup> of a repealing statute from operating to revive the original act. But it applies only to express or implied repeals, and not to a case where the repealing act is not repealed but expires of its own limitation; in such a case the original act is revived under the common-law rule.<sup>77</sup> Notwithstanding the statute, where an act merely excepts a particular class of cases from the provisions of a previously existing general law which continues in force, the repeal of the excepting statute operates to bring such cases under the general law.<sup>78</sup> Whether the statute operates as a rule of construction of the legislation in organized territories is uncertain,<sup>79</sup> in view of another federal statute which provides that "the Constitution and all laws of the United States which are not locally inapplicable shall have the same force and effect within all the organized territories, and in every territory hereafter organized, as elsewhere within the United States."<sup>80</sup>

158. Revival by expiration of repealing statute; by express statute.—Where a repealing act expires by its own limitation, the act repealed is revived.<sup>81</sup> It is not competent for Congress to revive an expired act so as to make it retroact over the intervening time, except in those cases where Congress would have the power to pass an independent retroactive statute.<sup>82</sup> Congress may make the revival of an act depend upon a future event, and direct that event to be made known by proclamation.<sup>83</sup> Where an act is revived by a subsequent act, it is revived precisely in that form and with that effect which it had at the moment when it expired.<sup>84</sup> An

In 1892 it was held by Attorney-General Miller that the act of 1878 was then in force. 20 Op. Atty-Gen. 467, where it was said: "In Collins v. Smith, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 294, it was decided, Chief Justice Gibson delivering the opinion, that where a repealing act expires by its own limitation the act repealed is revived. Accordingly, it was held by the late Mr. Secretary Folger, an eminent jurist, that this particular act of 1878 was revived on June 2, 1883. The same view was taken by my immediate predecessor, Attorney-General Garland, and was acted upon no doubt under his advice by President Cleveland and Secretary Manning in quarantining against smallpox in Canada in 1885. In this view I concur." Compare U. S. v. Twenty-Five Cases Cloths, Crabbe 383, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,563, when Judge Hopkinson, charging a jury, said: "On this subject I would suggest that where a statute contains an absolute affirmative repeal of an antecedent statute, or a part of it, the expiration of the subsequent statute, by its own limitation, would not revive the repealed act; but where there is no such express repeal the first statute is taken to be repealed by the implication that it is supplied by the subsequent law, then it would seem that we might well consider the second law was rather a suspension than a repeal of the first; and if the legislature, after the experiment, allowed the second act to expire, it was their intention to go back to the provisions of the first; otherwise there would be no legislation on the subject."

IX. THE REVISED STATUTES, SUPPLEMENTS, AND STATUTES AT LARGE

First Edition of Revised Statutes

159. Compilation and enactment.—The Revised Statutes were compiled under an act of June 27, 1866, providing “for the revision and consolidation of the statute laws of the United States,” the appointment of three commissioners being thereby authorized to accomplish the work. The commissioners were directed to “revise, simplify, arrange, and consolidate all statutes of the United States, general and permanent in their nature, which shall be in force at the time such commissioners may make the final report of their doings;” also to arrange the statutes and parts of statutes “under titles, chapters, and sections, or other suitable divisions and subdivisions, with head-notes briefly expressive of the matter contained in such divisions; also with side-notes so drawn as to point to the contents of the text and with references to the original text from which each section is compiled,” etc.<sup>86</sup> By subsequent provisions a committee of the House of Representatives was authorized to accept the draft prepared by the commissioners.<sup>87</sup> It was also enacted that the printed volumes of the Revised Statutes “shall be legal evidence of the laws and treaties therein contained, in all the courts of the United States and of the several states and territories.”<sup>88</sup> The Revised Statutes, commonly called the first edition, were enacted by Congress and approved by the President June 22, 1874.<sup>89</sup>

160. Scope.—It is provided in the Revised Statutes, section 5595, that “the foregoing seventy-three titles embrace the statutes of the United States general and permanent in their nature, in force on the 1st day of December, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, as revised and consolidated by commissioners appointed under an act of Congress, and the same shall be designated and cited as The Revised Statutes of the United States.” The section is fully annotated elsewhere in this work.<sup>90</sup>

161. Repeal; acts passed since Dec. 1, 1873.—The Revised Statutes, section 5596, provide that “all acts of Congress passed prior to said first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, any portion of which is embraced in any section of said revision, are hereby repealed, and the section applicable thereto shall be in force in lieu thereof; all parts of such acts not contained in such revision, having been repealed or superseded by subsequent acts, or not being general and permanent in their nature: Provided, That the incorporation into said revision of any general and permanent provision, taken from an act making appropriations, or from an act containing other provisions of a private, local, or temporary character, shall not repeal, or in any way affect any appropriation, or any provision of a private, local, or temporary character, contained in any of said acts, but the same shall remain in force; and all acts of Congress passed prior to said last-named day no part of which are embraced in said revision, shall not be affected or changed by its enactment." The section is fully annotated elsewhere in this work. The Revised Statutes, section 5601, provide that "the enactment of the said revision is not to affect or repeal any act of Congress passed since the 1st day of December, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, and all acts passed since that date are to have full effect as if passed after the enactment of this revision, and so far as such acts vary from or conflict with any provision contained in said revision, they are to have effect as subsequent statutes, and as repealing any portion of the revision inconsistent therewith." The section is fully annotated elsewhere in this work.

162. Accrued rights; prosecutions and punishments.—The Revised Statutes, section 5597, provide that "the repeal of the several acts embraced in said revision shall not affect any act done, or any right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil cause before the said repeal, but all rights and liabilities under said acts shall continue, and may be enforced in the same manner as if said repeal had not been made; nor shall said repeal in any manner affect the right to any office or change the term or tenure thereof." The section is fully annotated elsewhere in this work. The Revised Statutes, section 5598, provide that "all offenses committed, and all penalties or forfeitures incurred under any statute embraced in said revision prior to said repeal, may be prosecuted and punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if said repeal had not been made." The section is fully annotated elsewhere in this work.

163. Acts of limitation.—The Revised Statutes, section 5599, provide that "all acts of limitation, whether applicable to civil causes and proceedings, or to the prosecution of offenses, or for the recovery of penalties or forfeitures, embraced in said revision and covered by said repeal, shall not be affected thereby, but all suits, proceedings, or prosecutions, whether civil or criminal, for causes arising, or acts done or committed prior to said repeal, may be commenced and prosecuted within the same time as if said repeal had not been made." The section is fully annotated elsewhere in this work.

164. Arrangement and classification.—The Revised Statutes, section 5600, provide that "the arrangement and classification of the several sections of the revision have been made for the purpose of a more convenient and orderly arrangement of the same, and therefore no inference of presumption of a legislative construction is to be drawn by reason of the title under which any particular section is placed." The section is fully annotated elsewhere in this work.

Construction of Revised Statutes

165. Legislative provisions.—Several sections of the Revised Statutes touching the construction of its provisions have already been quoted.<sup>91</sup> Title I., chapter 1, of the Revised Statutes, entitled "Definitions," and chapter 2 of the same title, entitled "Form of Statutes and Effect of Repeals," also prescribe rules for the construction of the Revised Statutes and of other federal statutes.<sup>92</sup>

166. Reviser's report and marginal notes.—The Act of June 27, 1866, initiating the revision of the federal statutes, contained directions to the commissioners of revision "for making such alterations as may be necessary to reconcile the contradictions, supply the omissions, and amend the imperfections of the original text," and provided that in submitting to Congress the result of their labors the commissioners should "at the same time * * * suggest to Congress such contradictions, omissions, and imperfections as may appear in the original text, with the mode in which they have reconciled, supplied, and amended the same."<sup>93</sup> "Reports of commissioners of revision suggesting changes which have been adopted," said Judge Putnam, "have been constantly accepted in Great Britain and in the various states in this country for aiding the construction of the statute as changed, even when less specific provisions were made for amendments, and for stating the reasons thereof, than are found in the statute" last above mentioned. "There can be no doubt, therefore, that under this statute, whenever the commissioners have stated in their report reasons for changing the text accompanied with amendments which have been followed by their adoption by Congress, it must ordinarily be held that there was an intention to change, and that the report aids in the construction of the new statute."<sup>94</sup>

By the Act of June 27, 1866, the commissioners to revise the statutes were directed to place at the sections of the revision "references to the original text from which each section is compiled."<sup>95</sup> The court may, therefore, consult these marginal references in order to ascertain what statutes were used in the compilation of the sections at which the references are placed.<sup>96</sup> A marginal note defining the scope of a section has been referred to for the purpose of interpreting general words used in that section.<sup>97</sup>

167. Original statutes.—In one of the first cases in which the Supreme Court had occasion to consider the propriety of referring to the original acts in construing the provisions of the Revised Statutes, Mr. Justice Miller said: "It must be admitted that in construing any part of the Revised Statutes it is admissible, and often necessary, to recur to its connection in the act of which it was originally a part."<sup>98</sup> The later decisions have established the following propositions: "Where there is a substantial doubt as to the meaning of the language used in the revision, the old law is a valuable source of information," and may be resorted to "when necessary to construe doubtful language used in expressing the meaning of

If the language of the revision be plain upon the face, the person examining it ought to be able to rely upon it. If it be but another volume added to the prior Statutes at Large, the main object of the revision is lost, and no one can be certain of the law without an examination of all previous statutes upon the same subject."<sup>5</sup> Discussing the same question, Mr. Justice Brown said: "The whole doctrine applicable to the subject may be summed up in the single observation that prior acts may be resorted to to solve, but not to create an ambiguity."<sup>6</sup>

168. Changes in phraseology or arrangement.—In the construction of the Revised Statutes the presumption is against an intention to change the meaning and construction of a statute re-enacted therein.<sup>7</sup> Mere changes in phraseology arising from a condensation or otherwise are not to be regarded as changing the pre-existing law.<sup>8</sup> Nor is it to be inferred that Congress, by consolidating or transposing earlier provisions, intended to change their effect, unless an intention to do so is clearly expressed.<sup>9</sup> But where the language in the revision cannot possibly bear the same construction as the revised and repealed act, full effect must be given to the new enactment.<sup>10</sup>

Amendments; Second Edition; Supplements; Statutes at Large

169. Omnibus amendments.—An act was passed February 18, 1875, entitled "An act to correct errors and to supply omissions in the Revised Statutes of the United States,"<sup>11</sup> and on February 27, 1877, another was passed, entitled "An act to perfect the revision of the statutes of the United States, and of the statutes relating to the District of Columbia."<sup>12</sup> By these and other acts several hundred errors and omissions have been corrected, and most of the corrections were incorporated in the text of the second edition of the Revised Statutes.

neither a new revision nor a new enactment, but is only a new publication. It is a compilation containing a copy of the original Revised Statutes, like the first edition, with certain specific alterations and amendments made by subsequent enactments of the Forty-third and Forty-fourth Congresses, incorporated according to the judgment and discretion of the editor, under authority of the law providing for his appointment.<sup>13</sup> The editor had no power to change the substance or alter the language of the revision, nor to correct any errors or supply any omissions. The whole text of the Revised Statutes, as published in the first edition, is preserved; but where by the specific amendments made by the two Congresses mentioned, sections or parts of sections were repealed, those repealed provisions are printed in italics and included in brackets; and where in like manner, by legislative enactment, words were required to be added or inserted, they are incorporated in their proper places in ordinary Roman letters, and are also inclosed in brackets. The act for the preparation and publication of the second or new edition of the Revised Statutes provided that "the printed volume shall be legal evidence of the laws therein contained in all the courts of the United States and of the several states and territories, but shall not preclude reference to nor control, in case of any discrepancy, the effect of any original act as passed by Congress since the first day of December, eighteen hundred and seventy-three."<sup>14</sup>

171. "Supplements."—By a joint resolution of June 7, 1880, and by divers subsequent acts,<sup>15</sup> these supplements "shall be taken to be prima facie evidence of the laws therein contained, but shall not change nor alter any existing law nor preclude reference to nor control, in case of any discrepancy, the effect of any original acts passed by Congress."<sup>16</sup>

172. Statutes at large.—Provision is made by act of Congress for the publication of pamphlet copies of the statutes of each session of Congress, and of bound volumes of the statutes enacted by each Congress, which shall "contain all laws, joint and concurrent resolutions passed by Congress, and also all conventions, treaties, proclamations, and agreements;" and "the pamphlet copies of the statutes and the bound copies of the acts of each Congress shall be legal evidence of the laws and treaties therein contained in all the courts of the United States and of the several states therein."<sup>17</sup>

15. Congress has provided for the compilation and publication of supplements to the Revised Statutes, "embracing the statutes general and permanent in their nature passed after the Revised Statutes, with the references connecting provisions on the same subject, explanatory notes, citations of judicial decisions, and a general index," etc. Res. of June 7, 1880, No. 44, 21 Stat. at L. 308; Act of April 9, 1890, 26 Stat. at L. 50, c. 73; Act of Feb. 27, 1893, 27 Stat. at L. 477, c. 167; Act of Jan. 12, 1895, 28 Stat. at L. 601, c. 23, § 73, and other acts, all of which

I. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Sec. 520. [Establishment of department of agriculture.] There shall be at the seat of Government a Department of Agriculture, the general design and duties of which shall be to acquire and to diffuse among the people of the United States useful information on subjects connected with agriculture, in the most general and comprehensive sense of that word, and to procure, propagate, and distribute among the people new and valuable seeds and plants. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1862, 12 Stat. L. 387, known as the "Department of Agriculture Act."

Sec. 521. [Commissioner of agriculture.] The Department of Agriculture shall be under the charge of a Commissioner of Agriculture, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall be entitled to a salary of four thousand dollars a year. [R. S.]

This section, though not repealed, is superseded by the Act of Feb. 9, 1889 (infra, p. 200), which makes the Department of Agriculture one of the executive departments, under the control of a secretary.

Sec. 522. [Clerks and employees.] There shall be in the Department of Agriculture:

One chief clerk, at a salary of two thousand dollars a year.

One chemist, at a salary of two thousand dollars a year.

One assistant chemist, at a salary of one thousand six hundred dollars a year.

One entomologist, at a salary of two thousand dollars a year.

One microscopist, at a salary of one thousand eight hundred dollars a year.

One botanist, at a salary of one thousand eight hundred dollars a year.

One statistician, at a salary of two thousand dollars a year.

One superintendent of experimental gardens and grounds, at a salary of two thousand dollars a year.

One assistant superintendent of experimental gardens and grounds, at a salary of one thousand two hundred dollars a year.

One disbursing clerk, at a salary of one thousand eight hundred dollars a year.

One superintendent of the seed-room, at a salary of one thousand eight hundred dollars a year.

One assistant superintendent of the seed-room, at a salary of one thousand two hundred dollars a year.

One librarian, at a salary of one thousand eight hundred dollars a year.

One engineer, at a salary of one thousand four hundred dollars a year.

One superintendent of the folding-room, at a salary of one thousand two hundred dollars a year.

Two attendants in the museum, at a salary of one thousand dollars a year each.

One carpenter, at a salary of nine hundred and sixty dollars a year. [R. S.]

Although not repealed this section has long been superseded by the annual appropriation acts which vary from year to year in making provision for clerks and employees.

Power to appoint and remove departmental clerks, messengers, and laborers cannot be delegated, but must be exercised by the secretary or acting secretary. 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 355.

As to the right of the Secretary of Agriculture to promote or to appoint persons transferred to positions at higher rates of pay, see 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 398.

Sec. 523. [Officers and employees.] The Commissioner of Agriculture shall appoint a chief clerk, with a salary of two thousand dollars a year, who in all cases during the necessary absence of the Commissioner, or when the office of Commissioner shall become vacant, shall perform the duties of Commissioner, and he shall appoint such other employes as Congress may from time to time provide, with salaries corresponding to the salaries of similar officers in other Departments of the Government; and he shall, as Congress may from time to time provide, employ other persons, for such time as their services may be needed, including chemists, botanists, entomologists, and other persons skilled in the natural sciences pertaining to agriculture. [R. S.]

Commissioner superseded by secretary, see note under R. S. sec. 521, supra. See also note under R. S. sec. 522, supra.

Sec. 524. [Bonds of commissioner and chief clerk.] The Commissioner, and the chief clerk, before entering upon their duties, shall severally give bonds to the Treasurer of the United States, the former in the sum of ten thousand dollars, and the latter in the sum of five thousand dollars, conditioned to render a true and faithful account to the Treasurer quarterly of all moneys which shall be by them received by virtue of their office, with sureties to be approved by the Solicitor of the Treasury. Such bonds shall be filed in the office of the First Comptroller of the Treasury, to be by him put in suit upon any breach of the conditions thereof. [R. S.]

Commissioner superseded by secretary, see note under R. S. sec. 521, supra.
By the Act of March 3, 1887, ch. 351, 24 Stat. L. 499, the amount of the commissioner's bond was raised to twenty-five thousand dollars.

Sec. 525. [Custody of property, records, etc.] The Commissioner of Agriculture shall have charge, in the building and premises appropriated to the Department, of the library, furniture, fixtures, records, and other property appertaining to it, or hereafter acquired for use in its business. [R. S.]

Commissioner superseded by secretary, see Act of Feb. 9, 1889, ch. 122, infra, p. 200.

Sec. 526. [Duties of commissioner.] The Commissioner of Agriculture shall procure and preserve all information concerning agriculture which he can obtain by means of books and correspondence, and by practical and scientific experiments, accurate records of which experiments shall be kept in his Office, by the collection of statistics, and by any other appropriate means within his power; he shall collect new and valuable seeds and plants; shall test, by cultivation, the value of such of them as may require such tests; shall propagate such as may be worthy of propagation; and shall distribute them among agriculturists. [R. S.]

Commissioner superseded by secretary, see Act of Feb. 9, 1889, ch. 122, infra, p. 200.

Sec. 528. [Annual and special reports.] The Commissioner of Agriculture shall annually make a general report in writing of his acts to the President and to Congress, in which he may recommend the publication of papers forming parts of or accompanying his report, which shall also contain an account of all moneys received and expended by him. He shall also make special reports on particular subjects whenever required to do so by the President or either House of Congress, or when he shall think the subject in his charge requires it. [R. S.]

Commissioner superseded by secretary, see Act of Feb. 9, 1889, ch. 122, infra, p. 200.

Sec. 529. [Annual report of expenditures.] The Commissioner of Agriculture shall, on or before the fifteenth day of December in each year, make a report in detail to Congress of all moneys expended by him or under his direction. [R. S.]

See the note to the preceding R. S. sec. 528.

An act to enlarge the powers and duties of the Department of Agriculture and to create an Executive Department to be known as the Department of Agriculture.

[Act of Feb. 9, 1889, ch. 122, 25 Stat. L. 659.]

[SEC. 1.] [Department of agriculture to be an executive department.] That the Department of Agriculture, shall be an Executive Department, under the supervision and control of a Secretary of Agriculture, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; and section one hundred and fifty-eight of the Revised Statutes is hereby amended to include such Department, and the provisions of title four of the Revised Statutes, including all amendments thereto, are hereby made applicable to said Department. [25 Stat. L. 659.]

Section 158, R. S., above mentioned, gives a list of the executive departments. Title four, R. S., contains "provisions applicable to all the executive departments." See EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS.

The Agricultural Department was formerly under control of a Commissioner of Agriculture, See R. S. sec. 520, supra, p. 197.

The provisions of this act supersede those of R. S. sec. 3677, which provided that "The Commissioner of Agriculture shall direct and superintend the expenditure of all money appropriated to the Department and render accounts thereof. (Act of May 15, 1862, ch. 72, 12 Stat. L. 388.)

A provision of the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 16, 1880, ch. 252, § 2, 21 Stat. L. 292, and repeated in the similar Act of March 3, 1881, ch. 129, § 2, 21 Stat. L. 385, requiring the Commissioner of Agriculture "to account and report to the proper accounting officers of the Treasury in the same manner and at the same times as the heads of executive departments of the government are now required by law to account and report," was also superseded by this act making the Department of Agriculture an executive department.

"Before the Act of May 15, 1862, ch. 72, to establish a department of agriculture, became a law, the annual appropriations for agricultural purposes were expended under the direction of the commissioner of patents. In fact, until the year 1854, these appropriations were directed to be drawn from the patent fund, which was in charge of that officer." (1862) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 344.

SEC. 2. [Assistant secretary.] That there shall be in said Department an Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, who shall perform such duties as may be required by law or prescribed by the Secretary. [25 Stat. L. 659.]

SEC. 3. [Salaries.] That the Secretary of Agriculture shall receive the same salary as is paid to the Secretary of each of the Executive Departments, and the salary of the Assistant Secretary of Agriculture shall be the same as that now paid to the First Assistant Secretary of the Department of the Interior. [25 Stat. L. 659.]

The Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, carried twelve thousand dollars as salary for the Secretary of Agriculture and five thousand dollars as salary for the Assistant Secretary. 38 Stat. L. 1036.

SEC. 4. [Laws of existing department to apply.] That all laws and parts of laws relating to the Department of Agriculture now in existence, as far as the same are applicable and not in conflict with this act, and only so far, are continued in full force and effect. [25 Stat. L. 659.]

[Sec. 1.] [Secretary to perform all duties of commissioner.] * * ***

The authority granted to the Commissioner of Agriculture by the act of May twenty-nine, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, establishing the Bureau of Animal Industry, and by the provisions of the appropriation act for the Agricultural Department, approved July eighteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, relating to said Bureau, is hereby vested in the Secretary of Agriculture; And the said Secretary is hereby authorized and directed to perform all the duties named in said acts and all other acts of Congress in force on February eighth, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine, to be performed by the Commissioner of Agriculture. [26 Stat. L. 288.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of July 14, 1890, ch. 707.

The authority granted by the Act of July 18, 1888, ch. 677, 25 Stat. L. 333, is limited to the use of the sum therein appropriated. It is substantially repeated, but amplified though not made permanent, by the Appropriation Acts of 1889, 25 Stat. L. 839; 1890, 26 Stat. L. 287, and 1891, 26 Stat. L. 1049.

The provisions of the Act of July 18, 1888, are as follows: "Salaries and expenses Bureau of Animal Industry: For carrying out the provisions of the act of May twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, establishing the Bureau of Animal Industry, five hundred thousand dollars; and the Commissioner of Agriculture is hereby authorized to use any part of this sum he may deem necessary or expedient, and in such manner as he may think best, to prevent the spread of pleuro-pneumonia, and for this purpose to employ as many persons as he may deem necessary, and to expend any part of this sum in the purchase and destruction of diseased or exposed animals and the quarantine of the same whenever in his judgment it is essential to prevent the spread of pleuro-pneumonia from one State into another." [25 Stat. L. 333.]

As to the Bureau of Animal Industry, see ANIMALS.

[Sec. 1.] [Existing statutes applicable to reorganized bureaus.] * * ***

That all existing statutes relating to the Division of Soils, reorganized into the Bureau of Soils; the Division of Forestry, reorganized into the Bureau of Forestry; the Division of Chemistry, reorganized into the Bureau of Chemistry; and the Division of Botany, the Division of Pomology, the Division of Vegetable Physiology and Pathology, the Division of Agrostology and Experimental Gardens and Grounds, reorganized into the Bureau of Plant Industry, not otherwise repealed, shall remain in effect as applying to the respective bureaus into which the divisions named have been reorganized: [32 Stat. L. 303.]

[Sec. 1.] [Department seal to be procured.] * * ***

The Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized and directed to procure a proper seal, with such suitable inscriptions and devices as he may approve, to be known as the official seal of the Department of Agriculture, and to be kept and used to verify official documents, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe. [28 Stat. L. 272.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of Aug. 8, 1894, ch. 238.

[SEC. 1.] [Entomological work to be under control of agricultural department.] * * * For the completion of the work of the United States Entomological Commission under the Department of the Interior in the special investigation of the Rocky Mountain locust or grasshopper and the cottonworm, * * * Provided, That after the close of the next fiscal year all work of the character herein provided for shall be exclusively under the control of the Agricultural Department, and all operations under the Interior Department shall be fully and finally closed before the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and eighty-one. [21 Stat. L. 276.]

[SEC. 1.] [Legal work — solicitor.] * * * And hereafter the legal work of the Department of Agriculture shall be performed under the supervision and direction of the solicitor: [36 Stat. L. 416.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of May 26, 1910, ch. 258.

[SEC. 1.] [Deputy disbursing clerk — authority, bond, etc.] * * * The deputy disbursing clerk herein provided for shall hereafter have authority to sign checks in the name of the disbursing clerk; he shall give bond to the United States in such sum as the Secretary of the Treasury may require, and when so acting for the disbursing clerk shall be subject to all the liabilities and penalties prescribed by law for the official misconduct in like cases of the disbursing clerk for whom he acts, and the official bond of the disbursing clerk executed shall also be made to cover and apply to the acts of the deputy disbursing clerk. [36 Stat. L. 1259.]

As to the duties and liabilities of disbursing officers, see PUBLIC MONIES.

[SEC. 1.] [Classified laborers — promotion without examination.] * * * That all classified laborers whose positions were transferred from the lump funds to the statutory rolls by the Act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture approved March third, nineteen hundred and five, and who were by the last clause of that Act placed in the classified service without further examination in the grades and at the rates of compensation provided in said Act, are hereby made eligible for promotion without further examination. [34 Stat. L. 695.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 30, 1906, ch. 3913. The provision of the Act of March 3, 1905, referred to is as follows:

"All classified laborers whose positions are transferred from the lump funds to the statutory rolls are hereby placed in the classified service without further examination in the grades and at the rates of compensation herein provided." [33 Stat. L. 883.]

[SEC. 1.] [Watchmen given police powers.] * * * And hereafter all duly and lawfully constituted and appointed watchmen of the Department of Agriculture stationed in and upon the buildings and premises of said department in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, shall have and perform the same powers and duties, while on duty in and about said premises, as the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia. [35 Stat. L. 1057.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1909, ch. 1039.

[SEC. 1.] [Secretary to make appointments, changes in salaries.] * * * And hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized to make such appointments, promotions, and changes in salaries, to be paid out of the lump funds of the several bureaus, divisions, and offices of the Department as may be for the best interests of the service. [34 Stat. L. 1280.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1907, ch. 2907. Substantially the same provision occurs in earlier appropriation acts. The addition of the word "hereafter" makes this provision permanent.

A further provision, whereby the Secretary of Agriculture was "authorized and directed to submit to Congress each year a statement covering all appointments, promotions, or other changes made in the salaries paid from lump funds, giving in each case the title, salary, and amount of such change or changes, together with reasons therefor," was repealed by the Act of March 4, 1911, ch. 238, 36 Stat. L. 1264.

Appointment of experts to aid in enforcement of Food and Drugs Act.—Under this act the Secretary of Agriculture may appoint consulting scientific experts to aid in the enforcement of the Food and Drugs Act. (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. 300.

[SEC. 1.] [Details of department employees.] * * * That hereafter employees of the Division of Accounts and Disbursements may be detailed by the Secretary of Agriculture for accounting and disbursing work in any of the bureaus and offices of the department for duty in or out of the city of Washington, and employees of the bureaus and offices of the department may also be detailed to the Division of Accounts and Disbursements for duty in or out of the city of Washington. traveling expenses of employees so detailed to be paid from the appropriation of the bureau or office in connection with which such travel is performed. [37 Stat. L. 294.]

[SEC. 1.] [Details to and from other bureaus.] * * * That hereafter employees of the Library may be temporarily detailed by the Secretary of Agriculture for library service in the bureaus and offices of the department, and employees of the bureaus and offices of the department engaged in library work may also be temporarily detailed to the Library. [36 Stat. L. 1261.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1911, ch. 238.

[SEC. 1.] [Details from or to office of secretary.] * * * That details may be made from or to the office of the Secretary when necessary and the services of the person whom it is proposed to detail are not required in that office. [34 Stat. L. 1280.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1907, ch. 2907. A similar provision occurs in earlier Appropriation Acts.

[SEC. 1.] [Details of law clerks.] * * * That hereafter the law clerks may be detailed by the Secretary of Agriculture for service in or out of Washington; [36 Stat. L. 1236].

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1911, ch. 238. A similar provision except for the word "hereafter" occurred in the Appropriation Act of the preceding year.

[SEC. 1.] [Rate of compensation of officers or employees.] * * * And hereafter every officer or employee of the Department of Agriculture whose rate of compensation is specified herein shall receive compensation at the rate so specified. [37 Stat. L. 854.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 145.

[SEC. 1.] [Salaries to be paid from roll of bureau.] * * * And the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized and directed to pay the salary of each employee from the roll of the bureau, independent division, or office in which the employee is working, and no other: [34 Stat. L. 1280.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1907, ch. 2907.

The word "employees" as used in this section does not embrace persons whose services have been contracted for in connection with a particular case in court and whose employment has no degree of permanence. So an expert witness for the government, in cases arising under the Food and Drugs Act, is not an employee as the term is used in this section. (1909) 28 Op. Atty.-Gen. 75.

SEC. 2. [Salaries to persons receiving other compensation.] That no part of the money herein or hereafter appropriated for the Department of Agriculture shall be paid to any person, as additional salary or compensation, receiving at the same time other compensation as an officer or employee of the Government; * * * [23 Stat. L. 356.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 3, 1885, ch. 338.

[SEC. 1.] [Lump-sum appropriations — payment for scientific, etc., work — pay of officers and employees established.] * * * That hereafter section seven of the Act approved August twenty-sixth, nineteen hundred and twelve (Thirty-seventh Statutes, page six hundred and twenty-six), and any amendments thereto, shall not apply to the payment, out of moneys appropriated or which may be hereafter appropriated in lump sum for the Department of Agriculture, for personal services of employees engaged in strictly scientific or technical work: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall be construed to authorize the transfer of any person employed at a specific salary and the payment of compensation from lump-sum appropriations at a rate greater than said specific salary. [37 Stat. L. 854.]

This provision is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 145. The Act of August 26, 1912, referred to places restrictions on salaries paid from money appropriated in lump sum.

[SEC. 1.] [Scientific investigators, etc.—salaries.] * * * That hereafter the maximum salary of any scientific investigator, or other employee engaged in scientific work and paid from the general appropriations of the Department of Agriculture, shall not exceed at the rate of $4,500 per annum. [38 Stat. L. 441.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 30, 1914, ch. 131. Similar provisions, without the word "hereafter" and fixing the salaries of such employees at a less amount, were contained in earlier appropriation acts.

"Employee" as here used does not include expert witnesses for the government in cases arising under the Food and Drugs Act. (1909) 28 Op. Atty-Gen. 75, wherein Attorney-General Wickersham said: "In Louisville, etc., R. R. Co. v. Wilson (138 U. S. 501, 505), it was insisted on behalf of the defendant in error that he was entitled to have paid him a certain sum as attorney's fees under an order of court directing the receiver to pay 'salaries of officers and wages of employees' that had accrued within a specified time. The court held that Wilson did not fall within the meaning of the term 'employee' as used in said order, and in passing upon this question used the following language: 'The terms "officers" and "employees" both alike refer to those in regular and continual service. Within the ordinary acceptation of the terms, one who is engaged to render service in a particular transaction is neither an officer nor an employee. They imply continuity of service, and exclude those employed for a special and single transaction. An attorney of an individual, retained for a single suit, is not his employee. It is true, he has engaged to render services; but his engagement is rather that of a contractor than that of an employee. The services of appellee, therefore, did not come within the order appointing the receiver.' See also Vane v. Newcombe (132 U. S. 220, 237); Frick Company v. Norfolk & O. V. R. Co. (86 Fed. 725, 738). I think the language of the court in Louisville, etc., R. R. Co. v. Wilson is equally applicable to the meaning of the word 'employee' as used in the statutes above cited, and that it does not embrace an individual whose services have been contracted for in connection with a particular case in court, and with reference to whose employment there is no degree of permanency."

[SEC. 1.] [Assignments of pay allowed employees.] * * * And hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to permit employees of the Department of Agriculture to make assignments of their pay, under such regulations as he may prescribe, during such time as they may be in the employ of the said department. [35 Stat. L. 1057.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1909, ch. 301.

[SEC. 1.] [Leave of absence to employees.] * * * The employees of the Department of Agriculture, outside of the city of Washington, may hereafter, in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, be granted leave of absence not to exceed fifteen days in any one year, which leave may in exceptional and meritorious cases where such an employee is ill, be extended, in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, not to exceed fifteen days additional in any one year. [35 Stat. L. 267.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of May 23, 1908, ch. 192. Similar provisions having reference to employees of particular bureaus were contained in appropriation acts of previous years.

[SEC. 1.] [Leave of absence to employees in Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and Guam.] * * * Hereafter employees of the Department of Agriculture assigned to permanent duty in Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and Guam may, in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, without additional expense to the Government, be granted leave of absence not to exceed thirty days in any one year, which leave may, in exceptional and meritorious cases where an employee is ill, be extended, in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, not to exceed thirty days additional in any one year. [38 Stat. L. 441.]

[SEC. 1.] [Purchase of mileage books, etc.] * * * And hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to purchase from appropriations made for traveling expenses for employees of the Department of Agriculture, mileage and mileage books, at commercial rates, in the manner in which such mileage or mileage books are usually purchased. [34 Stat. L. 1281.]

[SEC. 1.] [Employees allowed expense of transferring property when stations changed.] * * * That hereafter officers and employees of the Department of Agriculture transferred from one official station to another for permanent duty, when authorized by the Secretary of Agriculture, may be allowed actual traveling expenses, including charges for the transfer of their effects and personal property used in official work, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture. [36 Stat. L. 1265.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1911, ch. 238.

[SEC. 1.] [Allowance to officials and employees for travel expenses.]

* * * That hereafter, when officials and employees of the Department of Agriculture are traveling on official business in the United States, they may be allowed necessary railroad and steamboat fares, sleeping berth, and stateroom on steamboats, livery hire and stage fare, and other means of conveyance between points not accessible by railroad, but in lieu of subsistence and all other traveling expenses they may receive a per diem allowance, to be fixed by the Secretary in each case, in addition to their regular salaries, subject to such rules and regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe.

That hereafter officials and employees of the Department of Agriculture may, when authorized by the Secretary of Agriculture, receive reimbursement for moneys expended for street-car fares at their official headquarters when expended in the transaction of official business. [37 Stat. L. 300.]

[SEC. 1.] [Advances of public money to agents, etc.—bonds.] That advances of public money from the appropriations for the Department of Agriculture shall be made by the Secretary of Agriculture only to such chiefs of field parties, agricultural explorers, special agents, and others as shall have given bonds in such sums as the Secretary of Agriculture shall direct. [32 Stat. L. 303.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 3, 1902, ch. 985.

[SEC. 1.] [Purchases for bureaus, etc.—exchange of typewriters, etc.]

* * * That hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture may purchase stationery, supplies, furniture, and miscellaneous materials from this appropriation and transfer the same at actual cost to the various bureaus, divisions, and offices of the Department of Agriculture in the city of Washington, reimbursement therefor to be made to this appropriation by said bureaus, divisions, and offices from their lump-fund appropriations by transfer settlements through the Treasury Department: Provided further, That the Secretary of Agriculture may hereafter exchange typewriters and computing, addressing, and duplicating machines purchased from any lump-fund appropriation of the Department of Agriculture. [37 Stat. L. 296.]

[SEC. 1.] [Exchange of apparatus and equipment.] * * * The Secretary of Agriculture may hereafter exchange general scientific apparatus and laboratory equipment purchased from any appropriation of the Department of Agriculture. [38 Stat. L. 441.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 30, 1914, ch. 131.

[SEC. 1.] [Books and periodicals of library — exchange authorized.] * * * That hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture may exchange books and periodicals of the library not needed for permanent use for other books and periodicals. [38 Stat. L. 1107.]

This is from the Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 144.

[SEC. 1.] [Sale of photographic prints, condemned property, etc.] * * * Hereafter he [the Secretary of Agriculture] may dispose of photographic prints (including bromide enlargements), lantern slides, transparencies, blueprints, and forest maps at cost and ten per centum additional, and condemned property or materials under his charge in the same manner as provided by law for other bureaus; [34 Stat. L. 1269.]

[Sale of prints and lantern slides.] * * * And hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized to furnish, upon application, prints and lantern slides from negatives in the possession of the Department and to charge for the same a price to cover the cost of preparation, such price to be determined and established by the Secretary of Agriculture, and the money received from such sales to be deposited in the Treasury of the United States. [34 Stat. L. 1281.]

The above two paragraphs are from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1907, ch. 2907. And with the exception of the addition in the second paragraph of the word "hereafter," which makes it permanent, the provision is found in the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 30, 1906, 34 Stat. L. 696.

[SEC. 1.] [Sale of pathological and zoölogical specimens.] * * * And hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to prepare and sell at cost such pathological and zoölogical specimens as he may deem of scientific or educational value to scientists or others engaged in the work of hygiene and sanitation: Provided, That all moneys received from the sale of such specimens shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts. [37 Stat. L. 833.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 145.

[SEC. 1.] [Sales of waste paper, etc.] * * * And hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to sell as waste waste paper, or otherwise to dispose of the accumulation of Department files which do not constitute permanent records, and all other documents and publications which have become obsolete or worthless. [34 Stat. L. 1281.]

[SEC. 1.] [Sale, etc., of animals and products permitted — deposit of receipts.] * * * And hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to sell in the open market or to exchange for other breeding animals or animal products to the best advantage, without the usual condemnation proceedings and public auction, such animals or animal products produced or purchased under the appropriations made by Congress for the use of the Bureau of Animal Industry as may not be needed in the work of that bureau: Provided, That all moneys received from the sale of such animals or animal products, or as a bonus in the exchange of the same, shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts. [37 Stat. L. 274.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of Aug. 10, 1912, ch. 284.

[SEC. 1.] [Sale, etc., of live stock — disposition of moneys received.] * * * Hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to sell in the open market or to exchange for other live stock such animals or animal products as cease to be needed in the work of the department, and all moneys received from the sale of such animals or animal products or as a bonus in the exchange of the same shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts. [38 Stat. L. 1114.]

This and the two paragraphs following are from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 144.

[Samples of sugars, etc., furnished state and municipal officers — price charged — disposition of receipts.] * * * Hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture may furnish, upon application, samples of pure sugars, naval stores, microscopical specimens, and other products to State and municipal officers, educational institutions, and other parties and charge for the same a price to cover the cost thereof, such price to be determined and established by the Secretary, and the money received from sales to be deposited in the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts. [38 Stat. L. 1101.]

[American food products shipped to foreign countries — inspection — issuance of certificate of results.] * * * That hereafter no certificate of results of any such inspection shall issue unless the owner or his agent shall first pay to the Secretary of Agriculture, at a price to be determined and established by the Secretary, the actual cost of the inspection, the money received to be deposited in the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts. [38 Stat. L. 1102.]

"Such inspection" in the above paragraph relates to the right of owners or shippers of American food products shipped to foreign countries to have the same inspected by the Agricultural Department.

SEC. 2. [Detailed statement of expenditures.] * * * And in addition to the proper vouchers and accounts for the sums appropriated for the said Department to be furnished to the accounting officers of the Treasury, the Commissioner of Agriculture shall, at the commencement of each regular session, present to Congress a detailed statement of the expenditure of all appropriations for said Department for the last preceding fiscal year. [23 Stat. L. 356.]

The above provision is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 3, 1885, ch. 338.

[SEC. 1.] [Estimates for Department of Agriculture.] * * * That hereafter the estimates of appropriations for the Department of Agriculture shall be prepared and submitted each year according to the order and arrangement of the Act for the year preceding; and any changes in such order or arrangement desired by the Secretary of Agriculture may be submitted by note in the estimates. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of Agriculture to submit, in the Book of Estimates for the fiscal year nineteen hundred and four, and annually thereafter, immediately following estimates of each of the respective offices, bureaus and divisions of the Department of Agriculture a statement showing in detail the number of clerks who were employed in the District of Columbia upon regular and continuous work for thirty days or more during the previous fiscal year in or under such offices, bureaus or divisions under authority of and paid from general appropriations, indicating in the case of every such employment the rate of compensation received and the appropriation from which paid. [32 Stat. L. 303.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 3, 1902, ch. 985.

A provision of the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1907, 34 Stat. L. 1282, requiring the Secretary of Agriculture to submit to Congress yearly "in addition to the estimates now required by law, classified and detailed estimates of every subject of expenditure intended for the Agricultural Department for the next fiscal year, and detailed reports of all expenditures under any appropriation for such service during the preceding fiscal year," was repealed by a provision of the Act of March 4, 1911, ch. 238, 36 Stat. L. 1264.

[SEC. 1.] [Estimates for officers, clerks, and employees.] * * * The Secretary of Agriculture for the fiscal year nineteen hundred and twelve, and annually thereafter, shall transmit to the Secretary of the Treasury for submission to Congress in the Book of Estimates detailed estimates for all executive officers, clerks, and employees below the grade of clerk, indicating the salary or compensation of each, necessary to be employed by the various bureaus, offices, and divisions of the Department of Agriculture. [36 Stat. L. 440.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of May 26, 1910, ch. 256, and is limited by the Act of Aug. 10, 1912, ch. 284, given below.

[SEC. 1.] [Estimates for employees — exceptions.] * * * Hereafter so much of the Act of May twenty-sixth, nineteen hundred and ten (Thirty-sixth Statutes, page four hundred and sixteen), as requires the Secretary of Agriculture to transmit annually to the Secretary of the Treasury, for submission to Congress, detailed estimates for executive officers, clerks, and other employees in the various bureaus, offices, and divisions of the Department of Agriculture shall not apply to such employees in the meat-inspection service or employees engaged in the enforcement of the insecticide Act of nineteen hundred and ten. [37 Stat. L. 301.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of Aug. 10, 1912, ch. 284.

The provisions of the Act of May 26, 1910, ch. 256, mentioned in the text, are given in the paragraph immediately preceding.

For the Insecticide Act of April 26, 1910, ch. 191, see infra, p. 220.

[SEC. 1.] [Report of expenditures for vehicles and boats.] * * * That the Secretary of Agriculture shall, on the first day of each regular session of Congress, make a report to Congress showing the amount expended under the provisions of this paragraph for the purchase of such vehicles and boats during the preceding fiscal year. [38 Stat. L. 442.]

This is a proviso of the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 30, 1914, ch. 131, following an appropriation for motor vehicles and motor boats for the field work of the department, to which the words "such vehicles and boats" refer.

[SEC. 1.] [Report of expenditure of appropriation for rent.] * * * For rent of buildings and parts of buildings in the District of Columbia, for use of the various bureaus, divisions, and offices of the Department of Agriculture, * * * Provided, That the Secretary of Agriculture shall submit annually to Congress in his estimates of appropriations a statement showing what proportion of this appropriation is paid for the quarters occupied by the various branches of the department. [38 Stat. L. 1108.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 144.

II. EXPERIMENT STATIONS.

An act to establish agricultural experiment stations in connection with the colleges established in the several States under the provisions of an act approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and of the acts supplementary thereto.

[Act of March 2, 1887, ch. 314, 24 Stat. L. 440.]

[SEC. 1.] [Aid to state agricultural experiment stations at agricultural colleges.] That in order to aid in acquiring and diffusing among the people of the United States useful and practical information on subjects connected with agriculture, and to promote scientific investigation and experiment respecting the principles and applications of agricultural science, there shall be established, under direction of the college or colleges or agricultural department of colleges in each State or Territory established, or which hereafter may be established, in accordance with the provisions of an act approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled "An act donating public lands to the several States and Territories which may provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts," or any of the supplements to said act, a department to be known and designated as an "agricultural experiment station:" Provided, That in any State or Territory in which two such colleges have been or may be so established the appropriation hereinafter made to such State or Territory shall be equally divided between such colleges, unless the legislature of such State or Territory shall otherwise direct. [24 Stat. L. 440.]

This act is known as the "Agricultural Experiment Stations Act of 1887." It is also known as the "Hatch Act."

Donation of public lands for school purposes under Act of July 2, 1862.—See EDUCATION; PUBLIC LANDS.

[SEC. 2.] [Object and duty of such station.] That it shall be the object and duty of said experiment stations to conduct original researches or verify experiments on the physiology of plants and animals;

The diseases to which they are severally subject, with the remedies for the same;

The chemical composition of useful plants at their different stages of growth;

The comparative advantages of rotative cropping as pursued under a varying series of crops;

The capacity of new plants or trees for acclimation;

The analysis of soils and water;

The chemical composition of manures, natural or artificial, with experiments designed to test their comparative effects on crops of different kinds;

The adaptation and value of grasses and forage plants;

The composition and digestibility of the different kinds of food for domestic animals;

The scientific and economic questions involved in the production of butter and cheese;

And such other researches or experiments bearing directly on the agricultural industry of the United States as may in each case be deemed advisable, having due regard to the varying conditions and needs of the respective States or Territories. [24 Stat. L. 440.]

By the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 3, 1906, ch. 1405, 33 Stat. L. 869, the experiment stations are directed to co-operate with the Secretary of Agriculture in establishing and maintaining experimental grass stations for the study of different grasses and forage plants, their adaptability to various climates, and other questions relating thereto. Similar provisions appear in the Agricultural Appropriation Acts for previous years.

By the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 3, 1905, ch. 1405, 33 Stat. L. 882, the experiment stations are authorized and directed to co-operate with the Secretary of Agriculture in irrigation and drainage investigations. The same provision has appeared in prior Agricultural Appropriation Acts.

[SEC. 3.] [Secretary to advise, assist, furnish forms, etc.] That in order to secure, as far as practicable, uniformity of methods and results in the work of said stations, it shall be the duty of the United States Commissioner of Agriculture to furnish forms, as far as practicable, for the tabulation of results of investigation or experiments; to indicate, from time to time, such lines of inquiry as to him shall seem most important; and, in general, to furnish such advice and assistance as will best promote the purposes of this act. It shall be the duty of each of said stations, annually, on or before the first day of February, to make to the governor of the State or Territory in which it is located a full and detailed report of its operations, including a statement of receipts and expenditures, a copy of which report shall be sent to each of said stations, to the said Commissioner of Agriculture, and to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. [24 Stat. L. 441.]

By the Agricultural Appropriation Acts for many years the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to rent offices, employ assistants and clerks, and incur such other expense as may be necessary to carry out the objects of the acts relating to experiment stations. A provision of this character is contained in the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1907, ch. 2907, 34 Stat. L. 1278.

By the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 30, 1914, ch. 131, 38 Stat. L. 437, the Secretary of Agriculture was authorized to prescribe the form of the annual financial statement here required. Similar provisions have occurred in the Agricultural Appropriation Acts for previous years.

SEC. 4. [Bulletins to be issued and mailed free.] That bulletins or reports of progress shall be published at said stations at least once in three months, one copy of which shall be sent to each newspaper in the States or Territories in which they are respectively located, and to such individuals actually engaged in farming as may request the same, and as far as the means of the station will permit. Such bulletins or reports and the annual reports of said stations shall be transmitted in the mails of the United States free of charge for postage, under such regulations as the Postmaster-General may from time to time prescribe. [24 Stat. L. 441.]

SEC. 5. [Annual appropriation — buildings.] That for the purpose of paying the necessary expenses of conducting investigations and experiments and printing and distributing the results as hereinbefore prescribed, the sum of fifteen thousand dollars per annum is hereby appropriated to each State, to be specially provided for by Congress in the appropriations from year to year, and to each Territory entitled under the provisions of section eight of this act, out of any money in the Treasury proceeding from the sales of public lands, to be paid in equal quarterly payments, on the first day of January, April, July, and October in each year, to the treasurer or other officer duly appointed by the governing boards of said colleges to receive the same, the first payment to be made on the first day of October, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven: Provided, however, That out of the first annual appropriation so received by any station an amount not exceeding one-fifth may be expended in the erection, enlargement, or repair of a building or buildings necessary for carrying on the work of such station; and thereafter an amount not exceeding five per centum of such annual appropriation may be so expended. [24 Stat. L. 441.]

The appropriation here made was increased by the Act of March 16, 1906, ch. 951, sec. 1, 34 Stat. L. 63. See infra, p. 216.

SEC. 6. [Unexpended balance.] That whenever it shall appear to the Secretary of the Treasury from the annual statement of receipts and expenditures of any of said stations that a portion of the preceding annual appropriation remains unexpended, such amount shall be deducted from the next succeeding annual appropriation to such station, in order that the amount of money appropriated to any station shall not exceed the amount actually and necessarily required for its maintenance and support. [24 Stat. L. 441.]

SEC. 7. [Legal relation to states not affected.] That nothing in this act shall be construed to impair or modify the legal relation existing between any of the said colleges and the government of the States or Territories in which they are respectively located. [24 Stat. L. 441.]

SEC. 8. [Stations established separate from colleges or from those not agricultural.] That in States having colleges entitled under this section to the benefits of this act and having also agricultural experiment stations established by law separate from said colleges, such States shall be authorized to apply such benefits to experiments at stations so established by such States; And in case any State shall have established under the provisions of said act of July second aforesaid, an agricultural department or experimental station, in connection with any university, college or institution not distinctively an agricultural college or school, and such State shall have established or shall hereafter establish a separate agricultural college or school, which shall have connected therewith an experimental farm or station, the legislature of such State may apply in whole or in part the appropriation by this act made, to such separate agricultural college, or school, and no legislature shall by contract express or implied disable itself from so doing. [24 Stat. L. 441.]

SEC. 9. [Legislative assent necessary.] That the grants of moneys authorized by this act are made subject to the legislative assent of the several States and Territories to the purposes of said grants: Provided, That payment of such instalments of the appropriation herein made as shall become due to any State before the adjournment of the regular session of its legislature meeting next after the passage of this act shall be made upon the assent of the governor thereof duly certified to the Secretary of the Treasury. [24 Stat. L. 442.]

When the legislature is not in session the governor may assent, see Act of June 7, 1888, infra, this page.

SEC. 10. [No permanent obligation imposed on U. S.] Nothing in this act shall be held or construed as binding the United States to continue any payments from the Treasury to any or all the States or institutions mentioned in this act, but Congress may at any time amend, suspend or repeal any or all the provisions of this act. [24 Stat. L. 442.]

This further duty was imposed on experiment stations by the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 2, 1889, ch. 373.

[SEC. 1.] [Card index of agricultural literature—copies furnished institutions or individuals.] * * * And the Secretary of Agriculture hereafter may furnish to such institutions or individuals as may care to buy them copies of the card index of agricultural literature prepared by the Department of Agriculture in connection with its administration of the Act of March second, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven (Twenty-fourth Statutes at Large, page four hundred and forty), and the Act of March sixteenth, nineteen hundred and six (Thirty-fourth Statutes at Large, page sixty-three), and the Acts amendatory of and supplementary thereto, and charge for the same a price covering the additional expenses involved in the preparation of these copies, the money received from such sales to be deposited in the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts. [38 Stat. L. 1109.]

This is from the Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 144. The Act of 1887 referred to is the act establishing experiment stations (supra, p. 212), while the Act of March 16, 1906, is the act providing for an increased annual appropriation for such stations. Similar provisions have occurred in the Agricultural Appropriation Acts of previous years. As to card indexes generally, see infra, this title, division VI, Agricultural Reports and Literature.

An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish agricultural stations in connection with the colleges established in the several States under the provisions of an act approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and the acts supplementary thereto."

[Act of June 7, 1888, ch. 373, 25 Stat. L. 176.]

[SEC. 1.] [When legislature is not in session, governor may assent.] That the grant of money authorized by the act of Congress entitled "An act to establish agricultural experiment stations in connection with the colleges established in the several States under the provisions of an act approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and of acts supplementary thereto," are subject as therein provided to the legislative assent of the States or Territories to be affected thereby; but as to such installments of the appropriations as may be now due or may hereafter become due, when the legislature may not be in session, the governor of said State or Territory may make the assent therein provided, and upon a duly certified copy thereof to the Secretary of the Treasury he shall cause the same to be paid in the manner provided in the act of which this is amendatory, until the termination of the next regular session of the legislature of such State or Territory. [25 Stat. L. 176.]

See sec. 9 of the Act of March 2, 1887, supra, p. 214.

See also sec. 2 of the Act of March 16, 1906, providing for increased annual appropriation, infra, this page.

An act to provide increased annual appropriation for agricultural experiment stations and regulating the expenditure thereof.

[SEC. 1.] [Annual appropriation to states and territories for experiment stations increased — amount of annual increase.] That there shall be, and hereby is, annually appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid as hereinafter provided, to each State and Territory, for the more complete endowment and maintenance of agricultural experiment stations now established or which may hereafter be established in accordance with the Act of Congress approved March second, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, the sum of five thousand dollars in addition to the sum named in said Act for the year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and six, and an annual increase of the amount of such appropriation thereafter for five years by an additional sum of two thousand dollars over the preceding year, and the annual amount to be paid thereafter to each State and Territory shall be thirty thousand dollars, to be applied only to paying the necessary expenses of conducting original researches or experiments bearing directly on the agricultural industry of the United States, having due regard to the varying conditions and needs of the respective States or Territories. [34 Stat. L. 63.]

This Act is known as the Agricultural Experiment Stations Act of 1906.

Construction of this Act, see provision from the Act of June 30, 1906, ch. 3913, infra, p. 218.

SEC. 2. [Payments quarterly — report of receipts, etc. — legislative assent necessary — assent of governors.] That the sums hereby appropriated to the States and Territories for the further endowment and support of agricultural experiment stations shall be annually paid in equal quarterly payments on the first day of January, April, July, and October of each year by the Secretary of the Treasury, upon the warrant of the Secretary of Agriculture, out of the Treasury of the United States, to the treasurer or other officer duly appointed by the governing boards of said experiment stations to receive the same, and such officers shall be required to report to the Secretary of Agriculture on or before the first day of September of each year a detailed statement of the amount so received and of its disbursement, on schedules prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture. The grants of money authorized by this Act are made subject to legislative assent of the several States and Territories to the purpose of said grants: Provided, That payment of such installments of the appropriation herein made as shall become due to any State or Territory before the adjournment of the regular session of legislature meeting next after the passage of this Act shall be made upon the assent of the governor thereof, duly certified by the Secretary of the Treasury. [34 Stat. L. 63.]

SEC. 3. [Apportionments when misapplied, etc.—restriction — annual reports to governors.] That if any portion of the moneys received by the designated officer of any State or Territory for the further and more complete endowment, support, and maintenance of agricultural experiment stations as provided in this Act shall by any action or contingency be diminished or lost or be misapplied, it shall be replaced by said State or Territory to which it belongs, and until so replaced no subsequent appropriation shall be apportioned or paid to such State or Territory; and no portion of said moneys exceeding five per centum of each annual appropriation shall be applied, directly or indirectly, under any pretense whatever, to the purchase, erection, preservation, or repair of any building or buildings, or to the purchase or rental of land. It shall be the duty of each of said stations annually, on or before the first day of February, to make to the governor of the State or Territory in which it is located a full and detailed report of its operations, including a statement of receipts and expenditures, a copy of which report shall be sent to each of said stations, to the Secretary of Agriculture, and to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. [34 Stat. L. 63.]

SEC. 4. [Certificates as to compliance with the law, etc.—reasons for withholding allotments to be reported — disposal of withheld allotments.] That on or before the first day of July in each year after the passage of this Act the Secretary of Agriculture shall ascertain and certify to the Secretary of the Treasury as to each State and Territory whether it is complying with the provisions of this Act and is entitled to receive its share of the annual appropriation for agricultural experiment stations under this Act and the amount which thereupon each is entitled, respectively, to receive. If the Secretary of Agriculture shall withhold a certificate from any State or Territory of its appropriation, the facts and reasons therefor shall be reported to the President and the amount involved shall be kept separate in the Treasury until the close of the next Congress in order that the State or Territory may, if it shall so desire, appeal to Congress from the determination of the Secretary of Agriculture. If the next Congress shall not direct such sum to be paid, it shall be covered into the Treasury; and the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby charged with the proper administration of this law. [34 Stat. L. 64.]

SEC. 5. [Report to Congress.] That the Secretary of Agriculture shall make an annual report to Congress on the receipts and expenditures and work of the agricultural experiment stations in all of the States and Territories, and also whether the appropriation of any State or Territory has been withheld; and if so, the reason therefor. [34 Stat. L. 64.]

SEC. 6. [Amendment.] That Congress may at any time amend, suspend, or repeal any or all of the provisions of this Act. [34 Stat. L. 64.]

By the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 144, 38 Stat. L. 1109, the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to sell such products as are obtained on the land belonging to the experiment stations in Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and Guam. Similar provisions appear in the Appropriation Acts for previous years.

[SEC. 1.] [Construction of Act of March 16, 1906 — allotment — payments.] * * * The Act of Congress approved March sixteenth, nineteen hundred and six, entitled "An Act to provide for an increased annual appropriation for agricultural experiment stations and regulating the expenditures thereof," shall be construed to appropriate for each station the sum of five thousand dollars for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and six, the sum of seven thousand dollars for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and seven, the sum of nine thousand dollars for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and eight, the sum of eleven thousand dollars for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and nine, the sum of thirteen thousand dollars for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and ten, and the sum of fifteen thousand dollars for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and eleven. The sum of five thousand dollars appropriated for the fiscal year nineteen hundred and six shall be paid on or before June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and six, and the amounts appropriated for the subsequent years shall be paid as provided in the said Act to each State and Territory for the more complete endowment and maintenance of agricultural experiment stations now established or which may hereafter be established in accordance with the Act of Congress approved March second, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven. [34 Stat. L. 696.]

This and the paragraph following are from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 30, 1906, ch. 3913. The Act of March 16, 1906, above mentioned, is given supra, p. 216. And the Act of March 2, 1887, referred to is given supra, p. 212.

[Leaves of absence to employees in Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico.] * * * And the employees of the experiment stations in Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico may hereafter, in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, without additional expense to the Government, be granted leave of absence not to exceed fifteen days in any one year, which leave may, in exceptional and meritorious cases where such an employee is ill, be extended in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture not to exceed fifteen days additional in any one year. [34 Stat. L. 694.]

By a provision of the Appropriation Act of June 30, 1914 (see supra, p. 206), leave of absence is granted to employees assigned to permanent duty at these points and at Guam.

[SEC. 1.] [Report of expenditures — assistants, etc. — payment to States.] * * * The Secretary of Agriculture * * * shall ascertain whether the expenditures under the appropriation hereby made are in accordance with the provisions of said Act, and shall make report thereon to Congress; and the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized to employ such assistants, clerks, and other persons as he may deem necessary, in the city of Washington and elsewhere, and to incur such other expenses for office fixtures and supplies, stationery, traveling, freight, and express charges, illustration of the Experiment Station Record, bulletins and reports, as he may find essential in carrying out the objects of the above Acts, and the sums apportioned to the several States shall be paid quarterly in advance. [31 Stat. L. 935.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 2, 1901, ch. 805, following an appropriation to carry into effect the provisions of the Act of March 2, 1887, ch. 314, supra, p. 212, and to which the words "said Act" refer.

III. INSECTS AND INSECTICIDES.

An Act To prohibit importation or interstate transportation of insect pests, and the use of the United States mails for that purpose.

[SEC. 1.] [Importation or interstate transportation of insect pests prohibited.] That no railroad, steamboat, express, stage, or other transportation company shall knowingly transport from one State or Territory into any other State or Territory, or from the District of Columbia into a State or Territory, or from a State or Territory into the District of Columbia, or from a foreign country into the United States, the gypsy moth, brown-tail moth, leopard moth, plum curculio, hop plant-louse, boll weevil, or any of them in a live state, or other insect in a live state which is notoriously injurious to cultivated crops, including vegetables, field crops, bush fruits, orchard trees, forest trees, or shade trees; or the eggs, pupæ, or larvæ of any insect injurious as aforesaid, except when shipped for scientific purposes under the regulations hereinafter provided for; nor shall any person remove from one State or Territory into another State or Territory, or from a foreign country into the United States, or from a State or Territory into the District of Columbia, or from the District of Columbia into any State or Territory, except for scientific purposes under the regulations hereinafter provided for, the gypsy moth, brown-tail moth, leopard moth, plum curculio, hop plant-louse, boll weevil, or any of them in a live state, or other insect in a live state which is notoriously injurious to cultivated crops, including vegetables, field crops, bush fruits, orchard trees, forest trees, or shade trees; or the eggs, pupæ, or larvæ of any insect injurious as aforesaid. [33 Stat. L. 1269.]

SEC. 2. [Sending insect pests by mail prohibited.] That any letter, parcel, box, or other package containing the gypsy moth, brown-tail moth, leopard moth, plum curculio, hop plant-louse, boll weevil, or any of them in a live state, or other insect in a live state which is notoriously injurious to cultivated crops, including vegetables, field crops, bush fruits, orchard trees, forest trees, or shade trees, or any letter, parcel, box, or package which contains the eggs, pupæ, or larvæ of any insect injurious as aforesaid, whether sealed as first-class matter or not, is hereby declared to be non-mailable matter, except when mailed for scientific purposes under the regulations hereinafter provided for, and shall not be conveyed in the mails, nor delivered from any post-office, nor by any letter carrier, except when mailed for scientific purposes under the regulations hereinafter provided for; and any person who shall knowingly deposit, or cause to be deposited, for mailing or delivery, anything declared by this section to be nonmailable matter, or cause the same to be taken from the mails for the purpose of retaining, circulating, or disposing of, or of aiding in the retention, circulation, or disposition of the same shall, for each and every offense, be fined, upon conviction thereof, not more than five thousand dollars or imprisoned at hard labor not more than five years, or both, at the discretion of the court: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize any person to open any letter or sealed matter of the first-class not addressed to himself. [33 Stat. L. 1270.]

SEC. 3. [Regulations for shipment.] That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of Agriculture, and he is hereby authorized and directed to prepare and promulgate rules and regulations under which the insects covered by sections one and two of this Act may be mailed, shipped, transported, delivered, and removed, for scientific purposes, from one State or Territory into another State or Territory, or from the District of Columbia into a State or Territory, or from a State or Territory into the District of Columbia, and any insects covered by sections one and two of this Act may be so mailed, shipped, transported, delivered, and removed, for scientific purposes, under the rules and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture: Provided, That the rules and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, in so far as they affect the method of mailing insects, shall be approved by the Postmaster-General, and nothing in this Act shall be construed to prevent any State from making and enforcing laws in furtherance of the purposes of this Act, prohibiting or regulating the admission into that State of insects from a foreign country. [33 Stat. L. 1270.]

SEC. 4. [Penalties for violation of act.] That any person, company, or corporation who shall knowingly violate the provisions of section one of this Act shall, for each offense, be fined, upon conviction thereof, not more than five thousand dollars or imprisoned at hard labor not more than five years, or both, at the discretion of the court. [33 Stat. L. 1270.]

An Act For preventing the manufacture, sale, or transportation of adulterated or misbranded Paris greens, lead arsenates, and other insecticides, and also fungicides, and for regulating traffic therein and for other purposes.

[Act of April 26, 1910, ch. 191, 36 Stat. L. 331.]

[SEC. 1.] [Manufacture of adulterated or misbranded articles unlawful—punishment for.] That it shall be unlawful for any person to manufacture within any Territory or the District of Columbia any insecticide, Paris green, lead arsenate, or fungicide which is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act; and any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not to exceed two hundred dollars for the first offense, and upon conviction for each subsequent offense be fined not to exceed three hundred dollars, or sentenced to imprisonment for not to exceed one year, or both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. [36 Stat. L. 331.]

Food and Drugs Act contrasted.—In United States v. Thirty Dozen Packages of Roach Food, (D. C. Md. 1913) 202 Fed. 271, the court contrasting this act with the Food and Drugs Act, enacted June 30, 1906, ch. 3915 (see FOOD AND DRUGS), said: "The Insecticide Act contains 14 sections; the Food and Drugs Act, 13. The Insecticide Act contains a section providing that it shall be referred to as the Insecticide Act of 1910. There is no similar provision in the Food and Drugs Act. Otherwise the two enactments contain the same number of sections, in precisely the same order, and in very large part in precisely the same words. Obviously the draftsman of the Insecticide Act took the Food and Drugs Act and copied it literally, except where alterations were necessary in order to adapt it to the purpose in view, or where he wished to make a definite change in a particular provision. From the changes which were so made, it is possible to gather something of the purpose of some of the new provisions in the later act."

SEC. 2. [Shipment in interstate or foreign commerce prohibited — punishment for shipping, delivery, etc.—articles made for foreign purchasers.] That the introduction into any State or Territory or the District of Columbia from any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or from any foreign country, or shipment to any foreign country, of any insecticide, or Paris green, or lead arsenate, or fungicide which is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act is hereby prohibited; and any person who shall ship or deliver for shipment from any State or Territory or the District of Columbia to any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or to a foreign country, or who shall receive in any State or Territory or the District of Columbia from any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or foreign country, and having so received, shall deliver, in original unbroken packages, for pay or otherwise, or offer to deliver, to any other person, any such article so adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act, or any person who shall sell or offer for sale in the District of Columbia or any Territory of the United States any such adulterated or misbranded insecticide, or Paris green, or lead arsenate, or fungicide, or export or offer to export the same to any foreign country, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and for such offense be fined not exceeding two hundred dollars for the first offense, and upon conviction for each subsequent offense not exceeding three hundred dollars, or be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court: Provided, That no article shall be deemed misbranded or adulterated within the provisions of this Act when intended for export to any foreign country and prepared or packed according to the specifications or directions of the foreign purchaser; but if said articles shall be in fact sold or offered for sale for domestic use or consumption, then this proviso shall not exempt said article from the operation of any of the other provisions of this Act. [36 Stat. L. 331.]

"Introduction."—The statute does not cover a shipment of goods from one point to another point in the same state although the shipment was by a route through other states. United States v. Powers-Weightman-Rosengarten Co., (S. D.

N. Y. 1913) 211 Fed. 169, wherein the court said: "As I read the statute, 'introduction' means a bringing into another state of the prohibited article in such a way as that it may become a part of the general property within that state. Mere passing of the goods through other states en route to the state of destination does not make them part of the general property of those states."

Pleading fraudulent intent.—Absence of fraudulent intent on the part of the shipper is not a defense to proceedings under this act, therefore an allegation that the misbranding words were intended to convey a false meaning is immaterial. United States v. Two Cases of Chloro-Naphtholeum Disinfectant, (D. C. Md., 1914), 217 Fed. 477.

SEC. 3. [Uniform regulations to be made for examinations, etc.] That the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall make uniform rules and regulations for carrying out the provisions of this Act, including the collection and examination of specimens of insecticides, Paris greens, lead arsenates, and fungicides manufactured or offered for sale in the District of Columbia or in any Territory of the United States, or which shall be offered for sale in unbroken packages in any State other than that in which they shall have been respectively manufactured or produced, or which shall be received from any foreign country or intended for shipment to any foreign country, or which may be submitted for examination by the director of the experiment station of any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia (acting under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture), or at any domestic or foreign port through which such product is offered for interstate commerce, or for export or import between the United States and any foreign port or country. [36 Stat. L. 331.]

SEC. 4. [Examination by department of agriculture — notice if adulterated, etc.—hearings, etc.—publication.] That the examination of specimens of insecticides, Paris greens, lead arsenates, and fungicides shall be made in the Department of Agriculture, by such existing bureau or bureaus as may be directed by the Secretary, for the purpose of determining from such examination whether such articles are adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act; and if it shall appear from any such examination that any of such specimens are adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act, the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause notice thereof to be given to the party from whom such sample was obtained. Any party so notified shall be given an opportunity to be heard, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed as aforesaid, and if it appears that any of the provisions of this Act have been violated by such party, then the Secretary of Agriculture shall at once certify the facts to the proper United States district attorney, with a copy of the results of the analysis or the examination of such article duly authenticated by the analyst or officer making such examination, under the oath of such officer. After judgment of the court, notice shall be given by publication in such manner as may be prescribed by the rules and regulations aforesaid. [36 Stat. L. 332.]

SEC. 5. [Prosecutions for violations.] That it shall be the duty of each district attorney to whom the Secretary of Agriculture shall report any violation of this Act, or to whom any director of experiment station or agent of any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, under authority of the Secretary of Agriculture, shall present satisfactory evidences of any such violation, to cause appropriate proceedings to be commenced and prosecuted in the proper courts of the United States, without delay, for the enforcement of the penalties as in such case herein provided. [36 Stat. L. 332.]

SEC. 6. [Definitions.] That the term "insecticide" as used in this Act shall include any substance or mixture of substances intended to be used for preventing, destroying, repelling, or mitigating any insects which may infest vegetation, man or other animals, or households, or be present in any environment whatsoever. The term "Paris green" as used in this Act shall include the product sold in commerce as Paris green and chemically known as the aceto-arsenite of copper. The term "lead arsenate" as used in this Act shall include the product or products sold in commerce as lead arsenate and consisting chemically of products derived from arsenic acid ( $H_3AsO_4$ ) by replacing one or more hydrogen atoms by lead. That the term "fungicide" as used in this Act shall include any substance or mixture of substances intended to be used for preventing, destroying, repelling, or mitigating any and all fungi that may infest vegetation or be present in any environment whatsoever. [36 Stat. L. 332.]

SEC. 7. [Adulterated articles.] That for the purpose of this Act an article shall be deemed to be adulterated —

In the case of Paris green: First, if it does not contain at least fifty per centum of arsenious oxide; second, if it contains arsenic in water-soluble forms equivalent to more than three and one-half per centum of arsenious oxide; third, if any substance has been mixed and packed with it so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect its quality or strength.

In the case of lead arsenate: First, if it contains more than fifty per centum of water; second, if it contains total arsenic equivalent to less than twelve and one-half per centum of arsenic oxid ( $As_2O_3$ ); third, if it contains arsenic in water-soluble forms equivalent to more than seventy-five one-hundredths per centum of arsenic oxid ( $As_2O_3$ ); fourth, if any substances have been mixed and packed with it so as to reduce, lower, or injuriously affect its quality or strength: Provided, however, That extra water may be added to lead arsenate (as described in this paragraph) if the resulting mixture is labeled lead arsenate and water, the percentage of extra water being plainly and correctly stated on the label.

In the case of insecticides or fungicides, other than Paris green and lead arsenate: First, if its strength or purity fall below the professed standard or quality under which it is sold; second, if any substance has been substituted wholly or in part for the article; third, if any valuable constituent of the article has been wholly or in part abstracted; fourth, if it is intended for use on vegetation and shall contain any substance or substances which, although preventing, destroying, repelling, or mitigating insects, shall be injurious to such vegetation when used. [36 Stat. L. 332.]

SEC. 8. [Misbranded articles — application of term — misleading statements — statements required — inert ingredients.] That the term "misbranded" as used herein shall apply to all insecticides, Paris greens, lead arsenates, or fungicides, or articles which enter into the composition of insecticides or fungicides, the package or label of which shall bear any statement, design, or device regarding such article or the ingredients or substances contained therein which shall be false or misleading in any particular, and to all insecticides, Paris greens, lead arsenates, or fungicides which are falsely branded as to the State, Territory, or country in which they are manufactured or produced.

That for the purpose of this Act an article shall be deemed to be misbranded —

In the case of insecticides, Paris greens, lead arsenates, and fungicides: First, if it be an imitation or offered for sale under the name of another article; second, if it be labeled or branded so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser, or if the contents of the package as originally put up shall have been removed in whole or in part and other contents shall have been placed in such package; third, if in package form, and the contents are stated in terms of weight or measure, they are not plainly and correctly stated on the outside of the package.

In the case of insecticides (other than Paris greens and lead arsenates) and fungicides: First, if it contains arsenic in any of its combinations or in the elemental form and the total amount of arsenic present (expressed as per centum of metallic arsenic) is not stated on the label; second, if it contains arsenic in any of its combinations or in the elemental form and the amount of arsenic in water-soluble forms (expressed as per centum of metallic arsenic) is not stated on the label; third, if it consists partially or completely of an inert substance or substances which do not prevent, destroy, repel, or mitigate insects or fungi and does not have the names and percentage amounts of each and every one of such inert ingredients plainly and correctly stated on the label: Provided, however, That in lieu of naming and stating the percentage amount of each and every inert ingredient the producer may at his discretion state plainly upon the label the correct names and percentage amounts of each and every ingredient of the insecticide or fungicide having insecticidal or fungicidal properties, and make no mention of the inert ingredients, except in so far as to state the total percentage of inert ingredients present. [36 Stat. L. 333.]

Misbranding.—A manufacturer may not give to his product a name which indicates the presence in it in substantial quantities of a constituent when such is not the fact. Thus where a manufacturer put out an insecticide product labeled "Sulpho-naphthol" and the article did not contain any appreciable quantity of sulphur or any sulphur derivative, the court held that the product was misbranded, and that a decree of condemnation must be entered. Likewise where the same article was labeled "Water 7%, Insecticide 93%" and the product seized contained over 10% of water, the same rule was applied. United States v. Two Cases of Sulpho-Naphthol, (D. C. Md. 1914) 213 Fed. 519.

An "inert" substance as used in this section may include something which contributed to the effectiveness of insecticides, that is something which serves a useful purpose. United States v. Thirty Dozen Packages of Roach Food, (D. C. Md. 1913) 202 Fed. 271, wherein the court said: "The claimant says that an inert substance within the meaning of the act is something which does not contribute to the effectiveness of insecticides—that is, something which serves no useful purpose therein. An insecticide containing such a substance, when compared volume for volume with another which did not, would be of inferior quality or strength. If the framer of the act had intended by the clause now under consideration to do nothing more than prevent the introduction of such valueless substances into insecticides, he had apt language before him in the model which he was using.

"Section 7 of the Food and Drugs Act declares that a food shall be deemed to be adulterated if any substance has been mixed and packed with it, so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect its quality or strength. Such a provision would apparently accomplish all that the claimant says was intended to be accomplished by the clause the construction of which is now in controversy. The lawmakers did not think it would in the case of insecticides, other than paris green and lead arsenates. They do provide in section 7 of the Insecticide Act that a Paris green or a lead arsenate shall be deemed to be adulterated if any substance has been mixed and packed with it, so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect its quality or strength. They do not make such provision with reference to insecticides other than Paris green and lead arsenates. On the other hand, they do not make applicable to the two latter any such clause as that now under discussion.

"The lawmakers did not think it expedient or possible to say that any substance which, when mixed and packed with an insecticide, reduced or lowered its strength, was an adulterant. The explanation why it was not expedient or possible so to say is given by the claimant itself. In many insecticides, other than Paris green and lead arsenates, substances which do reduce and lower their strength are absolutely necessary, in order that they may effectively do the work for which they are intended. Such substances could not be declared adulterants. The problem is solved by requiring the shipper of such insecticides to tell the kinds and quantities of the substances therein contained which do not themselves prevent, destroy, repel, or mitigate insects. From the standpoint of the honest purchaser and shipper, there could be only one objection to this legislation. In some circumstances it might result in the revelation of a trade secret. This objection was obviously taken into consideration by Congress. For the purpose of rendering such disclosures less probable or frequent, Congress gives the shipper an alternative. He may, if he will, instead of stating the kinds and proportions of inert substances so defined, confine himself to telling the total percentage of all such substances in his preparation; but, if he does, he must tell the specific kinds and proportions of the active poisons or repellents. It may be that in some cases to do one or the other will give valuable information as to trade secrets. Claimant says that in its case such will be the result of the enforcement upon it of the construction for which the government contends. Such arguments may well be addressed to Congress. They may, where it does not appear that the intention of Congress has been called to them, affect the construction which the courts may put upon the general language of an act. In this case, however, the clause in controversy itself shows that Congress had actually considered the extent to which it would go in compelling disclosures which might result in the revelation of trade secrets. Under its power to regulate commerce among the states, Congress had power to do what the government says it sought to do, and which I think it did do."

Misbranding as affected by extent of deception.—It is no defense to a violation of this act that a name, deceptive in itself, deceives only a few purchasers. United States v. Two Cases of Chloro-Naphtholeum Disinfectant, (D. C. Md., 1914) 217 Fed. 477.

SEC. 9. [Dealers — protection of guaranty by manufacturer, etc.— liability of guarantor.] That no dealer shall be prosecuted under the provisions of this Act when he can establish a guaranty signed by the wholesaler, jobber, manufacturer, or other party residing in the United States, from whom he purchased such articles, to the effect that the same is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act, designating it. Said guaranty, to afford protection, shall contain the name and address of the party or parties making the sale of such articles to such dealer, and in such case said party or parties shall be amenable to the prosecutions, fines, and other penalties which would attach in due course to the dealer under the provisions of this Act. [36 Stat. L. 334.]

SEC. 10. [Original packages — seizure for transporting, etc., in interstate and foreign commerce — disposal of seized articles — conditional delivery to owner — procedure.] That any insecticide, Paris green, lead arsenate, or fungicide that is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act and is being transported from one State, Territory, or District, to another for sale, or, having been transported, remains unloaded, unsold, or in original unbroken packages, or if it be sold or offered for sale in the District of Columbia or any Territory of the United States, or if it be imported from a foreign country for sale, shall be liable to be proceeded against in any district court of the United States within the district wherein the same is found and seized for confiscation by a process of libel for condemnation.

And if such article is condemned as being adulterated or misbranded, within the meaning of this Act, the same shall be disposed of by destruction or sale as the said court may direct, and the proceeds thereof, if sold, less the legal costs and charges, shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States, but such goods shall not be sold in any jurisdiction contrary to the provisions of this Act or the laws of that jurisdiction: Provided, however, That upon the payment of the costs of such libel proceedings and the execution and delivery of a good and sufficient bond to the effect that such articles shall not be sold or otherwise disposed of contrary to the provisions of this Act or the laws of any State, Territory, or District, the court may by order direct that such articles be delivered to the owner thereof. The proceedings of such libel cases shall conform, as near as may be, to the proceedings in admiralty, except that either party may demand trial by jury of any issue of fact joined in any such case, and all such proceedings shall be at the suit of and in the name of the United States. [36 Stat. L. 334.]

SEC. 11. [Imported articles — examination of samples — exclusion if adulterated, etc.— destruction, etc.— provisional delivery to consignee.] That the Secretary of the Treasury shall deliver to the Secretary of Agriculture, upon his request, from time to time, samples of insecticides, Paris greens, lead arsenates, and fungicides which are being imported into the United States or offered for import, giving notice thereof to the owner or consignee, who may appear before the Secretary of Agriculture and have the right to introduce testimony; and if it appear from the examination of such samples that any insecticide, or Paris green, or lead arsenate, or fungicide offered to be imported into the United States is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act, or is otherwise dangerous to the health of the people of the United States, or is of a kind forbidden entry into or forbidden to be sold or restricted in sale in the country in which it is made or from which it is exported, or is otherwise falsely labeled in any respect, the said article shall be refused admission, and the Secretary of the Treasury shall refuse delivery to the consignee and shall cause the destruction or [of] any goods refused delivery which shall not be exported by the consignee within three months from the date of notice of such refusal under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may deliver to the consignee such goods pending examination and decision in the matter on execution of a penal bond for the amount of the full invoice value of such goods, together with the duty thereon, and on refusal to return such goods for any cause to the custody of the Secretary of the Treasury, when demanded, for the purpose of excluding them from the country, or for any other purpose, said consignee shall forfeit the full amount of the bond: And provided further, That all charges for storage, cartage, and labor on goods which are refused admission or delivery shall be paid by the owner or consignee, and in default of such payment shall constitute a lien against any future importation made by such owner or consignee. [36 Stat. L. 334.]

SEC. 12. [Construction of terms, etc., used.] That the term "Territory," as used in this Act, shall include the District of Alaska and the insular possessions of the United States. The word "person," as used in this Act, shall be construed to import both the plural and the singular, as the case demands, and shall include corporations, companies, societies, and associations. When construing and enforcing the provisions of this Act, the act, omission, or failure of any officer, agent, or other person acting for or employed by any corporation, company, society, or association, within the scope of his employment or office, shall in every case be also deemed to be the act, omission, or failure of such corporation, company, society, or association, as well as that of the other person. [36 Stat. L. 335.]

SEC. 13. [Title.] That this Act shall be known and referred to as "The insecticide Act of 1910." [36 Stat. L. 335.]

SEC. 14. [Effect.] That this Act shall be in force and effect from and after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and eleven. [36 Stat. L. 335.]

IV. SEEDS, PLANTS, AND NURSERY STOCK.

Sec. 527. [Seeds, etc., to be of best varieties.] That purchase and distribution of vegetable, field, and flower seeds, plants, shrubs, vines, bulbs and cuttings shall be of the freshest and best obtainable varieties and adapted to general cultivation. [R. S.]

This section was amended to read as above by the Agricultural Appropriation Act of April 25, 1896. Formerly this section read as follows:

"Sec. 527. The purchase and distribution of seeds by the Department of Agriculture shall be confined to such seeds as are rare and uncommon to the country, or such as can be made more profitable by frequent changes from one part of our own country to another; and the purchase or propagation and distribution of trees, plants, shrubs, vines, and cuttings, shall be confined to such as are adapted to general cultivation and to promote the general interests of horticulture and agriculture throughout the United States."

The Agricultural Appropriation Acts for many years have contained provisions regulating the purchase of seeds, bulbs, etc., and the distribution thereof by congressional allotment, and it is questionable whether there is any permanency in the legislation on these subjects. The provision for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, is contained in the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 144, which further provides, "That the Secretary of Agriculture, after due advertisement and on competitive bids, is authorized to award the contract for the supplying of printed packets and envelopes and the packeting, assembling, and mailing of the seeds, bulbs, shrubs, vines, cuttings, and plants, or any part thereof, for a period of not more than five years nor less than one year, if by such action he can best protect the interests of the United States." [38 Stat. L. 1094.]

Construction of Appropriation Act.—The Act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the year ending June 30, 1897, authorized the department to pay $130,000 for seed already put up in packages and labeled ready for distribution. 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 372. See also for construction of Appropriation Act of March 2, 1895, 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 162, 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 55.

The appropriation which was made for the purchase of seed for the year 1896 was held to be available for purchases made under joint resolution S. R. 43. 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 321.

Nature of seeds purchasable.—The seeds purchased under the Appropriation Act of March 2, 1895, were held to be limited to those described in the above section 527 as it then stood. 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 162. See also 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 55.

[SEC. 1.] [Tests of seeds for adulterations — publication of results.]
 • • • For studying and testing commercial seeds, including the testing of samples of seeds of grasses, clover, or alfalfa, and lawn-grass seeds secured in the open market, and where such samples are found to be adulterated or misbranded the results of the tests shall be published, together with the names of the persons by whom the seeds were offered for sale. [38 Stat. L. 1092.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 144. The Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 3, 1905, ch. 1405, provides that "The Secretary [of Agriculture] is hereby directed to obtain in the open market samples of seeds of grass, clover, or alfalfa, test the same, and if any such seeds are found to be adulterated or misbranded, or any seeds of Canada blue grass (Poa compressa) are obtained under any other name than Canada blue grass or Poa compressa, to publish the results of the tests, together with the names of the persons by whom the seeds were offered for sale." [33 Stat. L. 869.]

Identically similar provisions were contained in the Acts of March 3, 1903, ch. 1008, 32 Stat. L. 1154; April 23, 1904, ch. 1486, 33 Stat. L. 283. Somewhat similar provisions were contained in prior Acts.

Construction and constitutionality.—The provision of the Act of March 3, 1905, was ruled by the Attorney-General to be primarily a measure for the dissemination of useful information in regard to seeds, the publication of the name of the seller being only an incidental matter. Viewed in this light it is not a regulation of commerce, and is constitutional. (1906) 25 Op. Atty.-Gen. 553.

[SEC. 1.] [Use of Potomac Park as testing grounds.] That the Secretary of War is authorized to grant permission to the Department of Agriculture for the temporary occupation of such area or areas of Potomac Park, not exceeding a total of seventy-five acres in extent, as may not be needed in any one season for the reclamation or park improvement, the said areas to be used by the Department of Agriculture as testing grounds: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to change the essential character of the lands so used, which lands shall continue to be a public park, as provided in the Act of Congress approved March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven: And provided further, That said area or areas shall be vacated by the Department of Agriculture at the close of any season upon the request of the Secretary of War: And provided further, That the entire park shall remain under the charge of the Secretary of War. [30 Stat. L. 1378.]

The above provision is from the Act of March 3, 1899, ch. 458, entitled "An Act relative to the control of wharf property and certain public spaces in the District of Columbia."

Joint Resolution providing for the printing annually of franks required for sending out seed.

[Res. No. 23 of May 19, 1902, 32 Stat. L. 741.]

[Printing franks for sending out seed.] That the Public Printer shall furnish to the Department of Agriculture such franks as the Secretary of Agriculture may require for sending out seeds on Congressional orders, the franks to have printed thereon the facsimile signatures of Senators, Representatives, and Delegates, also the names of their respective States or Territories, and the words "United States Department of Agriculture, Congressional Seed Distribution", or such other printed matter as the Secretary of Agriculture may direct; the franks to be of such size and style as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture; the expense of printing the said franks to be charged to the allotment for printing and binding for the two Houses of Congress. [32 Stat. L. 741.]

An Act To regulate foreign commerce by prohibiting the admission into the United States of certain adulterated grain and seeds unfit for seeding purposes.

[Act of August 24, 1912, ch. 382, 37 Stat. L. 506.]

[SEC. 1.] [Grain and seeds — importing adulterated, for seeding, prohibited — regulations to prevent.] That from and after six months after the passage of this Act the importation into the United States of seeds of alfalfa, barley, Canadian blue grass, Kentucky blue grass, awnless brome grass, buckwheat, clover, field corn, Kafir corn, meadow fescue, flax, millet, oats, orchard grass, rape, redtop, rye, sorghum, timothy, and wheat, or mixtures of seeds containing any of such seeds as one of the principal component parts, which are adulterated or unfit for seeding purposes under the terms of this Act, is hereby prohibited; and the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Agriculture shall, jointly or severally, make such rules and regulations as will prevent the importation of such seeds into the United States: Provided, however, That such seed may be delivered to the owner or consignee thereof under bond, to be recleaned in accordance with and subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, and when cleaned to the standard of purity specified in this Act for admission into the United States such seed may be released to the owner or consignee thereof after the screenings and other refuse removed from such seed shall have been disposed of in a manner prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture: Provided further, That this Act shall not apply to the importation of barley, buckwheat, field corn, Kafir corn, sorghum, flax, oats, rye, or wheat not intended for seeding purposes, when shipped in bond through the United States or imported for the purpose of manufacture, but such shipment shall be subject to provisions of the Act of August fifth, nineteen hundred and nine. [37 Stat. L. 506.]

SEC. 2. [Adulterations.] That seed shall be considered adulterated within the meaning of this Act —

First. When seed of red clover contains more than three per centum by weight of seed of yellow trefoil, or any other seed of similar appearance to and of lower market value than seed of red clover.

Second. When seed of alfalfa contains more than three per centum by weight of seed of yellow trefoil, burr clover and sweet clover, singly or combined.

Third. When any kind or variety of the seeds, or any mixture described in section one of this Act, contains more than five per centum by weight of seed of another kind or variety of lower market value and of similar appearance: Provided, That the mixture of the seed of white and alsike clover, red and alsike clover, or alsike clover and timothy, shall not be deemed an adulteration under this section. [37 Stat. L. 507.]

SEC. 3. [Unfit for seeding.] That seed shall be considered unfit for seeding purposes within the meaning of this Act —

First. When any kind or variety of clover or alfalfa seed contains more than one seed of dodder to five grams of clover or alfalfa seed, respectively.

Second. When any kind or variety of the seeds or any mixture described in section one of this Act contains more than three per centum by weight of seeds of weeds. [37 Stat. L. 507.]

SEC. 4. [Penalty.] That any person or persons who shall knowingly violate the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall pay a fine of not exceeding five hundred dollars and not less than two hundred dollars: Provided, That any person or persons who shall knowingly sell for seeding purposes seeds or grain which were imported under the provisions of this Act for the purpose of manufacture shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this Act. [37 Stat. L. 507.]

[SEC. 1.] [Plants and plant products — terminal inspection by state — packages of such products mailed to persons in state subject to inspection — marking of packages required — penalty for violation — rules and regulations — postmaster general to make.] * * * That hereafter when any State shall provide for terminal inspection of plants and plant products, and shall establish and maintain, at the sole expense of the State, such inspection at one or more places therein, the proper officials of said State may submit to the Secretary of Agriculture a list of plants and plant products and the plant pests transmitted thereby, that in the opinion of said officials should be subject to terminal inspection in order to prevent the introduction or dissemination in said State of pests injurious to agriculture. Upon his approval of said list, in whole or in part, the Secretary of Agriculture shall transmit the same to the Postmaster General, and thereafter all packages containing any plants or plant products named in said approved lists shall, upon payment of postage therefor, be forwarded by the postmaster at the destination of said package to the proper State official at the nearest place where inspection is maintained. If the plant or plant products are found upon inspection to be free from injurious pests, or if infected shall be disinfected by said official, they shall upon payment of postage therefor be returned to the postmaster at the place of inspection to be forwarded to the person to whom they are addressed; but if found to be infected with injurious pests and incapable of satisfactory disinfection the State inspector shall so notify the postmaster at the place of inspection, who shall promptly notify the sender of said plants or plant products that they will be returned to him upon his request and at his expense, or in default of such request that they will be turned over to the State authorities for destruction.

On and after the passage and approval of this Act it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to deposit in the United States mails any package containing any plant or plant product addressed to any place within a State maintaining inspection thereof as herein defined, without plainly marking the package so that its contents may be readily ascertained by an inspection of the outside thereof. Whoever shall fail to so mark said packages shall be punished by a fine of not more than $100.

The Postmaster General is hereby authorized and directed to make all needful rules and regulations for carrying out the purposes hereof. [38 Stat. L. 1113.]

The foregoing provisions are from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 144.

An Act To regulate the importation of nursery stock and other plants and plant products; to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to establish and maintain quarantine districts for plant diseases and insect pests; to permit and regulate the movement of fruits, plants, and vegetables therefrom, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Nursery stock — importing without permit, etc., unlawful — certificate of foreign inspection required.] That it shall be unlawful for any person to import or offer for entry into the United States any nursery stock unless an[d] until a permit shall have been issued therefor by the Secretary of Agriculture, under such conditions and regulations as the said Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe, and unless such nursery stock shall be accompanied by a certificate of inspection, in manner and form as required by the Secretary of Agriculture, of the proper official of the country from which the importation is made, to the effect that the stock has been thoroughly inspected and is believed to be free from injurious plant diseases and insect pests: Provided, That the Secretary of Agriculture shall issue the permit for any particular importation of nursery stock when the conditions and regulations as prescribed in this Act shall have been complied with: Provided further, That nursery stock may be imported for experimental or scientific purposes by the Department of Agriculture upon such conditions and under such regulations as the said Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe: And provided further, That nursery stock imported from countries where no official system of inspection for such stock is maintained may be admitted upon such conditions and under such regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe. [37 Stat. L. 315.]

SEC. 2. [Notifications of arrival at port of entry — forwarding without notification forbidden — inspection required.] That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury promptly to notify the Secretary of Agriculture of the arrival of any nursery stock at port of entry; that the person receiving such stock at port of entry shall, immediately upon entry and before such stock is delivered for shipment or removed from the port of entry, advise the Secretary of Agriculture or, at his direction, the proper State, Territorial, or District official of the State or Territory or the District to which such nursery stock is destined, or both, as the Secretary of Agriculture may elect, of the name and address of the consignee, the nature and quantity of the stock it is proposed to ship, and the country and locality where the same was grown. That no person shall ship or offer for shipment from one State or Territory or District of the United States into any other State or Territory or District, any nursery stock imported into the United States without notifying the Secretary of Agriculture or, at his direction, the proper State, Territorial, or District official of the State or Territory or District to which such nursery stock is destined, or both, as the Secretary of Agriculture may elect, immediately upon the delivery of the said stock for shipment, of the name and address of the consignee, of the nature and quantity of stock it is proposed to ship, and the country and locality where the same was grown, unless and until such imported stock has been inspected by the proper official of a State, Territory, or District of the United States. [37 Stat. L. 316.]

SEC. 3. [Marking, etc., required on goods entered.] That no person shall import or offer for entry into the United States any nursery stock unless the case, box, package, crate, bale, or bundle thereof shall be plainly and correctly marked to show the general nature and quantity of the contents, the country and locality where the same was grown, the name and address of the shipper, owner, or person shipping or forwarding the same, and the name and address of the consignee. [37 Stat. L. 316.]

SEC. 4. [Marking, etc., required in interstate shipments.] That no person shall ship or deliver for shipment from one State or Territory or District of the United States into any other State or Territory or District any such imported nursery stock the case, box, package, crate, bale, or bundle whereof is not plainly marked so as to show the general nature and quantity of the contents, the name and address of the consignee, and the country and locality where such stock was grown, unless and until such imported stock has been inspected by the proper official of a State, Territory, or District of the United States. [37 Stat. L. 316.]

SEC. 5. [Restriction on importing plants, etc., other than nursery stock.] That whenever the Secretary of Agriculture shall determine that the unrestricted importation of any plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products not included by the term "nursery stock" as defined in section six of this Act may result in the entry into the United States or any of its Territories or Districts of injurious plant diseases or insect pests, he shall promulgate his determination, specifying the class of plants and plant products the importation of which shall be restricted and the country and locality where they are grown, and thereafter, and until such promulgation is withdrawn, such plants and plant products imported or offered for import into the United States or any of its Territories or Districts shall be subject to all the provisions of the foregoing sections of this Act: Provided, That before the Secretary of Agriculture shall promulgate his determination that the unrestricted importation of any plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products not included by the term "nursery stock" as defined in section six of this Act may result in the entry into the United States or any of its Territories or Districts of injurious plant diseases or insect pests he shall, after due notice, give a public hearing, under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe, at which hearing any interested party may appear and be heard, either in person or by attorney. [37 Stat. L. 316.]

SEC. 6. ["Nursery stock" — definition of term.] That for the purpose of this act the term "nursery stock" shall include all field-grown florists' stock, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, grafts, scions, buds, fruit pits and other seeds of fruit and ornamental trees or shrubs, and other plants and plant products for propagation, except field, vegetable, and flower seeds, bedding plants, and other herbaceous plants, bulbs, and roots. [37 Stat. L. 317.]

SEC. 7. [Plant diseases and insect infestation — determination of existence in country or locality — importations prohibited after promulgation of determination — hearings, etc. — quarantine immediately effective.] That whenever, in order to prevent the introduction into the United States of any tree, plant, or fruit disease or of any injurious insect, new to or not theretofore widely prevalent or distributed within and throughout the United States, the Secretary of Agriculture shall determine that it is necessary to forbid the importation into the United States of any class of nursery stock or of any other class of plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products from a country or locality where such disease or insect infestation exists, he shall promulgate such determination, specifying the country and locality and the class of nursery stock or other class of plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products which, in his opinion, should be excluded. Following the promulgation of such determination by the Secretary of Agriculture, and until the withdrawal of the said promulgation by him, the importation of the class of nursery stock or of other class of plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products specified in the said promulgation from the country and locality therein named, regardless of the use for which the same is intended, is hereby prohibited; and until the withdrawal of the said promulgation by the Secretary of Agriculture, and notwithstanding that such class of nursery stock, or other class of plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products be accompanied by a certificate of inspection from the country of importation, no person shall import or offer for entry into the United States from any country or locality specified in such promulgation, any of the class of nursery stock or of other class of plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products named therein, regardless of the use for which the same is intended: Provided, That before the Secretary of Agriculture shall promulgate his determination that it is necessary to forbid the importation into the United States of the articles named in this section he shall, after due notice to interested parties, give a public hearing, under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe, at which hearing any interested party may appear and be heard, either in person or by attorney: Provided further, That the quarantine provisions of this section, as applying to the white-pine blister rust, potato wart, and the Mediterranean fruit fly, shall become and be effective upon the passage of this Act. [37 Stat. L. 317.]

Nursery stock, seeds, etc., within the prohibition of this section are permitted to be imported for experimental purposes by a provision of the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 145, 37 Stat. L. 854, infra, p. 236.

SEC. 8. [Interstate quarantine against plant diseases or insect infestation — shipments from quarantined localities forbidden — movements of nursery stock subject to conditions — rules for inspection, etc., to be issued — hearings, etc.] That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to quarantine any State, Territory, or District of the United States, or any portion thereof, when he shall determine the fact that a dangerous plant disease or insect infestation, new to or not theretofore widely prevalent or distributed within and throughout the United States, exists in such State or Territory or District; and the Secretary of Agriculture is directed to give notice of the establishment of such quarantine to common carriers doing business in or through such quarantined area, and shall publish in such newspapers in the quarantined area as he shall select notice of the establishment of quarantine. That no person shall ship or offer for shipment to any common carrier, nor shall any common carrier receive for transportation or transport, nor shall any person carry or transport from any quarantined State or Territory or District of the United States, or from any quarantined portion thereof, into or through any other State or Territory or District, any class of nursery stock or any other class of plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products specified in the notice of quarantine except as hereinafter provided. That it shall be unlawful to move, or allow to be moved, any class of nursery stock or any other class of plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products specified in the notice of quarantine hereinbefore provided, and regardless of the use for which the same is intended, from any quarantined State or Territory or District of the United States, or quarantined portion thereof, into or through any other State or Territory or District, in manner or method or under conditions other than those prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of Agriculture to make and promulgate rules and regulations which shall permit and govern the inspection, disinfection, certification, and method and manner of delivery and shipment of the class of nursery stock or of any other class of plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products specified in the notice of quarantine hereinbefore provided, and regardless of the use for which the same is intended, from a quarantined State or Territory or District of the United States, or quarantined portion thereof, into or through any other State or Territory or District; and the Secretary of Agriculture shall give notice of such rules and regulations as hereinbefore provided in this section for the notice of the establishment of quarantine: Provided, That before the Secretary of Agriculture shall promulgate his determination that it is necessary to quarantine any State, Territory, or District of the United States, or portion thereof, under the authority given in this section, he shall, after due notice to interested parties, give a public hearing under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe, at which hearing any interested party may appear and be heard, either in person or by attorney. [37 Stat. L. 318.]

SEC. 9. [Duty of Secretary of Agriculture.] That the Secretary of Agriculture shall make and promulgate such rules and regulations as may be necessary for carrying out the purposes of this Act. [37 Stat. L. 318.]

SEC. 10. [Punishment for violations.] That any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this Act, or who shall forge, counterfeit, alter, deface, or destroy any certificate provided for in this Act or in the regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court: Provided, That no common carrier shall be deemed to have violated the provisions of any of the foregoing sections of this Act on proof that such carrier did not knowingly receive for transportation or transport nursery stock or other plants or plant products as such from one State, Territory, or District of the United States into or through any other State, Territory, or District; and it shall be the duty of the United States attorneys diligently to prosecute any violations of this Act which are brought to their attention by the Secretary of Agriculture or which come to their notice by other means. [37 Stat. L. 318.]

SEC. 11. ["Persons" to include corporations, etc.—corporations, etc., liable for acts of agents.] That the word "person" as used in this Act shall be construed to import both the plural and the singular, as the case demands, and shall include corporations, companies, societies, and associations. When construing and enforcing the provisions of this Act, the act, omission, or failure of any officer, agent, or other person acting for or employed by any corporation, company, society, or association, within the scope of his employment or office, shall in every case be also deemed to be the act, omission, or failure of such corporation, company, society, or association as well as that of the person. [37 Stat. L. 319.]

SEC. 12. [Federal horticultural board established — composition.] That for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act there shall be appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture from existing bureaus and offices in the Department of Agriculture, including the Bureau of Entomology, the Bureau of Plant Industry, and the Forest Service, a Federal Horticultural Board consisting of five members, of whom not more than two shall be appointed from any one bureau or office, and who shall serve without additional compensation. [37 Stat. L. 319.]

SEC. 13. [Appropriation.] That there is hereby appropriated, out of the moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended as the Secretary of Agriculture may direct, for the purposes and objects of this Act, the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars. [37 Stat. L. 319.]

SEC. 14. [In effect October 1, 1912.] That this Act shall become and be effective from and after the first day of October, nineteen hundred and twelve, except as herein otherwise provided. [37 Stat. L. 319.]

[SEC. 1.] [Imports permitted for experiments, etc.—nursery stock.]
* * * That hereafter any class of nursery stock or of any other class of plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products of which the importation may be forbidden from any country or locality under the provisions of section seven of the plant quarantine Act approved August twentieth, nineteen hundred and twelve (Thirty-seventh Statutes, page three hundred and fifteen), may be imported for experimental or scientific purposes by the Department of Agriculture upon such conditions and under such regulations as the said Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe. [37 Stat. L. 854.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 145. Section 7 of the Act of 1912 referred to is given, supra, p. 233.

V. STANDARD MEASURES AND GRADES.

An Act To fix the standard barrel for fruits, vegetables, and other dry commodities.

[Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 158, 38 Stat. L. 1186.]

[SEC. 1.] [Fruits, vegetables and other dry commodities—standard barrel adopted.] That the standard barrel for fruits, vegetables, and other dry commodities other than cranberries shall be of the following dimensions when measured without distention of its parts: Length of stave, twenty-eight and one-half inches; diameter of heads, seventeen and one-eighth inches; distance between heads, twenty-six inches; circumference of bulge, sixty-four inches, outside measurement; and the thickness of staves not greater than four-tenths of an inch: Provided, That any barrel of a different form having a capacity of seven thousand and fifty-six cubic inches shall be a standard barrel. The standard barrel for cranberries shall be of the following dimensions when measured without distention of its parts: Length of staves, twenty-eight and one-half inches; diameter of head, sixteen and one-fourth inches; distance between heads, twenty-five and one-fourth inches; circumference of bulge, fifty-eight and one-half inches, outside measurement; and the thickness of staves not greater than four-tenths of an inch. [38 Stat. L. 1186.]

Standard barrel for apples, see infra, p. 237.

SEC. 2. [Penalties for violation of act—barrels when not below standard—barrels shipped to foreign country.] That it shall be unlawful to sell, offer, or expose for sale in any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, or to ship from any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia to any other State, Territory, or the District of Columbia or to a foreign country, a barrel containing fruits or vegetables or any other dry commodity of less capacity than the standard barrels defined in the first section of this Act, or subdivisions thereof known as the third, half, and three-quarters barrel, and any person guilty of a willful violation of any of the provisions of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and be liable to a fine not to exceed $500, or imprisonment not to exceed six months, in the court of the United States having jurisdiction: Provided, however, That no barrel shall be deemed below standard within the meaning of this Act when shipped to any foreign country and constructed according to the specifications or directions of the foreign purchaser if not constructed in conflict with the laws of the foreign country to which the same is intended to be shipped. [38 Stat. L. 1186.]

SEC. 3. [Reasonable variations in barrels permitted — prosecutions for offenses how begun — act not applicable to certain barrels.] That reasonable variations shall be permitted and tolerance shall be established by rules and regulations made by the Director of the Bureau of Standards and approved by the Secretary of Commerce. Prosecutions for offenses under this Act may be begun upon complaint of local sealers of weights and measures or other officers of the several States and Territories appointed to enforce the laws of the said States or Territories, respectively, relating to weights and measures: Provided, however, That nothing in this Act shall apply to barrels used in packing or shipping commodities sold exclusively by weight or numerical count. [38 Stat. L. 1187.]

SEC. 4. [Act when in force.] That this Act shall be in force and effect from and after the first day of July, nineteen hundred and sixteen. [38 Stat. L. 1187.]

An Act To establish a standard barrel and standard grades for apples when packed in barrels, and for other purposes.

[Act of August 3, 1912, ch. 273, 37 Stat. L. 250.]

[SEC. 1.] [Apples — standard barrel established for — steel barrels.] That the standard barrel for apples shall be of the following dimensions when measured without distention of its parts: Length of stave, twenty-eight and one-half inches; diameter of head, seventeen and one-eighth inches; distance between heads, twenty-six inches; circumference of bulge, sixty-four inches outside measurement, representing as nearly as possible seven thousand and fifty-six cubic inches: Provided, That steel barrels containing the interior dimensions provided for in this section shall be construed as a compliance therewith. [37 Stat. L. 250.]

SEC. 2. [Grades established for apples in interstate, etc., commerce.] That the standard grades for apples when packed in barrels which shall be shipped or delivered for shipment in interstate or foreign commerce, or which shall be sold or offered for sale within the District of Columbia or the Territories of the United States shall be as follows: Apples of one variety, which are well-grown specimens, hand picked, of good color for the variety, normal shape, practically free from insect and fungous injury, bruises, and other defects, except such as are necessarily caused in the operation of packing, or apples of one variety which are not more than ten per centum below the foregoing specifications shall be "Standard grade minimum size two and one-half inches," if the minimum size of the apples is two and one-half inches in transverse diameter; "Standard grade minimum size two and one-fourth inches," if the minimum size of the apples is two and one-fourth inches in transverse diameter; or "Standard grade minimum size two inches," if the minimum size of the apples is two inches in transverse diameter. [37 Stat. L. 250.]

SEC. 3. [Branding of barrels.] That the barrels in which apples are packed in accordance with the provision of this Act may be branded in accordance with section two of this Act. [37 Stat. L. 251.]

SEC. 4. [Requirements for barrels — marking.] That all barrels packed with apples shall be deemed to be below standard if the barrel bears any statement, design, or device indicating that the barrel is a standard barrel of apples, as herein defined, and the capacity of the barrel is less than the capacity prescribed by section one of this Act, unless the barrel shall be plainly marked on end and side with words or figures showing the fractional relation which the actual capacity of the barrel bears to the capacity prescribed by section one of this Act. The marking required by this paragraph shall be in block letters of size not less than seventy-two point one-inch gothic. [37 Stat. L. 251.]

SEC. 5. [Misbranding — contents below standard — insufficient statements.] That barrels packed with apples shall be deemed to be misbranded within the meaning of this Act —

First. If the barrel bears any statement, design, or device indicating that the apples contained therein are "Standard" grade and the apples when packed do not conform to the requirements prescribed by section two of this Act.

Second. If the barrel bears any statement, design, or device indicating that the apples contained therein are "Standard" grade and the barrel fails to bear also a statement of the name of the variety, the name of the locality where grown, and the name of the packer or the person by whose authority the apples were packed and the barrel marked. [37 Stat. L. 251.]

SEC. 6. [Penalty for violations.] That any person, firm or corporation, or association who shall knowingly pack or cause to be packed apples in barrels or who shall knowingly sell or offer for sale such barrels in violation of the provisions of this Act shall be liable to a penalty of one dollar and costs for each such barrel so sold or offered for sale, to be recovered at the suit of the United States in any court of the United States having jurisdiction. [37 Stat. L. 251.]

SEC. 7. [In effect July 1, 1913.] That this Act shall be in force and effect from and after the first day of July, nineteen hundred and thirteen. [37 Stat. L. 251.]

[SEC. 1.] [Establishing grades of cotton—furnishing official standard.] * * * To enable the Secretary of Agriculture to establish a standard for the different grades of cotton, calling to his assistance for that purpose expert cotton classifiers, by fixing a standard of middling cotton and, using the same as a basis, establishing a standard of nine different grades to be designated middling fair, strict good middling, good middling, strict middling, middling, strict low middling, low middling, strict good ordinary, and good ordinary, which shall be the official standard of cotton classifications. And the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to prepare in practical form the standard of said grades and furnish the same upon request to any person, the cost thereof to be paid, when delivered, by the person requesting the same, and certified under the signature of the said Secretary and the seal of his Department [35 Stat. L. 256.]

This and the following paragraph are from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 23, 1908, ch. 192.

[Establishing grades of grain for export.] To enable the Secretary of Agriculture to establish and maintain, at such points as he may deem expedient, laboratories for the purpose of examining and reporting upon the nature, quality, and condition of any sample, parcel, or consignment of seed or grain, including rent and the employment of labor in the city of Washington and elsewhere; and the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to report upon such samples, parcels, or consignments, from time to time, and the reports so made shall serve as a basis for the fixing of definite grades, and also for the issuance of certificates of inspection when requested by the consignor or consignee of any grain entering into foreign commerce. [35 Stat. L. 257.]

The same provision occurs in prior Agricultural Appropriation Acts, and appropriations to the same end are made in subsequent Acts, that of March 4, 1915, ch. 144, 38 Stat. L. 1092, being for the "investigating, the handling, grading, and transportation of grain, and the fixing of definite grades thereof."

VI. AGRICULTURAL REPORTS AND LITERATURE.

[SEC. 1.] [Monthly crop reports—cotton crop condition reports.] * * * That hereafter the monthly crop reports, which shall be gathered as far as practicable from practical farmers, and which shall be issued on or before the tenth of each month, shall embrace statements of the conditions of crops by States, in the United States, with such explanations, comparisons, and information as may be useful for illustrating the above matter, and that it shall be submitted to and officially approved by the Secretary of Agriculture before being issued or published: Provided further, That hereafter the condition reports of the cotton crop shall be issued on the same day in October each year as the first ginner's report of actual cotton ginned, as follows: [35 Stat. L. 1053.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1909, ch. 301, 35 Stat. L. 1039. This provision, except for the word "hereafter" which renders it permanent, has occurred in previous years, as have provisions requiring a crop report to be issued on the tenth day of each month.

An Act Authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to issue certain reports relating to cotton.

[Act of May 27, 1912, ch. 135, 37 Stat. L. 118.]

[SEC. 1.] [Cotton statistics — report of acres in cultivation.] That the Secretary of Agriculture be directed to cause the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture to issue a report, on or about the first Monday in July of each year, showing by States and in total the number of acres of cotton then in cultivation in the United States. [37 Stat. L. 118.]

For the Act of July 22, 1912, ch. 249, authorizing the Director of the Census to collect and publish statistics of cotton, see CENSUS.

SEC. 2. [Estimate of total production to be issued.] That the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture to issue each year, immediately following the publication of the ginning report of the Census Bureau of December first, an estimate of the total production of cotton in the United States for the current crop year. [37 Stat. L. 118.]

For provisions relating to ginning report of Census Bureau, see CENSUS.

SEC. 3. [Inconsistent laws repealed.] That all Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with the foregoing provisions be, and the same are hereby, repealed. [37 Stat. L. 118.]

[Report on field operations.] That there be printed seventeen thousand copies of the Report on Field Operations of the Division of Soils, Department of Agriculture, for nineteen hundred, of which three thousand copies shall be for the use of the Senate, six thousand copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and eight thousand copies for the use of the Department of Agriculture; and that annually hereafter a similar report shall be prepared and printed, the edition to be the same as for the report herein provided. [31 Stat. L. 1462.]

[SEC. 1.] [Farmers' Bulletins — distribution.] * * * for the preparation, printing, and distribution of farmers' bulletins, which shall be adapted to the interests of the people of the different sections of the country, an equal proportion of four-fifths of which shall be delivered to or sent out under the addressed franks furnished by Senators, Representatives, and Delegates in Congress, as such Senators, Representatives, or Delegates in Congress shall direct: Provided, That the Secretary of Agriculture shall notify Senators, Representatives, and Delegates in Congress of the title and character of each such bulletin, with the total number to which each Senator, Representative, and Delegate may be entitled for such distribution: and on the face of the envelope inclosing said bulletins shall be printed the title of each bulletin contained therein: Provided further, That all such bulletins included in the quotas of Senators, Representatives, or Delegates not called for on or before the thirty-first day of May in each fiscal year shall revert to the Secretary of Agriculture, and be available to him, either for miscellaneous distribution or in making up Congressional quotas for the next fiscal year. [34 Stat. L. 690.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 30, 1906, ch. 3913. Similar provisions have appeared in the Appropriation Acts of previous years. Since this Act various appropriations of similar character have been made, but without the provisos.

[SEC. 1.] [Card index of publications.] * * * And hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture may furnish to such institutions or individuals as may care to buy them, copies of the card index of the publications of the Department and of other agricultural literature prepared by the library, and charge for the same a price covering the additional expense involved in the preparation of these copies. [35 Stat. L. 264.]

This is a provision of the Agricultural Appropriation Act of May 23, 1908, ch. 192. With the exception of the word "hereafter" this provision has occurred in previous Agricultural Appropriation Acts. As to card indexes of matters relating to experiment stations, see supra, p. 215.

[SEC. 1.] [Subscriptions to publications.] * * * That hereafter section thirty-six hundred and forty-eight of the Revised Statutes shall not apply to the subscriptions for publications for the Department of Agriculture, and the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to pay in advance for any publications for the use of this department. [35 Stat. L. 1054.]

This provision is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1909, ch. 301, 35 Stat. L. 1039, and has occurred in many previous Agricultural Appropriation Acts. The addition of the word "hereafter" in the provision as it appears above makes it permanent.

R. S., sec. 3648, above referred to, relates to the advances of public moneys. See the title PUBLIC MONIES.

[SEC. 1.] [Report as to experiment stations, etc.] * * * That hereafter there be prepared by the Department of Agriculture an annual report on the work and expenditures of the agricultural experiment stations established under the Act of Congress of March second, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven (Twenty-fourth Statutes at Large, page four hundred and forty), on the work and expenditures of the Department of Agriculture in connection therewith, and on the cooperative agricultural extension work and expenditures of the Department of Agriculture and of agricultural colleges under the Act of May eighth, nineteen hundred and fourteen, entitled "An Act to provide for cooperative agricultural extension work between the agricultural colleges in the several States receiving the benefits of an Act of Congress approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and of Acts supplementary thereto, and the United States Department of Agriculture;" and that there be printed annually eight thousand copies of said report, of which one thousand copies shall be for the use of the Senate, two thousand copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and five thousand copies for the use of the Department of Agriculture. [38 Stat. L. 1110.]

For the Act of March 2, 1887, ch. 314, above mentioned, see supra, p. 212.

For the Act of May 8, 1914, ch. 79, 38 Stat. L. 372, mentioned in the text, see the title EDUCATION.

I. CIVIL GOVERNMENT.

An Act To create a legislative assembly in the Territory of Alaska, to confer legislative power thereon, and for other purposes.

[Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 387, 37 Stat. L. 512.]

[SEC. 1.] Alaska Territory organized.—That the territory ceded to the United States by Russia by the treaty of March thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and known as Alaska, shall be and constitute the Territory of Alaska under the laws of the United States, the government of which shall be organized and administered as provided by said laws. [37 Stat. L. 512.]

The treaty of March 30, 1867, mentioned in the text is given in 15 Stat. L. 539.

The provisions of the section supersede those of R. S. sec. 1954, the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 1, 33 Stat. L. 24, and the Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 786, § 1, 31 Stat. L. 321.

Constitutionality of act.—The earlier Act of May 17, 1884, was held not to be invalid because it applied only to the district of Alaska. It was said that Congress might legislate for each and any of the territories specially. Nelson v. U. S., (1887) 30 Fed. 112.

"Territory" as including Alaska.—Alaska was held to be a territory entitled to two commissioners in the World's Columbian Commission. (1890) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 700.

SEC. 2. Capital at Juneau.—That the capital of the Territory of Alaska shall be at the city of Juneau, Alaska, and the seat of government shall be maintained there. [37 Stat. L. 512.]

By the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 1, 23 Stat. L. 24, the temporary seat of government was established at Sitka, and by the Act of June 6, 1900, 31 Stat. L. 321, it was provided "that the seat of government shall remain at Sitka until suitable grounds and buildings thereon shall be obtained by purchase or otherwise at Juneau."

Removal of seat of government.—Under the Act of June 6, 1900, § 1, 31 Stat. L. 321, providing "that the seat of government shall remain at Sitka until suitable grounds and buildings thereon shall be obtained by purchase or otherwise at Juneau," the ownership and occupation by the United States of a court-house at Juneau, Alaska, by court officials, and the granting of permission by the judge of the first Alaskan judicial district to the governor and surveyor-general of Alaska to use two rooms of such building for offices, were held not to constitute such a compliance with the proviso as would authorize the Secretary of the Interior to order the removal of the seat of government of Alaska from Sitka to Juneau. (1906) 25 Op. Atty-Gen. 613.

But in (1906) 26 Op. Atty-Gen. 3, it was held that the provision in the Act of June 22, 1906, 34 Stat. L. 416, appropriating $5,000 for clerk hire, rent of office and quarters at Juneau, etc., superseded the legislation embraced in the Act of 1900 to the extent that the Secretary of the Interior was authorized to direct the removal of the seat of government of Alaska from Sitka to Juneau.

SEC. 3. Constitution and laws of United States extended.—That the Constitution of the United States, and all the laws thereof which are not locally inapplicable, shall have the same force and effect within the said Territory as elsewhere in the United States; that all the laws of the United States heretofore passed establishing the executive and judicial departments in Alaska shall continue in full force and effect until amended or repealed by Act of Congress; that except as herein provided all laws now in force in Alaska shall continue in full force and effect until altered, amended, or repealed by Congress or by the legislature: Provided, That the authority herein granted to the legislature to alter, amend, modify, and repeal laws in force in Alaska shall not extend to the customs, internal-revenue, postal, or other general laws of the United States or to the game, fish, and fur-seal laws and laws relating to fur-bearing animals of the United States applicable to Alaska, or to the laws of the United States providing for taxes on business and trade, or to the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the construction and maintenance of roads, the establishment and maintenance of schools, and the care and support of insane persons in the District of Alaska, and for other purposes," approved January twenty-seventh, nineteen hundred and five, and the several Acts amendatory thereof: Provided further, That this provision shall not operate to prevent the legislature from imposing other and additional taxes or licenses. And the legislature shall pass no law depriving the judges and officers of the district court of Alaska of any authority, jurisdiction, or function exercised by like judges or officers of the district courts of the United States. [37 Stat. L. 512.]

The laws establishing the executive and judicial departments in Alaska continued in force by the above section are embodied in the Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 786, infra, p. 260 and the various Acts supplementary thereto.

For the seal, fish, and game laws mentioned in this section, see infra, divisions VI, VII, and VIII.

For the Act of Jan. 27, 1905, ch. 277, as amended, mentioned in the text, see infra, p. 279.

Authority of local legislature.—In U. S. v. Wigger, (1914) 235 U. S. 276, 35 S. Ct. 42, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 226, the court had under consideration the construction of the provisions in this section "that all the laws of the United States heretofore passed establishing the executive and judicial departments in Alaska shall continue in full force and effect until amended or repealed by act of Congress." It was held that the above provision did not prevent the territorial legislature of Alaska from amending section 43 of Title II of the Alaska Code of Criminal Procedure, so as to permit the joinder in one indictment of several offenses of the same class. The court commenting on the provision said:

"In order to determine what laws were by his language preserved from interference at the hands of the local legislature a brief review is necessary.

"The territory in question having been ceded to the United States by the Emperor of Russia by treaty of March 30, 1867 (15 Stat. at L. 539), Congress in the following year extended to it certain of the laws of the United States, at the same time enacting that, until otherwise provided, violations of the act should be prosecuted in any district court of the United States in California or Oregon or in the district courts of Washington (Act of July 27, 1868, 15 Stat. at L. 240, 241, ch. 273, § 1). By Act of May 17, 1884, entitled 'An Act providing a civil government for Alaska' (23 Stat. at L. 24, ch. 53), the territory was declared to constitute a civil and judicial district; the appointment of a governor with executive authority was provided for, and by the 3d section it is enacted: 'There shall be, and hereby is, established a district court for said district, with the civil and criminal jurisdiction of district courts of the United States, and the civil and criminal jurisdiction of district courts of the United States exercising the jurisdiction of circuit courts, and such other jurisdiction, not inconsistent with this act, as may be established by law.' Provision was made for the appointment of a district judge and four commissioners, whose jurisdiction and powers were prescribed, and for appellate review.

"By the Act of March 3, 1899, already mentioned (30 Stat. at L. 1253, ch. 429), Congress provided an elaborate Criminal Code and Code of Criminal Procedure, of which title I contains 219 sections, defining crimes and offenses, and providing for their punishment, and title II contains 481 sections, dealing for the most part with proceedings for the punishment and prevention of the crimes defined in title I. By Act of June 6, 1900, entitled 'An Act making further provision for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes' (31 Stat. at L. 321, ch. 786), further provision was made, under title I, for the establishment of the executive and judicial departments in the territory. Title II contains 1048 sections, constituting a Code of Civil Procedure (31 Stat. at L. 333-494, ch. 786; Comp. Laws of Alaska, §§ 378-638). Title III contains 368 sections, and is called the Civil Code (31 Stat. at L. 494-552, ch. 786; Comp. Laws of Alaska, §§ 277-362). In the Code of Civil Procedure, a chapter (31 Stat. at L. 442, ch. 786, § 698 et seq.) is devoted to the courts of justice, and contains sections prescribing their jurisdiction, powers, and authority. By an act approved March 3, 1909, ch. 269, 35 Stat. L. 838, 839, § 2, the act of 1900 was amended with respect to the jurisdiction of the District Court.

"As already remarked, legislative power was first conferred upon the territory by the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 387, 37 Stat. L. 512. From the provision of this act 'That all laws of the United States heretofore passed establishing the executive and judicial departments in Alaska shall continue in full force and effect until amended or repealed by Act of Congress' the District Court, after a review of the other legislation to which attention has been called, drew the conclusion that the laws concerning procedure in actions prosecuted in the name of the United States and by its officers are an essential and integral part of the laws establishing the executive and judicial departments, and that therefore these can be amended or repealed by act of Congress. With this view we are unable to concur. It seems to us that by the language employed, Congress intended to draw a clear distinction between those laws by which the executive and judicial departments had been established in the territory and those minor regulations that had to do with practice and procedure. Those enactments by which Congress had provided for the appointment of executive and judicial officers for the territory, and had marked out the powers, authority, and jurisdiction of each, and provided safeguards for their maintenance, are properly within the category of laws 'establishing' those departments. These laws, and not those merely regulating the procedure, were by the Act of 1912 continued in force until amended or repealed by Act of Congress. The section respecting the form of indictments was open to amendment by the territorial legislature, and the Act of April 26, 1913, passed for that purpose, is therefore valid."

Taxes on distilled spirits.—The Act of July 20, 1868 (15 Stat. L. 142), imposing taxes on distilled spirits, was a general act, and being passed after the cession, was in force in Alaska. U. S. v. Seveloff, (1872) 2 Sawy. 311, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,252.

Extortion by customs officer.—Section 12 of the Act of March 3, 1825 (4 Stat. L. 118), defining the crime of extortion under color of office, so far as officers of the customs were concerned, was an act relating to customs, and was therefore extended over Alaska. U. S. v. Carr, (1875) 3 Sawy. 302, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,730.

Indian legislation.—The Act of June 30, 1834 (4 Stat. L. 729) defining the boundaries of the "Indian Country," and providing for the regulation of trade and intercourse with Indian tribes therein, is a local act; and therefore it was not, proprio vigore, extended to Alaska upon its cession. U. S. v. Seveloff, (1872) 2 Sawy. 311, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,252. See also Kie v. U. S., (1886) 27 Fed. 351. The act, however, was extended to Alaska, so far as the introduction and dispensation of spirituous liquors was concerned, by the Act of March 3, 1873 (17 Stat. L. 530). In re Carr, (1875) 3 Sawy. 316, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,432; Waters v. Campbell, (1876) 4 Sawy. 121, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,264; In re Sah Quah, (1886) 31 Fed. 327. See also U. S. v. Seveloff, (1872) 2 Sawy. 311, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,252.

SEC. 4. The legislature.—That the legislative power and authority of said Territory shall be vested in a legislature, which shall consist of a senate and a house of representatives. The senate shall consist of eight members, two from each of the four judicial divisions into which Alaska is now divided by Act of Congress, each of whom shall have at the time of his election the qualifications of an elector in Alaska, and shall have been a resident and an inhabitant in the division from which he is elected for at least two years prior to the date of his election. The term of office of each member of the senate shall be four years: Provided, That immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election they shall, by lot or drawing, be divided in each division into two classes; the seats of the members of the first class shall be vacated at the end of two years and the seats of the members of the second class shall be vacated at the end of four years, so that one member of the senate shall, after the first election, be elected biennially at the regular election from each division. The house of representatives shall consist of sixteen members, four from each of the four judicial divisions into which Alaska is now divided by Act of Congress. The term of office of each representative shall be for two years and each representative shall possess the same qualifications as are prescribed for members of the senate and the persons receiving the highest number of legal votes in each judicial division cast in said election for senator or representative shall be deemed and declared elected to such office: Provided, That in the event of a tie vote the candidates thus affected shall settle the question by lot. In case of a vacancy in either branch of the legislature the governor shall order an election to fill such vacancy, giving due and proper notice thereof. That each member of the legislature shall be paid by the United States the sum of fifteen dollars per day for each day's attendance while the legislature is in session, and mileage, in addition, at the rate of fifteen cents per mile for each mile from his home to the capital and return by the nearest traveled route. [37 Stat. L. 513.]

The four judicial divisions here mentioned were established by an Act of March 3, 1909, ch. 269, § 2, amending an Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 786, § 4, infra, p. 261.

SEC. 8. Enacting clause—Subject of Act.—That the enacting clause of all laws passed by the legislature shall be “Be it enacted by the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska.” No law shall embrace more than one subject, which shall be expressed in its title. [37 Stat. L. 514.]

SEC. 9. Legislative power—Limitations.—The legislative power of the Territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States, but no law shall be passed interfering with the primary disposal of the soil; no tax shall be imposed upon the property of the United States; nor shall the lands or other property of non-residents be taxed higher than the lands or other property of residents; nor shall the legislature grant to any corporation, association, or individual any special or exclusive privilege, immunity, or franchise without the affirmative approval of Congress; nor shall the legislature pass local or special laws in any of the cases enumerated in the Act of July thirtieth, eighteen hundred and eighty-six; nor shall it grant private charters or special privileges, but it may, by general act, permit persons to associate themselves together as bodies corporate for manufacturing, mining, agricultural, and other industrial pursuits, and for the conduct of business of insurance, savings banks, banks of discount and deposit (but not of issue), loans, trust, and guaranty associations, for the establishment and conduct of cemeteries, and for the construction and operation of railroads, wagon roads, vessels, and irrigating ditches, and the colonization and improvement of lands in connection therewith, or for colleges, seminaries, churches, libraries, or any other benevolent, charitable, or scientific association, but the authority embraced in this section shall only permit the organization of corporations or associations whose chief business shall be in the Territory of Alaska; no divorce shall be granted by the legislature, nor shall any divorce be granted by the courts of the Territory, unless the applicant therefor shall have resided in the Territory for two years next preceding the application, which residence and all causes for divorce shall be determined by the court upon evidence adduced in open court; nor shall any lottery or the sale of lottery tickets be allowed; nor shall the legislature or any municipality interfere with or attempt in anywise to limit the Acts of Congress to prevent and punish gambling, and all gambling implements shall be seized by the United States marshal or any of his deputies, or any constable or police officer, and destroyed; nor shall spirituous or intoxicating liquors be manufactured or sold, except under such regulations and restrictions as Congress shall provide; nor shall any public money be appropriated by the Territory or any municipal corporation therein for the support or benefit of any sectarian, denominational, or private school, or any school not under the exclusive control of the Government; nor shall the Government of the Territory of Alaska or any political or municipal corporation or subdivision of the Territory make any subscription to the capital stock of any incorporated company, or in any manner lend its credit for the use thereof; nor shall the Territory, or any municipal corporation therein, have power or authority to create or assume any bonded indebtedness whatever; nor to borrow money in the name of the Territory or of any municipal division thereof; nor to pledge the faith of the people of the same for any loan whatever, either directly or indirectly; nor to create, nor to assume, any indebtedness, except for the actual running expenses thereof; and no such indebtedness for actual running expenses shall be created or assumed in excess of the actual income of the Territory or municipality for that year, including as a part of such income appropriations then made by Congress, and taxes levied and payable and applicable to the payment of such indebtedness and cash and other money credits on hand and applicable and not already pledged for prior indebtedness: Provided, That all authorized indebtedness shall be paid in the order of its creation; all taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects and shall be levied and collected under general laws, and the assessments shall be according to the actual value thereof. No tax shall be levied for Territorial purposes in excess of one per centum upon the assessed valuation of property therein in any one year; nor shall any incorporated town or municipality levy any tax, for any purpose, in excess of two per centum of the assessed valuation of property within the town in any one year: Provided, That the Congress reserves the exclusive power for five years from the date of the approval of this Act to fix and impose any tax or taxes upon railways or railway property in Alaska, and no acts or laws passed by the Legislature of Alaska providing for a county form of government therein shall have any force or effect until it shall be submitted to and approved by the affirmative action of Congress; and all laws passed, or attempted to be passed, by such legislature in said Territory inconsistent with the provisions of this section shall be null and void: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be held to abridge the right of the legislature to modify the qualifications of electors by extending the elective franchise to women. [37 Stat. L. 514.]

SEC. 10. Rules, quorum, and majority.—That the senate and house of representatives shall each choose its own officers, determine the rules of its own proceedings not inconsistent with this Act, and keep a journal of its proceedings; that the ayes and noes of the members of either house on any question shall, at the request of one-fifth of the members present, be entered upon the journal; that a majority of the members to which each house is entitled shall constitute a quorum of such house for the conduct of business, of which quorum a majority vote shall suffice; that a smaller number than a quorum may adjourn from day to day and compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide; that for the purpose of ascertaining whether there is a quorum present the presiding officer shall count and report the actual number of members present. [37 Stat. L. 515.]

SEC. 11. Legislator shall not hold other office.—That no member of the legislature shall hold or be appointed to any office which has been created, or the salary or emoluments of which have been increased, while he was a member, during the term for which he was elected and for one year after the expiration of such term; and no person holding a commission or appointment under the United States shall be a member of the legislature or shall hold any office under the government of said Territory. [37 Stat. L. 516.]

SEC. 12. Exemptions of legislators.—That no member of the legislature shall be held to answer before any other tribunal for any words uttered in the exercise of his legislative functions. That the members of the legislature shall, in all cases except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance upon the sessions of the respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same: Provided, That such privilege as to going and returning shall not cover a period of more than ten days each way, except in the second division, when it shall extend to twenty days each way, and the fourth division to fifteen days each way. [37 Stat. L. 516.]

SEC. 13. Passage of laws.—That a bill in order to become a law shall have three separate readings in each house, the final passage of which in each house shall be by a majority vote of all the members to which such house is entitled, taken by ayes and noes, and entered upon its journal. That every bill, when passed by the house in which it originated or in which amendments thereto shall have originated, shall immediately be enrolled and certified by the presiding officer and the clerk and sent to the other house for consideration. [37 Stat. L. 516.]

SEC. 14. The veto power.—That, except as herein provided, all bills passed by the legislature shall, in order to be valid, be signed by the governor. That every bill which shall have passed the legislature shall be certified by the presiding officers and clerks of both houses, and shall thereupon be presented to the governor. If he approves it, he shall sign it and it shall become a law at the expiration of ninety days thereafter, unless sooner given effect by a two-thirds vote of said legislature. If the governor does not approve such bill, he may return it, with his objections, to the legislature. He may veto any specific item or items in any bill which appropriates money for specific purposes, but shall veto other bills, if at all, only as a whole. That upon the receipt of a veto message from the governor each house of the legislature shall enter the same at large upon its journal and proceed to reconsider such bill, or part of a bill, and again vote upon it by ayes and noes, which shall be entered upon its journal. If, after such reconsideration, such bill or part of a bill shall be approved by a two-thirds vote of all the members to which each house is entitled, it shall thereby become a law. That if the governor neither signs nor vetoes a bill within three days (Sundays excepted) after it is delivered to him, it shall become a law without his signature, unless the legislature adjourns sine die prior to the expiration of such three days. If any bill shall not be returned by the governor within three days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the legislature, by its adjournment, prevents the return of the bill, in which case it shall not be a law. [37 Stat. L. 516.]

SEC. 15. Payment of legislative expenses.—That there shall be annually appropriated by Congress a sum sufficient to pay the salaries of members and authorized employees of the Legislature of Alaska, the printing of the laws, and other incidental expenses thereof; the said sum shall be disbursed by the governor of Alaska, under sole instructions from the Secretary of the Treasury, and he shall account quarterly to the Secretary for the manner in which the said funds shall have been expended; and no expenditure, to be paid out of money appropriated by Congress, shall be made by the governor or by the legislature for objects not authorized by the Acts of Congress making the appropriations, nor beyond the sums thus appropriated for such objects. [37 Stat. L. 516.]

SEC. 16. Laws transmitted to President and printed.—That the governor of Alaska shall, within ninety days after the close of each session of the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, transmit a correct copy of all the laws and resolutions passed by the said legislature, certified to by the secretary of the Territory, with the seal of the Territory attached; one copy to the President of the United States, and one to the Secretary of State of the United States; and the legislature shall make provisions for printing the session laws and resolutions within ninety days after the close of each session and for their distribution to public officials and sale to the people of the Territory. [37 Stat. L. 517.]

SEC. 17. Election of Delegates.—That after the year nineteen hundred and twelve the election for Delegate from the Territory of Alaska, provided by "An Act providing for the election of a Delegate to the House of Representatives from the Territory of Alaska," approved May seventh, nineteen hundred and six, shall be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November in the year nineteen hundred and fourteen, and every second year thereafter on the said Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, and all of the provisions of the aforesaid Act shall continue to be in full force and effect and shall apply to the said election in every respect as is now provided for the election to be held in the month of August therein: Provided, That the time for holding an election in said Territory for Delegate in Alaska to the House of Representatives to fill a vacancy, whether such vacancy is caused by failure to elect at the time prescribed by law, or by the death, resignation, or incapacity of a person elected, may be prescribed by an act passed by the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska: Provided further, That when such election is held it shall be governed in every respect by the laws passed by Congress governing such election. [37 Stat. L. 517.]

The Act of May 7, 1906, ch. 2083, mentioned in the text, is given infra, p. 287.

The provisions of the text supersede those of the Act of May 7, 1906, ch. 2083, § 2, 34 Stat. L. 170, which regulated the first election of a delegate for Alaska.

SEC. 18. Creating railroad commission.—That an officer of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army, a geologist in charge of Alaska surveys, an officer in the Engineer Corps of the United States Navy, and a civil engineer who has had practical experience in railroad construction and has not been connected with any railroad enterprise in said Territory be appointed by the President as a commission hereby authorized and instructed to conduct an examination into the transportation question in the Territory of Alaska; to examine railroad routes from the seaboard to the coal fields and to the interior and navigable waterways; to secure surveys and other information with respect to railroads, including cost of construction and operation; to obtain information in respect to the coal fields and their proximity to railroad routes; and to make report of the facts to Congress on or before the first day of December, nineteen hundred and twelve, or as soon thereafter as may be practicable, together with their conclusions and recommendations in respect to the best and most available routes for railroads in Alaska which will develop the country and the resources thereof for the use of the people of the United States: Provided further, That the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated to defray the expenses of said commission. [37 Stat. L. 517.]

For the "Alaska Railroad Act" of March 12, 1914, ch. 37, see infra, division V, Railroads, Wagon Roads, Aërials and Tramways.

SEC. 19. [Compilation of laws authorized.] That the Committee on Territories of the Senate and the Committee on Territories of the House of Representatives are hereby authorized, empowered, and directed to jointly codify, compile, publish, and annotate all the laws of the United States applicable to the Territory of Alaska, and said committees are jointly authorized to employ such assistance as may be necessary for that purpose; and the sum of five thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to cover the expenses of said work, which shall be paid upon vouchers properly signed and approved by the chairmen of said committees. [37 Stat. L. 518.]

By the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 11, 23 Stat. L. 27, the attorney-general was directed to compile certain laws relating to Alaska.

SEC. 20. Laws shall be submitted to Congress.—That all laws passed by the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska shall be submitted to the Congress by the President of the United States, and, if disapproved by Congress, they shall be null and of no effect. [37 Stat. L. 518.]

[SEC. 1.] Government wharf in Alaska: * * * For reconstructing or repairing and putting in safe and proper condition the wharf at Sitka, Alaska, five thousand dollars to be immediately available: Provided, That hereafter the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized to charge and fix the rates of dockage and wharfage to be paid by any private vessel or person allowed to use said wharf, the said receipts to be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States as a miscellaneous receipt derived from Government property; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall direct, by regulation or otherwise, by whom said wharfage and dockage receipts shall be collected. [29 Stat. L. 413.]

The above provision is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of June 11, 1896, ch. 420. It is omitted from volume 2 of Supp. R. S.

A subsequent appropriation for repairs was made by the Act of March 3, 1915, ch. 75, § 1, infra, p. 299.

An Act making further provision for a civil government in Alaska, and for other purposes.

SEC. 2. [Governor — appointment, powers and duties.] There shall be appointed for the district a governor, who shall reside therein during his term of office and be charged with the interests of the United States Government within the district. To the end aforesaid he shall have authority to see that the laws enacted for the district are enforced and to require the faithful discharge of their duties by the officials appointed to administer the same. He may also grant reprieves for offenses committed against the laws of the district or of the United States until the decision of the President thereon shall be made known. He shall be ex officio commander in chief of the militia of the district, and shall have power to call out the same when necessary to the due execution of the laws and to preserve the peace, and to cause all able-bodied citizens of the United States in the district to enroll and serve as such when the public exigency demands; and he shall perform generally in and over said district such acts as pertain to the office of governor of a Territory, so far as the same may be made or become applicable thereto. He shall, subject to the direction and approval of the Secretary of the Interior, advertise for and receive bids and, in behalf of the United States, contract from year to year with the responsible asylum or sanitarium west of the main range of the Rocky Mountains submitting the lowest bid for the care and custody of persons legally adjudged insane in said district of Alaska; the cost of advertising for bids, executing the contract, and caring for the insane to be paid, until otherwise provided by law, by the Secretary of the Treasury, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, on accounts and vouchers duly approved by the governor and the Secretary of the Interior. The governor shall from time to time inquire into the operations of any person, company, association, or corporation authorized by the United States, by contract or otherwise, to kill seal or other fur-bearing animals in the district, and any and all violations by such person, company, association, or corporation of the agreement with the United States under which the operations are being conducted, and shall annually report to Congress the result of such inquiries. He shall make an annual report, on the first day of October in each year, to the President of the United States, of his official acts and doings, and of the condition of the district, with reference to its resources, industries, population, and the administration of the civil government thereof. And the President of the United States shall have power to review and to confirm or annul any reprieves granted or other acts done by him. The governor may appoint and commission one or more notaries public for the district, and appointments of notaries public heretofore made by him are hereby legalized, and all acts performed by them by virtue of their notarial commissions shall be for all purposes as valid as though the governor had at the time full and complete legal authority to appoint the commission then. [31 Stat. L. 321.]

This is the second section of title I of the "Carter Act." Section 1 provided that the territory should constitute a civil and judicial district and located the seat of government. It was superseded by the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 387, §§ 1 and 2, supra, p. 250.

The fifth sentence of the foregoing section relating to the care of the insane was superseded by the Act of Feb. 6, 1909, ch. 80, § 7, infra, p. 294.

The sixth sentence of this section relating to the killing of seals was in part superseded by the Act of April 21, 1910, ch. 183, infra, division VI, and supersedes a provision of the latter part of section 5 of the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, 33 Stat. L. 25.

The provisions of the text supersede those of the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 2, 23 Stat. L. 24, relating to the same subject.

SEC. 3. [Surveyor-general.] The surveyor-general of the district shall be ex officio secretary thereof, and as such shall be custodian of the district seal, which shall be provided by the Attorney-General. The surveyor-general, as ex officio secretary of the district, shall perform the official duties required by law to be performed by the secretary of a Territory of the United States, in so far as applicable to said district, and such other duties as may be required by law. [31 Stat. L. 322.]

SEC. 4. [District courts established — judges — divisions, terms, etc.]
* * * That there is hereby established a district court for the district of Alaska, with the jurisdiction of circuit and district courts of the United States and with general jurisdiction in civil, criminal, equity, and admiralty causes; and four district judges shall be appointed for the district, each at an annual salary of seven thousand five hundred dollars, who shall during their terms of office reside in the divisions of the district to which they may be respectively assigned by the President. The court shall consist of four divisions, which shall also be recording divisions. Division numbered one shall consist of all that part of the district of Alaska lying east of the one hundred and forty-first meridian of west longitude. Division numbered two shall consist of all that territory lying west of a line commencing on the Arctic coast at the one hundred and forty-eighth meridian; thence extending south along the easterly watershed of the Colville River to a point on the Rocky Mountain divide between the headwaters of Colville River on the north and west and the waters of the Chandlar on the south; thence southwesterly along the divide between the waters of the Colville River, the Kotzebue Sound, and Norton Sound on the north and west and the waters of the Youkon on the south to the one hundred and sixty-first meridian of west longitude; thence along said meridian to the Kuskokwim River; thence southwesterly along the center of the channel of said Kuskokwim River to Bering Sea; the said division to include all the islands lying north of the fifty-ninth parallel of north latitude. Division numbered three shall consist of all that territory lying south and west of the line starting on the coast of the Gulf of Alaska at the one hundred and forty-first meridian of west longitude; thence northerly along said meridian to a point due east from Mount Kimball; thence west to summit of Mount Kimball; thence southwesterly along the southerly watershed of the headwaters of Tanana River; thence westerly along the divide between the waters of the Gulf of Alaska on the south and the waters of the Yukon on the north to the summit of Mount McKinley; thence continuing westerly along the divide between the waters of the Gulf of Alaska and Bristol Bay on the south and the waters of the Yukon and Kuskokwim on the north to the one hundred and fifty-ninth meridian of west longitude; thence northwesterly to the Kuskokwim River on the one hundred and sixty-first meridian of west longitude; thence southwesterly along the center of said river to Bering Sea; said division to include the Alaska peninsula, the Aleutian Islands, and all islands along the coast of this district south and west of the said district and all lying south of the fifty-ninth parallel of north latitude. Division numbered four shall consist of all that part of the district of Alaska lying east of the second division and north of the third division. One general term of court shall be held each year at Juneau, and such additional terms at other places in the first division as the Attorney-General may direct. One general term of court shall be held each year at Nome, and such additional terms at other places in the second division as the Attorney-General may direct. One general term of court shall be held each year at Valdez, and such additional terms at other places in the third division as the Attorney-General may direct. One general term of court shall be held each year at Fairbanks, and such additional terms at other places in the fourth division as the Attorney-General may direct. Each of the judges is authorized and directed to hold such special terms of court as may be necessary for the public welfare or for the dispatch of the business of the court at such times and places in their respective districts as any of them, respectively, may deem expedient, or as the Attorney-General may direct; and each shall have authority to employ interpreters and to make allowances for the necessary expenses of his court, and to employ an official court stenographer at such compensation as shall be fixed by the Attorney-General. At least thirty days' notice shall be given by the judge, or the clerk, of the time and place of holding the several terms of the court. [35 Stat. L. 839.]

This section was amended to read as above given by section 2 of an Act of March 3, 1909, ch. 269, entitled "An Act to amend section eighty-six of an act to provide a government for the territory of Hawaii, to provide for additional judges, and for other judicial purposes." In this section as originally enacted provision was made for three district judges and three divisions of the court.

The provisions of the text supersede those of the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 3, 23 Stat. L. 24, and likewise those of the Act of June 13, 1902, ch. 1082, 32 Stat. L. 385, which redivided the district of Alaska into three recording and judicial divisions. Section 7 of said Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, 23 Stat. L. 25, defining the powers of the district court, was likewise superseded by the text.

Effect of amendment.—"The Alaskan Code (June 6, 1900, 31 Stat. 321, 322, §§ 4 and 5, c. 786) created one District Court with three judges having general civil and criminal jurisdiction over the entire district, and authority to hold regular terms at Juneau, St. Michael's and Eagle City, and special terms at such times and places in the district as they or any of them might deem expedient. The Act of March 3, 1909 (35 Stat. 838, 839, c. 269), in providing for a fourth division did not contemplate an interruption of the functions of the judge throughout the entire district, nor did it destroy the unity of the District Court. But while preserving unimpaired the power of the court and judges, it fixed a new place at which the same District Court must be held. It did not create a new tribunal, with new officers, to be organized in a new political division, but it continued the jurisdiction and power of the judge to be exercised anywhere in Alaska. It did not revoke his authority to summon jurors to attend at any session of the District Court, whether permitted to be held at Fairbanks under the Act of 1900 or required there to be held after July 1, under the Act of 1909. The principle involved is, in some of its aspects, like that considered in Rosencrans v. United States, (1897) 165 U. S. 257, 17 S. Ct. 302, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 708, where it was said that "jurisdiction is co-extensive with district and no mere multiplication of places at which courts are to be held or mere creation of division nullifies it." Matheson v. United States, (1913) 227 U. S. 540, 33 S. Ct. 355, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 631.

"Courts of the United States" as including District Court of Alaska.—In McAllister v. U. S., (1891) 141 U. S. 174, 11 S. Ct. 949, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 693, affirming (1887) 22 Ct. Cl. 318, it was held, construing the earlier Act of 1884, that the court established in Alaska was not one of the "courts of the United States" within the meaning of section 1768 of the Revised Statutes of the United States which provided that "during any recess of the Senate, the President is authorized, in his discretion, to suspend any civil officer appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, except judges of the courts of the United States."

"General jurisdiction in criminal causes."—A prosecution for murder, pending when the Act of March 3, 1899, ch. 429, 30 Stat. L. 1253, was passed establishing a criminal code and code of criminal procedure for Alaska, must, in view of the provision therein for the preservation of pending causes, be regarded as within the general jurisdiction in criminal cases conferred upon the District Court for the district of Alaska by this section, whether that court be one newly created by that act, which contains no provision for a transfer of pending causes, or be an existing tribunal continued thereby. Bird v. U. S., (1902) 187 U. S. 118, 23 S. Ct. 42, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 100.

Court of last resort.—The court established by the Act of 1884 was the court of last resort within the limits of the territory. It was, therefore, in every substantial sense, the Supreme Court of that territory, within the meaning of the 15th section of the Act of 1891, conferring jurisdiction on the Circuit Court of Appeals. The Coquitlam v. U. S., (1896) 163 U. S. 346, 16 S. Ct. 1117, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 184.

Prohibition.—In the case of In re Cooper, (1891) 138 U. S. 404, 11 S. Ct. 289, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 993, which was an application presented to the United States Supreme Court for leave to file a petition for a writ of prohibition to the District Court of the United States for the District of Alaska in an admiralty proceeding, the court said: "We are of opinion, upon the preliminary question, that this court has jurisdiction to proceed in respect to the District Court of the United States for the District of Alaska, by way of prohibition, under section 688 of the Revised Statutes, and leave will therefore be given to file the petition for such writ and the accompanying suggestion." See also In re Cooper, (1892) 143 U. S. 472, 12 S. Ct. 453, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 232, wherein the court, commenting on the decision above, said: "Section 688, Revised Statutes, provides: 'The Supreme Court shall have power to issue writs of prohibition to the District Courts when proceeding as courts of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction.' And although we were of opinion when the application for the rule was made, and subsequently held (McAllister v. United States, 141 U. S. 174), that the District Court for Alaska was not one of the courts mentioned in Article III of the Constitution, declaring that the judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior courts as Congress shall from time to time establish, we nevertheless concluded that where the District Court of Alaska was acting as a District Court of the United States and, as such, proceeding in admiralty, it came within that section, and this court had power to issue the writ of prohibition to that court in a proper case; and as the questions involved could be, in our judgment, more satisfactorily presented upon a return, we granted the rule. In re Cooper, 138 U. S. 404."

Terms.—Formerly two terms of the District Court of Alaska were provided for in each year. The Sylvia Handy, (1892) 143 U. S. 513, 12 S. Ct. 464, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 246.

Transfer of cause to "adjoining state."—In Lewis v. Johnson, (1898) 90 Fed. 673, it was held that Rev. Stat. secs. 601, 637, authorizing the transfer of a cause to a district of an "adjoining state" under certain circumstances, did not authorize the removal of an Alaskan cause to the state of Washington, as that was not an "adjoining state" within the meaning of the statute.

Admiralty appeals.—The Act of Feb. 16, 1875, relating to questions reviewable in admiralty appeals, is applicable to Alaskan appeals. In re Cooper, (1892) 143 U. S. 472, 12 S. Ct. 453, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 232; The Sylvia Handy, (1892) 143 U. S. 513, 12 S. Ct. 464, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 246.

SEC. 5. [Jurisdiction of divisions, etc.—place of trial.] The jurisdiction of each division of the court shall extend over the district of Alaska, but the court in which the action is pending may, on motion, change the place of trial in any action, civil or criminal, from one place to another place in the same division or to a designated place in another division in either of the following cases:

First. When there is reason to believe that an impartial trial can not be had therein;

Second. When the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted by the change;

Third. When from any cause the judge is disqualified from acting;

but in such event if the judge of another division will appear and try the action, no change of place of trial must be made;

Fourth. By the court, on its own motion, when, considering available means of travel, it appears that the defendant will be put to unnecessary expense and inconvenience if summoned to defend in the place or division in which the action has been commenced; and when it appears to the satisfaction of the court, or judge thereof, that an action has been commenced in a place or division remote from the residence of the defendant for the purpose of causing unnecessary expense or inconvenience, the place of trial shall be changed at the cost of the plaintiff, and such costs shall not be recovered from the defendant.

In any criminal prosecution the court shall change the place of trial where it appears to the satisfaction of the court that the defendant will not be prejudiced thereby and that the United States will be put to unnecessary expense in such criminal prosecution if the transfer is not made. [31 Stat. L. 323.]

Jurisdiction throughout district.—The court in each division is given jurisdiction throughout the district and an indictment returned in either division is not defective because it fails to charge that the offense was committed in that particular division. Griggs v. U. S., (1908) 158 Fed. 572.

SEC. 6. [Clerks and commissioners — appointment and duties.] The respective judges of the court shall appoint, and at pleasure remove, clerks and commissioners in and for the district, who shall have the jurisdiction conferred by law in any part thereof, but who shall, during their terms of office, each reside at the place in the district designated in the respective orders of appointment.

The commissioners shall be ex officio justices of the peace, recorders, and probate judges, and shall perform all the duties and exercise all the powers, civil and criminal, imposed or conferred on the United States commissioners by the general laws of the United States and the special laws applicable to the district.

They shall also have power to grant writs of habeas corpus for the purpose of inquiring into the cause of restraint of liberty, which writs shall be made returnable before a district judge, and like proceedings shall be had thereon as if the same had been granted by the judge under the general laws of the United States in such cases.

The commissioners shall also have the powers of notaries public, and shall keep a memorandum of all deeds and other instruments of writing acknowledged before them and relating to the title to or transfer of property within the district, which memorandum shall be subject to public inspection.

And all records of instruments of writing hitherto made by any United States commissioner in the district of Alaska are hereby declared to be public records of such district and shall have the same force and effect as if recorded in conformity with the provisions of this Act.

The commissioners shall also keep a record of all fines and forfeitures received by them, and shall pay over the same quarterly to the clerk of the division of the district court in which they were appointed. [31 Stat. L. 323.]

Earlier provisions regulating the appointment of commissioners were contained in the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 5, 23 Stat. L. 25, and were superseded by those of the text.

Jurisdiction of commissioners.—The former statute on the subject of commissioners (Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 5), read in part as follows: "Such commissioners shall exercise all the duties and powers, civil and criminal, now conferred on justices of the peace under the general laws of the state of Oregon, so far as the same may be applicable in said district, and may not be in conflict with this act or the laws of the United States."

As to application of the laws of Oregon under this section, see Finn v. Hoyt, (1892) 52 Fed. 83; Ex p. Kie, (1891) 46 Fed. 485; Ex p. Emma, (1891) 48 Fed. 211.

Another provision of section 5 read as follows: "They shall also have jurisdiction, subject to the supervision of the district judge, in all testamentary and probate matters, and for this purpose their courts shall be opened at stated terms and be courts of record, and be provided with a seal for the authentication of their official acts." In Ex p. Emma, (1891) 48 Fed. 211, commissioners were held to have the jurisdiction in probate matters of the Oregon County Courts.

Appeal from commissioners.—By Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 7, 23 Stat. L. 24, it is provided that "an appeal shall lie in any case, civil or criminal, from the judgment of said commissioners to the said district court where the amount involved in any civil case is two hundred dollars or more, and in any criminal case where a fine of more than one hundred dollars or imprisonment is imposed, upon the filing of a sufficient appeal bond by the party appealing, to be approved by the court or commissioner."

As to appeal from commissioners to District Court, see Decker v. Williams, (1896) 73 Fed. 308, holding that the amount involved must be two hundred dollars or more.

SEC. 7. [Clerks — duties — fees — moneys received, etc.] That four clerks shall be appointed for the court, one of whom shall be assigned to each division thereof, and during his term of office shall reside at such place in the division as the Attorney-General may direct. Each clerk shall, in his division of the district, perform the duties required or authorized by law to be performed by clerks of United States courts in other districts, and such other duties as may be prescribed by the laws of the United States relating to the district of Alaska. He shall preserve copies of all laws applicable to the district and shall preserve all records and record all proceedings and official acts of his division of the court. He shall also collect and receive all moneys arising from the fees of his office, from licenses, fines, forfeitures, judgments, or on any other account authorized by law to be paid to or collected by him, and shall apply the same, except the money derived from licenses, to the incidental expenses of the proper division of the district court and the allowance thereof as directed in written orders, duly made and signed by the judge, and shall account for the same in detail, and for any balances on account thereof, under oath, quarterly, or more frequently if required, to the court, the Attorney-General, and the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That moneys accruing from violations of the customs laws, civil customs cases, or internal-revenue cases, moneys, not including costs, accruing from civil post-office suits, fines in criminal cases for violations of the postal laws, the net proceeds of sales of public property under section thirty-six hundred and eighteen, Revised Statutes as amended, and any other moneys the disposition of which is otherwise specially provided for by law, shall not be available for the expenses of the court, but shall be paid over or deposited as provided by law for other districts. And "after all payments ordered by the judge shall have been made, any balances remaining in the hands of the clerk shall be by him deposited to the credit of the United States and be covered into the Treasury of the United States at such times and under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe. The clerk shall be ex officio recorder of instruments as hereinafter provided and also register of wills for the division, and shall establish secure offices for the safe-keeping of his official records where terms of his division of the court are held. He may appoint necessary deputies and employ other necessary clerical assistance to aid him in the expeditious discharge of the duties of his office, with the approval and at compensation to be fixed by the court or judge, subject to the approval of the Attorney-General. Any person so appointed or employed shall be paid by the clerk on the order of the judge, as other court expenses are paid." [35 Stat. L. 840.]

This section was amended to read as above given by section 3 of an Act of March 3, 1909, ch. 269, entitled "An Act to amend section eighty-six of an act to provide a government for the territory of Hawaii, to provide for additional judges, and for other purposes." The original section provided for the appointment of three clerks, one of whom should be assigned to each of the three divisions of the court then existing.

The provisions of the text as amended supersede those of the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 4, 23 Stat. L. 24.

SEC. 8. [District attorneys.] That four district attorneys shall be appointed for the district, one of whom shall be assigned to each division and shall reside at such place in the division as the Attorney-General shall direct. They shall each perform the duties required to be performed by United States district attorneys in other districts, and such other duties as may be required by law; and they shall each receive a salary of five thousand dollars per annum and shall not while in office accept retainers or engage in any other law business in the district than that pertaining to the duties of their office. The Attorney-General may, upon the recommendation of the district attorney, appoint and at pleasure remove one or more assistant district attorneys and one or more clerical assistants, who shall receive such compensation as the Attorney-General may fix, to be paid as other assistant United States district attorneys and clerical assistants are paid. In the case of the death or disability of a district attorney the judge may appoint a suitable person to fill the office until his successor is appointed and qualified or until the disability is removed. [35 Stat. L. 841.]

This section was amended to read as above given by section 4 of an Act of March 3, 1909, ch. 269, entitled "An Act to amend section eighty-six of an act to provide a government for the territory of Hawaii, to provide for additional judges, and for other judicial purposes." The original act provided for three district attorneys, one to be assigned to each of the three divisions of the district.

Prior provisions regulating the appointment of a district attorney were contained in the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 4, 23 Stat. L. 24.

SEC. 9. [Marshals — deputies.] A marshal shall be appointed for each division of the district, and each marshal shall have authority and be required to appoint, subject to the approval of the Attorney-General, such deputy marshals as he may deem necessary for the efficient execution of the law and the orders of the court and of the commissioners appointed as herein provided.

That when in the opinion of the Attorney-General the public interest requires it, he may, on the recommendation of the marshal, which recommendation shall state the facts as distinguished from conclusions, showing necessity for the same, allow the marshals to employ necessary office deputies and clerical assistance, upon salaries to be fixed by the Attorney-General, from time to time, and paid as other officers of the court are paid.

When any of such office deputies is engaged in the service or attempted service of any writ, process, subpoena, or other order of the court, or when necessarily absent from the place of his regular employment upon official business, he shall be allowed his actual traveling expenses only, and his necessary and actual expenses for lodging and subsistence, not to exceed four dollars per day, and the necessary actual expenses in transporting prisoners, including necessary guard hire; and he shall make and render accounts thereof as provided for.

Each marshal shall have the general authority and powers and be subject to the obligations of United States marshals in the States and Territories. He shall be the executive officer of the court, and charged with the execution of all processes thereof and with the transportation and custody of prisoners and insane persons, and he shall be ex officio keeper of the jails and penitentiaries of the division of the district to which he may be assigned, and shall be responsible on his official bond for the acts of all deputy marshals appointed by him. In case of the death of a marshal the district judge shall appoint a suitable person to fill the vacancy until his successor is appointed and qualified. The persons so appointed shall give such bonds as the court may require.

The marshal shall deliver persons duly adjudged insane in the district to the authorities of such asylum or sanitarium as the governor, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, may designate, and for the service of process in connection with and the guarding and transportation of the insane he shall be compensated as in the case of prisoners.

The deputy marshals shall be ex officio constables and executive officers of the commissioners herein provided for, and shall have the powers and discharge the duties of United States deputy marshals, and also those of constables, under the laws of the United States applicable to said district. [31 Stat. L. 324.]

By the Appropriation Act of June 4, 1897, 30 Stat. L. 56, par. 14, the marshal was required to appoint one additional deputy marshal at each point where an additional commissioner should be located by the President. That provision is, however, obviously superseded by this section 9. The commissioners are now, according to section 6 of this Act, appointed by the judges instead of by the President as formerly.

Early provisions regulating the appointment and powers of marshals were contained in the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, §§ 4 and 6, 23 Stat. L. 25.

Further provisions as to marshals are made by the Act of March 3, 1909, ch. 269, § 6, infra, p. 297. By the Alaska Code of Criminal Procedure, § 459, 32 Stat. L. 2, the bond of marshals may be increased.

So much of the text as relates to the care and custody of insane persons is now superseded. See the notes to section 2 of this Act, supra, p. 260.

Liability of marshal for acts of deputy.
— The marshal is liable for the acts of his deputies in serving or executing the process issued by the commissioners. Holden v. Williams, (1896) 75 Fed. 798.

Employment of U. S. troops in Alaska for protection of life and property, see (1889) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 368.

SEC. 10. [Appointment of officers, terms, etc.] The governor, surveyor-general, attorneys, judges, and the marshals provided for in this Act shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall hold their respective offices for the term of four years and until their successors are appointed and qualified, unless sooner removed by the President for cause.

The officers so appointed shall severally be entitled to receive annual compensation as follows:

The governor, the sum of five thousand dollars; the surveyor-general and ex officio secretary of the district, as full compensation, four thousand dollars; the judges, each the sum of five thousand dollars; each marshal, the sum of four thousand dollars; the clerks, each the sum of three thousand five hundred dollars; the district attorneys, each three thousand dollars, the salaries payable from the Treasury of the United States, as like officers are paid in other districts.

Each clerk shall collect all money arising from the fees of his office or on any other account authorized by law to be paid to or collected by him, and shall report the same and the disposition thereof in detail, under oath, quarterly, or more frequently if required, to the court, the Attorney-General, and the Secretary of the Treasury, and all public money received by him and his deputies for fees or on any other account shall be paid out by the clerk on the order of the court, duly made and signed by the judge, and any balance remaining in his hands after all payments ordered by the court shall have been made shall be by him covered into the Treasury of the United States at such times and under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

The clerk may employ necessary clerical help with the approval [of] and at compensation to be fixed by the court to aid him in the expeditious discharge of the business of his office. Any person so employed shall be paid by the clerk on the order of the court, as other court expenses are paid.

The governor, surveyor-general, marshals, judges, clerks of court, and district attorneys shall, in addition to their salaries, be paid their actual traveling and subsistence expenses when traveling in the discharge of their official duties. Accounts for such expenses shall be rendered and paid as are accounts of judges, marshals, clerks, and district attorneys for like expenses in other districts.

In case of the death, removal, resignation, or absence of the governor from the district, the surveyor-general as ex officio secretary of the district shall have, and he is hereby authorized and required to execute and perform, all the powers and duties of the governor during such vacancy or absence, or until another governor shall be appointed to fill such vacancy. [31 Stat. L. 325.]

The salaries of district judges are increased by the Act of March 3, 1909, ch. 269, amending section 4 of this Act, supra, p. 262. The salaries of district attorneys are increased by the Act of March 3, 1909, ch. 269, amending section 8 of this Act, supra, p. 266.

By the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 141, § 1, 38 Stat. L. 1021, there was appropriated $7,000 for the payment of the salary of the governor of Alaska.

The provisions of the text apparently supersede those of the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, which read as follows:

"SEC. 9. That the governor, attorney, judge, marshal, clerk, and commissioners provided for in this act shall be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall hold their respective offices for the term of four years, and until their successors are appointed and qualified. They shall severally receive the fees of office established by law for the several offices the duties of which have been hereby conferred upon them, as the same are determined and allowed in respect of similar offices under the laws of the United States, which fees shall be reported to the Attorney-General and paid into the Treasury of the United States. They shall receive respectively the following annual salaries. The governor, the sum of three thousand dollars; the attorney, the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars; the marshal, the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars; the judge, the sum of three thousand dollars; and the clerk, the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars, payable to them quarterly from the Treasury of the United States. The District Judge, Marshal, and District Attorney shall be paid their actual, necessary expenses when traveling in the discharge of their official duties. A detailed account shall be rendered of such expenses under oath and as to the marshal and district attorney such account shall be approved by the judge, and as to his expenses by the Attorney-General. The commissioners shall receive the usual fees of United States commissioners and of justices of the peace for Oregon, and such fees for recording instruments as are allowed by the laws of Oregon for similar services, and in addition a salary of one thousand dollars each. The deputy marshals, in addition to the usual fees of constables in Oregon, shall receive each a salary of seven hundred and fifty dollars, which salaries shall also be payable quarterly out of the Treasury of the United States. Each of said officials shall, before entering on the duties of his office, take and subscribe an oath that he will faithfully execute the same, which said oath may be taken before the judge of said district or any United States district or circuit judge. That all officers appointed for said district, before entering upon the duties of their offices, shall take the oaths required by law[,] and the laws of the United States, not locally inapplicable to said district and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby extended thereto; but there shall be no legislative assembly in said district, nor shall any Delegate be sent to Congress therefrom. And the said clerk shall execute a bond, with sufficient sureties, in the penalty of ten thousand dollars, for the faithful performance of his duties, and file the same with the Secretary of the Treasury before entering on the duties of his office; And the commissioners shall each execute a bond, with sufficient sureties, in the penalty of three thousand dollars, for the faithful performance of their duties, and file the same with the clerk before entering on the duties of their office." [23 Stat. L. 26, 27.]

Compensation of commissioners.—The intent of section 9 was that a commissioner should receive the fees appropriate to the services performed where fees were authorized, and that his salary should cover other services. He was not entitled to fees as register of the land office. Jewett v. U. S., (1892) 27 Ct. Cl. 519.

Compensation of marshal.—Under section 9 all fees received by a marshal in Alaska had to be paid into the treasury of the United States. This rule applied to fees earned for services to the United States. U. S. v. Hillyer, (1893) 58 Fed. 678.

National banks in Alaska.—Under the above provision that the laws of the United States were extended to Alaska, the attorney-general ruled that national banks might be organized there. (1890) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 678.

SEC. 11. [Accounts of commissioners and deputy marshals.] That an accurate detailed account of all fees earned and expenses incurred by commissioners and deputy marshals shall be prepared in duplicate quarterly, duly verified by the oath of the commissioner or deputy marshal rendering the account, and forwarded to the clerk for the proper division of the district court and approved by the judge thereof, if found to be in accordance with law. After approval by the judge the original of each such account shall be forwarded by the clerk to the Department of Justice for revision and the duplicate filed in the court. All net fees earned in excess of the sum of three thousand dollars per calendar year or in excess of that rate for a less period, by any commissioner or deputy marshal, shall be annually paid to the clerk of the proper division of the court to be available for incidental expenses of the district court of the proper division, such payment of such incidental expenses to be accompanied by a verified detailed statement of said clerk. [35 Stat. L. 841.]

This section was amended to read as above given by section 5 of an Act of March 3, 1909, ch. 269, entitled "An Act to amend section eighty-six of an act to provide a government for the territory of Hawaii, to provide for additional judges, and for other judicial purposes." The original section was as follows:

"SEC. 11. An accurate detailed account of all fees received and disbursements made by commissioners and deputy marshals shall be filed quarterly with the clerk for the proper division of the district court and approved by the judge thereof, if found to be in accordance with law; and all net fees received in excess of the sum of three thousand dollars per annum by any commissioner or deputy marshal shall be annually paid to the clerk of the proper division of the court and by him paid into the Treasury of the United States, such payment to be accompanied by a verified detailed statement of such deputy or commissioner." [31 Stat. L. 326.]

SEC. 12 [Clerks' bonds.] The clerks of the court shall each, before entering upon the duties of his office, execute a bond, with sufficient sureties, to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, or the court or a judge thereof, in the penalty of twenty thousand dollars, for the faithful performance of his official duties, and file the same with the Attorney-General; and each commissioner shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, execute a bond, with sufficient sureties, to be approved by the court, or a judge thereof, in the penalty of one thousand dollars, for the faithful performance of his official duties, and file the same with the clerk, who shall send a certified copy thereof to the Attorney-General. [31 Stat. L. 326.]

SEC. 13. [Recording divisions and districts.] The judges of the district, or a majority of them, shall, as soon as practicable after their appointment, meet, and by appropriate order, to be thereafter entered in each division of the court, divide the district into three recording divisions, designate the division of the court to supervise each, and also define the boundaries thereof by reference to natural objects and permanent landmarks or monuments, in such manner that the boundaries of each recording division can be readily determined and become generally known from such description, which order shall be given publicity in such manner by posting, publication, or otherwise as the judges or any division of the court may direct, the necessary expense of the publication of such order and description of the recording divisions to be allowed and paid as other court expenses.

At any regular or special term an order may be made by the court establishing one or more recording districts within the recording division under the supervision of such division of the court and defining the boundaries thereof by reference to natural objects and permanent landmarks or monuments, in such manner that the boundaries thereof can be readily determined.

The order establishing a recording district shall designate a commissioner to be ex officio recorder thereof, and shall also designate the place where the commissioner shall keep his recording office within the recording district:

Provided, The clerk of the court shall be ex officio recorder of all that portion of the recording division under the supervision of his division of the court not embraced within the limits of a recording district established, bounded, and described therein as authorized by this Act, and when any part of the division for which a clerk has been recording shall be embraced in a recording district, such clerk shall transcribe that portion of his records appertaining to such district and deliver the same to the commissioner designated as recorder thereof.

Whenever it appears to the satisfaction of the court that the public interests demand, or that the convenience of the people require, the court may change or modify the boundaries or discontinue a recording district or change the location of the recording office, or remove the commissioner acting as ex officio recorder, and appoint another commissioner to fill the office. [31 Stat. L. 326.]

The first paragraph of the foregoing section is superseded by an amendment to section 4 of this Act by an Act of March 3, 1909, ch. 269, § 2, given supra, p. 261, whereby the district is divided into four recording divisions.

SEC. 14. [Record books, etc.] The clerk as ex officio recorder must procure such books for records as the business of his office requires and such as may be required by the respective commissioners designated as recorders in his division of the court, but orders for the same must first be obtained from the court or the judge thereof. The respective officers acting as ex officio recorders shall have the custody [of] and must keep all the books, records, maps, and papers deposited in their respective offices, and where a recorder is removed or from any cause becomes unable to act, or a recording district is discontinued, the records and all books, papers, and property relating thereto shall be delivered to the clerk or such officer or person as the court or judge thereof may direct.

The record books procured by the clerk, as herein provided, shall be paid for by him, on the order of the court, out of any moneys in his hands, as other court expenses are paid. [31 Stat. L. 327.]

SEC. 15. [What recorded.] The respective recorders shall, upon the payment of the fees for the same prescribed by the Attorney-General, record separately, in large and well-bound separate books, in fair hand:

First. Deeds, grants, transfers, contracts to sell or convey real estate and mortgages of real estate, releases of mortgages, powers of attorney, leases which have been acknowledged or proved, mortgages upon personal property;

Second. Certificates of marriage and marriage contracts and births and deaths;

Third. Wills devising real estate admitted to probate;

Fourth. Official bonds;

Fifth. Transcripts of judgments which by law are made liens upon real estate;

Sixth. All orders and judgments made by the district court or the commissioners in probate matters affecting real estate which are required to be recorded;

Seventh. Notices and declaration of water rights;

Eighth. Assignments for the benefit of creditors;

Ninth. Affidavits of annual work done on mining claims;

Tenth. Notices of mining location and declaratory statements;

Eleventh. Such other writings as are required or permitted by law to be recorded, including the liens of mechanics, laborers and others:

Provided, Notices of location of mining claims shall be filed for record within ninety days from the date of the discovery of the claim described in the notice, and all instruments shall be recorded in the recording district in which the property or subject-matter affected by the instrument is situated, and where the property or subject-matter is not situated in any established recording district the instrument affecting the same shall be recorded in the office of the clerk of the division of the court having supervision over the recording division in which such property or subject-matter is situated. [31 Stat. L. 327.]

For general regulations as to mining claims, etc., see infra, this title, division III, Mineral Lands, Mines and Mining.

Recording location notice.—This section does not require, but merely permits, the recording of notices of mining locations, nor does it provide that the failure to record shall work a forfeiture of rights, and such forfeiture does not follow in the absence of a well-established rule or custom of the miners of the district to that effect. Sturtevant v. Vogel, (1909) 167 Fed. 448.

"Within ninety days."—The provision for recording a location notice "within ninety days" means that it shall be done "not beyond ninety days" from the date of discovery. A compliance with the act at any time before the last day has expired is within the statute. Butler v. Good Enough Min. Co., (1901) 1 Alaska 246.

SEC. 16. [Accounting for fees for unrecorded instruments.] Any clerk or commissioner authorized to record any instrument who having collected fees for so doing fails to record such instrument shall account to his successor in office, or to such person as the court may direct, for all the fees received by him for recording any instrument on file and unrecorded at the expiration of his official term, or at the time he is required to transfer his records to another officer under the direction of the court. And any clerk or commissioner who fails, neglects, or refuses to so account for fees received and not actually earned by the recording of instrument[s] shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, and imprisoned for not more than one year, or until the fees received and unearned as aforesaid shall have been properly accounted for and paid over by him, as hereinbefore provided. And in addition such fees may be recovered from such clerk or commissioner or the bondsmen of either, in a civil action which shall be brought by the district attorney, in the name of the United States, to recover the same; and the amount when recovered shall be by the court transferred to the successor in office of such recorder, who shall thereupon proceed to record the unrecorded instruments:

Provided, Miners in any organized mining district may make rules and regulations governing the recording of notices of location of mining claims, water rights, flumes and ditches, mill sites and affidavits of labor, not in conflict with this Act or the general laws of the United States; and nothing in this Act shall be construed so as to prevent the miners in any regularly organized mining district not within any recording district established by the court from electing their own mining recorder to act as such until a recorder therefor is appointed by the court:

Provided further, All records heretofore regularly made by the United States commissioner at Dyea, Skagway, and the recorder at Douglas City, not in conflict with any records regularly made with [by] the United States commissioner at Juneau, are hereby legalized. And all records heretofore made in good faith in any regularly organized mining district are hereby made public records, and the same shall be delivered to the recorder for the recording district including such mining district within six months from the passage of this Act. [31 Stat. L. 328.]

See the note to the preceding section.

Miners' rules.—The miners in an organized mining district cannot enact and enforce a rule or regulation in conflict with the laws of the United States, and any rule, regulation, or custom which undertakes to limit the time within which a miner may file his notice of location to less than ninety days must be held to be repealed by section 15, supra. Butler v. Good Enough Min. Co., (1901) 1 Alaska 246.

SEC. 17. [Notaries public — residence — term of office.] Every person appointed as a notary public must at the time of his appointment be a resident of the district and must continue to reside therein during his term of office. Removal from the district vacates his office and is equivalent to resignation.

The term of office of a notary public shall be four years from and after the date of his commission, but he may be sooner removed by the governor for misconduct in office. [31 Stat. L. 328.]

SEC. 18. [Notaries public — duties.] It shall be the duty of a notary public —

First. When requested, to demand acceptance and payment of foreign, domestic, and inland bills of exchange, or promissory notes, and protest the same for nonacceptance and nonpayment, and to exercise such other powers and duties as by the law of nations and according to commercial usages or by the laws of any State, government, or country may be performed by notaries, and keep a record of such acts.

Second. To take acknowledgment or proof of powers of attorney, deeds, mortgages, grants, transfers, and other instruments of writing executed by any person and to give a certificate of such proof or acknowledgment indorsed or attached to the instrument.

Third. To take depositions and affidavits and administer oaths and affirmations in all matters incident to the duties of the office or to be used before any court, judge, or officer.

Fourth. When requested and upon payment of his fees therefor to make and give a certified copy of any record in his office.

Fifth. To provide and keep an official seal, upon which must be engraved the name of the district and the words "Notary Public," with the surname of the notary and at least the initials of his Christian name. [31 Stat. L. 328.]

SEC. 19. [Protests of notaries, weight as evidence.] The protest of a notary public under his hand and seal of a bill of exchange or promissory note for nonacceptance or nonpayment, stating the presentment for acceptance or payment and the nonacceptance or nonpayment thereof, the service of notice on any and all parties to such bill of exchange or promissory note and specifying the mode of giving such notice and the reputed place of residence of the party to such bill of exchange or promissory note and of the party to whom same was given and the post-office nearest thereto is prima facie evidence of the facts contained therein. [31 Stat. L. 329.]

SEC. 20. [Notaries' records to be deposited with clerk of court.] It shall be the duty of every notary public, on his resignation or removal from office or at the expiration of his term and in case of his [the] death of his legal representative, to forthwith deposit all the records kept by him in the office of the clerk of the division of the district court in which he resides, and on failure to do so the person so offending is liable in damages to any person injured thereby. [31 Stat. L. 329.]

SEC. 21. [Duty of clerk as to records.] It shall be the duty of each clerk aforesaid to receive and safely keep all records and papers of the notary in each case above named and to give attested copies of them under his seal, for which he may demand such fees as by law may be allowed to the notaries, and such copies shall have the same effect as if certified by the notary. [31 Stat. L. 329.]

SEC. 22. [Bond of notaries.] Each notary must execute an official bond in the sum of one thousand dollars, which bond must be approved by the clerk of the division of the district court located nearest his residence. [31 Stat. L. 329.]

SEC. 23. [Filing, etc., of bond.] Each notary public, upon approval of his official bond, so soon as he has taken his official oath, must transmit such bond and oath, signed by him with his own proper signature to the office of the secretary of the district, whereupon the governor must issue a commission. [31 Stat. L. 329.]

SEC. 24. [Liability of notary.] For the official misconduct or neglect of a notary public, he and sureties on his official bond are liable to the parties injured thereby for all damages sustained. [31 Stat. L. 329.]

SEC. 25. [Continuance in office of existing officials.] The officers properly qualified and actually discharging official duties in the district at the time of the approval of this Act may continue to act in their respective official capacities until the expiration of the terms for which they were respectively appointed unless sooner removed. [31 Stat. L. 329.]

Section 26 of this Act, extending the mining laws of Alaska, is given infra, under division III, Mineral Lands, Mines and Mining.

Section 27, relating to lands of Indians or persons conducting Indian schools or missions, is given infra, under division IV, Public Lands.

Section 28 authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to make provision for the education of children in Alaska was superseded by the Act of Jan. 27, 1906, ch. 277, § 7, infra, p. 284.

Section 29 amends sections 363, 460, and 463 of the Alaska Code of Criminal Procedure, 30 Stat. L. 1325, 1336, 1338.

SEC. 30. [Fees of officers not otherwise compensated.] In case the law requires or authorizes any services to be performed or any act to be done by any official or person within the District of Alaska, and provides no compensation therefor, the Attorney-General may prescribe and promulgate a schedule of such fees, mileage, or other compensation as shall be by him deemed proper for each division of the court, and such schedule shall have the force and effect of law; and the Attorney-General may from time to time amend such schedule and promulgate the same as amended, and the schedule as amended and promulgated shall also have the force and effect of law. [31 Stat. L. 332.]

SEC. 31. [Public buildings — sites.] Any of the public buildings in the district not required for the customs service or military purposes may be used for court rooms and offices of the civil government; and the marshals of the district shall, each in his division, be the custodian of such buildings. Any division of the court may, where necessary, order the construction or repair of a jail building at the place or places where terms of the court are held, at a cost not to exceed three thousand dollars for each building, the same to be paid by the clerk as provided for the payment of other allowances for the necessary expenses of the court; and any part or portion of the unappropriated public domain of the United States, embracing not more than four thousand square feet, to be taken in compact form, as near as may be practicable, may be set aside by order of the court as a jail site, which order shall describe the location of the ground selected, where unsurveyed by metes and bounds and by reference to natural objects and permanent monuments, in such manner that its boundaries and its location may be readily determined, a certified copy of which order of the court shall be by the clerk thereof transmitted to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, who shall cause the same to be noted on the records of his office, and thereafter the ground described shall be reserved from sale or other disposition, unless for good cause the court shall vacate the order of reservation or Congress shall otherwise direct, and the sentence of imprisonment in any criminal case shall be carried out by confinement in the penitentiary or jails herein provided for, or as provided in section fifty-five hundred and forty-six of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Where a suitable court room is not available or can not be obtained at reasonable rental at the place or any of the places where terms of the court are held, the court may enter a like order of reservation and direct the construction of a suitable building where the sessions of the court may be held, the cost of such building not to exceed in any case the sum of five thousand dollars, the same to be paid and proceedings to reserve the land to be as in the case of the reservation of ground and construction of jail, as hereinbefore provided:

Provided, No court building or jail shall be constructed in any division of the district without authority from the Attorney-General, to whom the clerk shall furnish a verified account in detail of all expenditures made by him for buildings, repairs, or other purposes, together with his authority for each payment made. [31 Stat. L. 332.]

Earlier provisions were made for public buildings by the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 10, 23 Stat. L. 27.

Sec. 32. [Attorneys' admission fees — notaries' commission fees — use of fund.] For each certificate issued to a member of the bar, authorizing him to practice law in the district, a fee of ten dollars shall be paid to the clerk of the court, which shall be by him promptly remitted to the secretary of the district, and at the same time the clerk shall advise the governor of such remittance. For each commission issued to a notary public a fee of ten dollars shall be paid to the secretary of the district. The fees received by the secretary under this section and under chapter seventy-four of title two shall be by him retained and kept in a fund to be known as the district historical library fund. The fund thus collected shall be disbursed on the order of the governor for the purpose of establishing and maintaining the district historical library and museum. The same shall embrace copies of all laws relating to the district, and all papers and periodicals published within the district, and such other matter of historical interest as the governor may consider valuable and appropriate for such collection. The collection shall also embrace such curios relating to the aborigines and the settlers as may be by the governor deemed of historical importance. The collection thus made shall be described by the governor in the annual report of the governor to the Secretary of the Interior, and shall be by him kept in a secure place and turned over to his successor in office. The secretary of the district and the governor shall each annually account to the Secretary of the Interior for all receipts and disbursements in connection with such historical library and museum. [31 Stat. L. 333.]

Additional provision for the disposition of fees received by the secretary is made by section 2 of the Act of March 3, 1905, ch. 1497, infra, p. 286.

SEC. 33. [Depository of publications of Government.] The historical library and museum provided for in section thirty-two of this title is hereby made a designated depository of publications of the Government, and shall be supplied with one copy of each of said publications in the same manner as such publications are supplied to other depositories. [31 Stat. L. 333.]

An Act To authorize the appointment of road overseers and to create road districts in the district of Alaska, and for other purposes.

[Act of April 27, 1904, ch. 1629, 33 Stat. L. 391.]

[Appointment of road overseers and creation of road districts.] That it shall be the duty of the commissioner in each precinct in the district of Alaska, on the first Monday in the month of April in each year, to appoint a road overseer for the precinct in which he resides, and create a road district in the inhabited part of said precinct, which said district shall not include incorporated cities and towns.

To fill all vacancies in the office of road overseer in his precinct.

To cause a record to be made defining the boundaries of said road district. [33 Stat. L. 391.]

TERM OF OFFICE AND QUALIFICATION OF ROAD OVERSEERS.

All road overseers shall hold office for one year and until their successors are appointed and qualified.

Every person appointed to the office of road overseer of any road district shall reside in the road district to which he has been appointed, and shall, within thirty days after he shall have been notified of his appointment, take and subscribe to an oath of office obligating himself to the faithful performance of the duties of his office, and shall forthwith cause such oath to be filed in the office of the commissioner of his precinct, and in case any such road overseer shall become nonresident of his road district, his office shall at once become vacant.

Each road overseer shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, execute a bond to the United States in a sum not less than double the amount of money which will probably come into his hands at any time during his term of office, with two or more sureties, the amount and sufficiency of the bond to be approved by the commissioner of the precinct, conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office, which bond shall be by him forthwith filed in the office of the commissioner and ex officio recorder. The approval of such bond shall be indorsed thereon by the commissioner. [33 Stat. L. 391.]

DUTIES OF ROAD OVERSEER.

The duties of road overseer shall be such as may be prescribed by law.

Each road overseer shall keep an accurate account of all money received by virtue of his office and the manner in which the same has been disbursed, and to whom, and shall, on the last Saturday of March in each year, exhibit such account, together with his vouchers, to the commissioner for adjustment and settlement. Such account shall be in writing, verified by affidavit of the overseer that the same is in all respects a full and true account of all money received by him during the full term for which he should make settlement and the amounts expended and the manner in which they were expended.

If any person appointed to the office of road overseer, unless unable from disease or other infirmity to discharge the duties of such office, shall refuse or neglect to serve therein, he shall be liable to a fine of twenty-five dollars; but no person so appointed who shall have served for a term next preceding such appointment shall be liable to such fine for refusing to serve if he shall have given notice in writing of refusal to the commissioner within twenty days after having been notified of his appointment.

Every road overseer who shall, after the expiration of his term of office, neglect or refuse to deliver on demand to his successor in office, after such successor shall have been duly qualified according to law, all moneys, records, books, papers, or other property appertaining to such office shall be liable to a fine of not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars.

Road overseers of the different precincts are authorized, and it is made their duty, to warn out all male persons between eighteen and fifty years of age who have resided thirty days in the district of Alaska, who are capable of performing labor on roads or trails, and who are not a precinct charge, to perform two days' work of eight hours each in locating, constructing, or repairing public roads or trails, under the direction of the road overseer within whose precinct they may respectively reside, or furnish a substitute to do the same, or pay the sum of four dollars per day for two days' labor, and said road overseer shall receipt for the same and shall expend it in location, construction, or repairs on the public roads and trails within his precinct; and any moneys so received and not expended shall be paid over to his successor in office, who shall expend the same as above provided.

The overseer of roads and trails in each precinct shall give notice to persons residing in his precinct liable to or charged with a road or trail tax of the time and place and the kind of work expected to be performed on the road or trail, and may direct what implements such persons shall bring with which to perform such work.

Whenever it shall happen, in consequence of sickness or absence from home, or any other cause, that the two days' work aforesaid shall not be performed within the time specified in this Act, the overseer shall be authorized to require the performance of such work at any time prior to the first day of October then next ensuing; and in case any person shall neglect or refuse to do the two days' work, or furnish a substitute, or pay in money the price of two days' labor, as provided in this Act, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined in the sum of ten dollars for each day refusing so to work upon conviction before any justice of the peace of the precinct.

If any person shall appear at the proper time and place as directed by the overseer and neglect or refuse to do a reasonable day's work according to his ability, he shall be liable the same as if he had neglected or refused to appear, or furnish a substitute, or pay the sum of money as provided herein.

Under the direction of the overseer, and at his discretion, the above road tax may be performed by one day's work, together with an able-bodied man, a two-horse team with wagon, or a dog team consisting of not less than five dogs and a sleigh, or a reindeer team of not less than two reindeer and sleigh or cart.

It shall be the duty of each road overseer to receipt to each person who performs labor on the public roads and trails of his precinct under the provisions of this Act for the amount of labor so performed, and no person shall be compelled to pay road tax except in one precinct in the district of Alaska during one calendar year.

Each road overseer shall, on or before the first day of April in each year, report to the commissioner of the precinct the names of all persons subject to the two days' road tax for the preceding year, the names of those who have worked out said tax, the names of those who have paid the said tax in money, and the names of those delinquent, and also all moneys received by him from all sources, and how expended, and the account of said road overseer of the work performed by himself, which report shall be approved by said commissioner before any final settlement shall be made with such road overseer.

Each and every road overseer who shall neglect or refuse to perform the several duties enjoined upon him by this Act, or who shall, under any pretense whatsoever, give or sign a receipt or certificate for labor performed or money paid, unless the labor shall have been performed or money paid prior to the signing or giving of such receipts or certificates, shall forfeit for every such offense not less than five nor more than fifty dollars, to be recovered by an action before any justice of the peace within the precinct where such overseer may reside, and it is hereby made the duty of every United States attorney or assistant to prosecute all offenses against the provisions of this Act not otherwise provided for. [33 Stat. L. 392.]

PER DIEM.

Road overseers shall be allowed four dollars per day for all services required by this Act and actually performed in their respective precincts, to be retained out of money paid said road overseers from persons paying money or fines in lieu of two days' labor, upon the certified statement of the overseers, approved by the commissioner of the precinct: Provided, That no overseer shall receive pay for more than ten days in any one year, and not until he has made the return as provided in the preceding section, in duplicate, one copy to be retained by the commissioner and one copy filed with the clerk of the district court in the division in which the said precinct is situated.

Any oath required to be taken by said overseer, acknowledgment of bond, or the filing or recording of any paper or plat authorized by this Act shall be free of cost to said overseer.

Upon application of road overseers it shall be the duty of the clerk of the district court to furnish copies of this Act and blank forms of notices warning persons to perform road work, receipts for road work, bond, and oath, and for overseer's report to commissioner, the expense of which shall be paid out of the fund for paying the incidental expenses of the court.

The Attorney-General of the United States is hereby directed to furnish clerks of the district court in the different judicial divisions of Alaska a sufficient number of copies of this Act and other road and trail laws that may now be upon the statutes relating to roads and trails in the district of Alaska for use of road overseers in each judicial division. [33 Stat. L. 393.]

Further provisions as to roads in Alaska are given infra, under the division V. Railroads, Wagon Roads, Aërials and Tramways.

A native Eskimo is such a male person work on the roads. U. S. v. Sitarangok, as may be warned out by the overseer to (1913) 4 Alaska 667.

An Act To provide for the construction and maintenance of roads, the establishment and maintenance of schools, and the care and support of insane persons in the district of Alaska, and for other purposes.

[Act of Jan. 27, 1905, ch. 277, 33 Stat. L. 616.]

SECTION 1. [Alaska fund — source and disposition.] That all moneys derived from and collected for liquor licenses, occupation or trade licenses, outside of the incorporated towns in the Territory of Alaska, shall be deposited in the Treasury Department of the United States, there to remain as a separate and distinct fund, to be known as the "Alaska fund," and to be wholly devoted to the purposes hereinafter stated in the Territory of Alaska. Twenty-five per centum of said fund, or so much thereof as may be necessary, shall be devoted to the establishment and maintenance of public schools in said Territory; ten per centum of said fund shall be, and is hereby, appropriated and authorized to be expended for the relief of persons in Alaska who are indigent and incapacitated through nonage, old age, sickness, or accident; and all the residue of said fund shall be devoted to the construction and maintenance of wagon roads, bridges, and trails in said Territory: Provided, That the clerk of the court of each judicial division of said Territory is authorized, and he is hereby directed, whenever considered necessary, to call upon the United States marshal of said judicial division to aid in the collection of said license moneys by designating regular or special deputies of his office to act as temporary license inspectors, and it shall be the duty of said United States marshal to render such aid; and the said regular or special deputies while actually engaged in the performance of this duty shall receive the same fees and allowances and be paid in the same manner as when performing their regular duties.

That at the end of each fiscal quarter the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States shall divide the amount of said ten per centum of said fund so received during the quarter just ended into four equal parts, and transmit to each of the four United States district judges in Alaska one of said equal amounts.

That each of said judges is hereby authorized to expend so much of the money received by him under this Act as may, in his discretion, be required for the relief of those persons in his division who are incapacitated through nonage, old age, sickness, or accident, and who are indigent and unable to assist and protect themselves: Provided, That each judge shall quarterly submit to the Secretary of the Treasury an itemized statement, with proper vouchers, of all expenditures made by him under this Act, and he shall at the time transmit a copy of said statement to the governor of the Territory: Provided further, That any unexpended balance remaining in the hands of any judge at the end of any quarter shall be returned to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and by him deposited in the said "Alaska fund," and the said sum shall be subsequently devoted, first, to meeting any actual requirements for the care and relief of such persons as are provided for in this Act in any other division in said Territory wherein the amount allotted for that purpose has proved insufficient; and, second, if there shall be any remainder thereof, said remainder shall be devoted to the construction and maintenance of wagon roads, bridges, and trails in said Territory. [37 Stat. L. 728.]

This section, given above as amended by an Act of March 3, 1913, ch. 109, constitutes a part of the Act known as the "Nelson Act," the "Alaska Road Act" or the "Trail Act."

As originally enacted (33 Stat. L. 616), this section provided for a fund similar to that for which provision is made in the text: one-fourth of said fund, or so much thereof as should be necessary, to be devoted to the use of public schools; five per centum, or so much of said five per centum as might be needed, to be devoted to the care and maintenance of insane persons, and all the residue to the construction and maintenance of wagon roads, bridges, and trails.

By the Act of May 14, 1906, ch. 2458, 34 Stat. L. 192, the original section was amended by adding thereto a proviso similar to that at the end of the first paragraph of the text.

So much of said amended section as provided that five per centum of the license moneys collected outside of incorporated towns should be applied to the care of the insane was repealed by the Act of Feb. 6, 1909, ch. 80, § 7, 35 Stat. L. 601, and the said five per centum, or so much thereof as might be necessary, directed to be applied to the establishment and maintenance of public schools under the direction of the governor.

Constitutionality.—Under the original section it was held that Congress having undoubtedly the power by direct legislation to impose license taxes upon the residents of Alaska, providing that when collected they are paid to a treasurer of the territory and disbursed by him solely for the needs of the territory, the fact that they were ordered to be paid into the treasury of the United States and not specifically appropriated to the expenses of the territory did not make such taxes unconstitutional when the sum total of these and all other revenue from the territory did not equal the cost and expense of maintaining its government. Binns v. U. S., (1904) 194 U. S. 486, 24 S. Ct. 816, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 1087.

SEC. 2. [Construction of wagon roads — appointment of road commissioners — powers — maps — bids — disbursements — reimbursements.]

That there shall be a board of road commissioners in said district, to be composed of an engineer officer of the United States Army to be detailed and appointed by the Secretary of War, and two other officers of that part of the Army stationed in said district and to be designated by the Secretary of War. The said engineer officer shall, during the term of his said detail and appointment, abide in said district. The said board shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, upon their own motion or upon petition, to locate, lay out, construct, and maintain wagon roads and pack trails from any point on the navigable waters of said district to any town, mining or other industrial camp or settlement, or between any such town, camps, or settlements therein, if in their judgment such roads or trails are needed and will be of permanent value for the development of the district; but no such road or trail shall be constructed to any town, camp, or settlement which is wholly transitory or of no substantial value or importance for mining, trade, agricultural, or manufacturing purposes. The said board shall prepare maps, plans, and specifications of every road or trail they may locate and lay out, and whenever more than twenty thousand dollars, in the aggregate, shall have to be expended upon the actual construction of any road or section of road designed to be permanent, contract for the work shall be let by them to the lowest responsible bidder, upon sealed bids, after due notice, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of War. The board may reject any bid if they deem the same unreasonably high or if they find that there is a combination among bidders. In case no responsible and reasonable bid can be secured, then the work may be carried on with material and men procured and hired by the board. The engineer officer of the board shall in all cases supervise the work of construction and see that the same is properly performed. As soon as any road or trail laid out by the board has been constructed and completed they shall examine the same and make a full and detailed report of the work done on the same to the Secretary of War, and in such report they shall state whether the road or trail has been completed conformably to the maps, plans, and specifications of the same. It shall be the duty of said board, as far as practicable, to keep in proper repair all roads and trails constructed under their supervision, and the same rules as to the manner in which the work of repair shall be done, whether by contract or otherwise, shall govern as in the case of the original construction of the road or trail. The cost and expenses of laying out, constructing, and repairing such roads and trails shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury, through the authorized disbursing officer of the board designated by the Secretary of War, out of the road and trail portion of said "Alaska fund" upon vouchers approved and certified by said board. The Secretary of the Treasury shall, at the end of each month, send by mail to each of the members of said board a statement of the amount available of said "Alaska fund" for the construction and repair of roads and trails, and no greater liability for construction or repair shall at any time be incurred by said board than the money available therefor at that time in said fund. The members of said board shall, in addition to their salaries, be reimbursed in the sums actually paid or incurred by them in traveling expenses in the performance of their duties, and shall be entitled to receive their actual expenses of living while serving as members of said board within the limits of the district and not stationed at a military post. [34 Stat. L. 192.]

This section was amended to read as above given by an Act of May 14, 1906, ch. 2458, § 2.

As originally enacted this section (33 Stat. L. 616) provided that the work was to be let "whenever more than five thousand dollars in the aggregate shall have to be expended on the construction of any road or trail." As amended the amount is increased to twenty thousand dollars. The section was also amended by inserting after the words "shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury" near the end of the section, the words "through the authorized disbursing officer of the board designated by the Secretary of War."

In the original section, the last part thereof regulating the compensation of the members of the board provided that they should, in addition to their salaries, be entitled to receive their actual traveling expenses paid as incurred by them in the performance of their duties as members of the board.

SEC. 3. [Governor made superintendent of public instruction — duties.]

That the governor of the district of Alaska shall be ex officio superintendent of public instruction in said district, and as such shall have supervision and direction of the public schools in said district and shall prescribe rules and regulations for the examination and qualification of teachers, and shall make an annual report of the condition of the schools in the district to the Secretary of the Interior. [33 Stat. L. 617.]

SEC. 4. [School districts in incorporated towns — officers — powers and duties.] That the common council of the incorporated towns in said district shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, in their respective towns to establish school districts, to provide the same with suitable schoolhouses, and to maintain public schools therein and to provide the necessary funds for the schools; but such schools when established shall be under the supervision and control of a school board of three members, consisting of a director, a treasurer, and a clerk, to be elected annually by the vote of all adults who are citizens of the United States or who have declared their intention to become such and who are residents of the school district. The members of said board first elected shall hold their offices for the term of one, two, and three years, respectively, and until their successors are elected and qualified, and one member of such board shall be elected each year thereafter and shall hold his office for a period of three years and until his successor is elected and qualified; and they shall each, before entering upon the duties of their office, take an oath in writing to honestly and faithfully discharge the duties of their trust. In case a vacancy in the membership of said board occurs from death, resignation, removal, or other cause, such vacancy may be filled by a special election, upon ten days' notice, called by the remaining members of the board upon the petition of five qualified voters. All money available for school purposes, except for the construction and equipment of schoolhouses and the acquisition of sites for the same, shall be expended under the direction of said board, and the treasurer of said board shall be the custodian of said money, and he shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, give his bond, with sufficient sureties, to the school district, in such sum as the common council may direct, and subject to its approval, but not less than twice the amount that may come into his hands as treasurer, conditioned that he will honestly and faithfully disburse and account for all money that may come into his hands as such treasurer. The said board shall have the power to hire and employ the necessary teachers, to provide for heating and lighting the schoolhouse, and in general to do and perform everything necessary for the due maintenance of a proper school. [33 Stat. L. 1262.]

This section was amended to read as above given by an Act of March 3, 1905, ch. 1491. The amendment consisted in the addition of a one-year term for the members of the school board first elected; the original section reading "for the term of two and three years respectively." The general powers of incorporated towns, both with reference to matters treated in the text and others, may be found in chapter 21 of the Civil Code, 31 Stat. L. 520.

SEC. 5. [School districts outside of incorporated towns — establishment — elections — officers, etc.] That the clerk of the district court shall have the power, and it shall be his duty, in the division to which he is appointed and in which he resides, upon petition as hereinafter specified, to establish by order in writing a school district at any camp, village, or settlement outside of the limits of any incorporated town, but such school district shall not embrace more than forty square miles of territory nor contain less than twenty resident white children between the ages of six and twenty years. The said petition shall specify as near as may be the location and boundary of the proposed school district, the number of people, the number of families, and the number of children between the ages of six and twenty years, resident therein, and such other material facts as tend to show the necessity for the establishment of the school district. Said petition shall be signed by not less than twelve persons of adult age who are citizens of the United States or have declared their intention to become such and who reside within the boundaries of the proposed school district. If the clerk of the court is satisfied that it is necessary and proper to grant such petition, he shall make an order in writing establishing the school district prayed for, describing the same and defining its boundaries, and he shall also in said order appoint three of the petitioners to supervise and give notice of the first election, and shall specify the time and place of the same. The original order shall remain on file in the records of the court, and a copy of the same shall be posted at three public places in the school district at least ten days before the election, and such posting shall be deemed a sufficient notice of such election. All persons qualified to sign said petition shall be qualified to vote at said election. The qualified voters of said school district shall at said election choose by a plurality vote a school board of three members, consisting of a clerk, a treasurer, and a director, who shall, before entering upon the duties of their trust, each take an oath in writing to honorably and faithfully discharge the duties of their office. In case a vacancy in the membership of said board occurs from death, resignation, removal, or other cause, such vacancy may be filled by a special election, upon ten days' notice, called by the remaining members of the board upon the petition of five qualified voters. The treasurer shall be the custodian of the moneys of the school district, and he shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, give his bond to the school district, with sufficient sureties, to be approved by the clerk of the court, and in such sum as he may direct, but not less than twice the amount of money that may come into his hands as treasurer, conditioned that he, the treasurer, will honestly and faithfully disburse and account for all the money that may come into his hands by virtue of his office. Said board shall have the power to build or rent the necessary schoolhouse or schoolroom, to equip the same with the necessary furniture and fixtures, to provide fuel and light, to hire and employ teachers, and in general to do and perform everything that may be necessary for the maintenance of a public school. The members of said board shall hold office for the term of one year and until their successors are elected and qualified. An annual election shall be held each year, after the first election, for the election of members of said board. As soon as the members of said school board have been elected and qualified, they shall send to the clerk of the court and file in his office a certificate of their election under the hand and seal of the judges or supervisors of election, their oaths of office, and the bond of the treasurer, and the clerk of the court shall file said papers and carefully keep them as a part of the files and records of his office, and he shall at once send to the governor of the district of Alaska a certified copy of said papers, together with a certified copy of the order establishing the school district, and the governor shall duly file and preserve the same. The said board, as soon as they have complied with the requirements aforesaid, shall immediately report in writing to the governor the number of children in their school district between the ages of six and twenty years that intend to attend a public school, and the wages per month for which a teacher can be obtained; and after a school has been opened and maintained they shall, at the end of each school term, report to the governor in writing the length of the term, the wages paid the teacher, the total number of pupils in attendance, and the daily average of such attendance at such term. The governor shall assign and set apart to each school district established and organized under the provisions of this section a sum, not less than three hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, in proportion to the number of pupils in the district, for the construction and equipment of a schoolhouse, which sum shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury to the treasurer of the school district upon the order and voucher of the governor out of that portion of the said Alaska fund set apart for the establishment and maintenance of public schools. The residue of said portion of said fund, or so much thereof as may be necessary, shall by the governor be apportioned among the several school districts established under the provisions of this section in amounts sufficient for each district to pay the wages of a teacher, together with the expense of fuel and light, for five months' school in each year. And the amounts so apportioned to each school district shall be paid to the treasurer of the district by the Secretary of the Treasury upon the order and voucher of the governor out of the said portion of said fund. [33 Stat. L. 617.]

SEC. 6. [Reports of school board clerks.] That the clerks of school districts in the incorporated towns shall, at the end of each school term, report to the governor in writing the length of the term, the wages paid the teacher, the number of pupils in attendance, and the average daily attendance during the term. [33 Stat. L. 619.]

SEC. 7. [Separation of races.] That the schools specified and provided for in this Act shall be devoted to the education of white children and children of mixed blood who lead a civilized life. The education of the Eskimos and Indians in the district of Alaska shall remain under the direction and control of the Secretary of the Interior, and schools for and among the Eskimos and Indians of Alaska shall be provided for by an annual appropriation, and the Eskimo and Indian children of Alaska shall have the same right to be admitted to any Indian boarding school as the Indian children in the States or Territories of the United States [33 Stat. L. 619.]

The Secretary of the Interior was required to make provision for the education of children in Alaska by the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 13, 23 Stat. L. 27, and the Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 786, § 28, 31 Stat. L. 330, which were superseded by the provisions of the text.

SEC. 8. [Insane persons — commitment and care.] That commissioners appointed by the judges of the district court in the district of Alaska, pursuant to existing laws, shall, as ex officio probate judges and in the exercise of their probate jurisdiction, have the power, and it shall be their duty, in their respective districts, to commit, by warrant under their hands and seals, all persons adjudged insane in their districts to the asylum or sanitarium provided for the care and keeping of the insane of the district of Alaska. No person shall be adjudged insane or committed as such, except upon and pursuant to the following proceedings, to wit: Whenever complaint in writing is made by any adult person to a commissioner that there is an insane person at large in the commissioner's district, the commissioner shall at once cause such insane person to be taken into custody and to be brought before him, and he shall then immediately summon and impanel a jury of six male adults, residents of the district, to inquire, try, and determine whether the person so complained of is really insane. The members of said jury shall, before entering upon the discharge of their duty, each take an oath to diligently inquire, justly try, and a true verdict render, touching the mental condition of the person charged with being insane. Before entering upon such trial the commissioner shall appoint some suitable person to appear for and represent in the proceeding the person complained of as insane. And in case there is a physician or surgeon in the vicinity who can be procured, the commissioner shall cause such surgeon or physician to examine the person alleged to be insane, and after such examination to testify under oath before the jury in respect to the mental condition of said person. The commissioner shall preside at said hearing and trial. All witnesses that may be offered shall be heard and shall be permitted to testify under oath in said matter, and after having heard all the evidence the said jury shall retire to agree upon a verdict, and if the jury unanimously, by their verdict in writing, find that the said person so charged with being insane as aforesaid is really and truly insane and that he ought to be committed to the asylum or sanitarium aforesaid, and the commissioner approves such finding, he shall enter a judgment adjudging the said person to be insane and adjudging that he be at once conveyed to and thereafter properly and safely kept in the said asylum or sanitarium until duly discharged therefrom by law. The commissioner shall thereupon, under his hand and seal, issue his warrant, with a copy of said judgment attached, for the commitment of said insane person to the asylum or sanitarium aforesaid, which warrant shall be delivered to the marshal of the division in which said proceedings are held, and shall direct said marshal to safely keep and deliver said insane person to said asylum or sanitarium, and the said marshal, for the service of process in connection with and the guarding and transportation of the insane, shall be compensated from the same source and in the same manner as in the case of prisoners convicted of crime. The commissioner, the jurymen, and the witnesses in said proceeding shall be entitled to the same compensation and mileage as in civil actions. And all the compensation, mileage, fees, and all other expenses and outlays incident to said proceedings shall be audited and allowed by the district judge of the division in which said proceedings are pending and had, and when so audited and allowed shall be paid by the clerk of the court in such division as the incidental expenses of the court are by him paid and from the same fund. [33 Stat. L. 619.]

Further provisions as to the care of insane persons were made by the Act of Feb. 6, 1909, ch. 80, § 7, infra, p. 294. And see the notes to said section.

By an Act of June 25, 1910, ch. 424, 36 Stat. L. 852, provisions were made for a temporary detention hospital for the insane.

Jury trial.—This section does not require a jury trial in an action to have a person declared insane and a guardian appointed for his property and person. White v. Martin, (1905) 2 Alaska 471.

SEC. 9. [Repeal.] That all Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with this Act are, to the extent of such inconsistency, hereby repealed. [33 Stat. L. 620.]

[SEC. 1.] [Alaska fund — appropriation for.] * * * That the moneys described as the "Alaska fund," in section one of "An Act to provide for the construction and maintenance of roads, the establishment and maintenance of schools, and the care and support of insane persons in the district of Alaska, and for other purposes," approved January twenty-seventh, nineteen hundred and five, be, and the same are hereby, appropriated out of the Treasury of the United States for the uses and purposes in said Act mentioned. [33 Stat. L. 1170.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 3, 1905, ch. 1483. The Act of Jan. 27, 1905, ch. 277, § 1, is given as amended, supra, p. 279.

An Act To further prescribe the duties of the secretary of the district of Alaska, and for other purposes.

[Act of March 3, 1905, ch. 1497, 33 Stat. L. 1265.]

[SEC. 1.] [Fees to be paid secretary — amount.] That in case the law requires or authorizes any service to be performed or any act to be done by the secretary of the district of Alaska and there is no provision of law requiring the payment of a fee for such service by the person for whose benefit the same is performed, the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe such fees for said service as he may deem proper. [33 Stat. L. 1265.]

This section supersedes in part section 30 of the Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 786, set out supra, p. 274.

SEC. 2. [Alaska Historical Library and Museum to have fees.] That all fees received by the secretary of the district of Alaska as such secretary, from every source whatsoever, shall be disbursed, on the order of the governor of the district of Alaska, for the benefit of the Alaska Historical Library and Museum, as provided in section thirty-two, chapter one, title one, of an Act approved June sixth, nineteen hundred, entitled "An Act making further provision for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes;" and all such receipts and disbursements shall be accounted for in the manner prescribed in said section. [33 Stat. L. 1266.]

The Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 786, § 32, above mentioned, is given supra, p. 275.

SEC. 3. [Bond of secretary.] That the secretary of the district of Alaska, before entering upon the duties of said office, shall execute a bond with sufficient sureties, to be approved by the Secretary of the Interior, and in such penal sum as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, conditioned upon the safe-keeping, faithful disbursement, and proper accounting for all moneys from whatsoever source which may come into his hands as such secretary. [33 Stat. L. 1266.]

An Act Providing for the election of a Delegate to the House of Representatives from the Territory of Alaska.

[Act of May 7, 1906, ch. 2083, 34 Stat. L. 169.]

[SEC. 1.] [Delegate to be elected — qualifications — compensation.] That the people of the Territory of Alaska shall be represented by a Delegate in the House of Representatives of the United States, chosen by the people thereof in the manner and at the time hereinafter prescribed, and who shall be known as the Delegate from Alaska. Such Delegate shall at the time of his election have been for seven years a citizen of the United States, and shall be an inhabitant and qualified voter of the district of Alaska, and shall be not less than twenty-five years of age, and when duly chosen and qualified shall possess the same powers and privileges and be entitled to the same rate of compensation as the Delegates in the House of Representatives from the Territories of the United States: Provided, however, That such Delegate, in lieu of all other allowances, shall, in addition to his salary, receive the sum of one thousand five hundred dollars per annum, which shall cover all mileage and other expenses except stationery allowance and compensation for clerk hire. [34 Stat. L. 169.]

Section 2 of this Act related to the first election for a delegate and prescribed the time for subsequent elections. It was superseded by the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 387, § 17, supra, p. 253.

SEC. 3. [Voting qualifications.] That all male citizens of the United States twenty-one years of age and over who are actual and bona fide residents of Alaska, and who have been such residents continuously during the entire year immediately preceding the election, and who have been such residents continuously for thirty days next preceding the election in the precinct in which they vote, shall be qualified to vote for the election of a Delegate from Alaska. [34 Stat. L. 170.]

SEC. 4. [Election districts in towns — officers — polls, etc. — notices.] That each incorporated town in the district of Alaska shall constitute an election district, and where the population of such town exceeds one thousand inhabitants the common council may, in their discretion, at least thirty days before the election, divide the district into two or more voting precincts and define the boundaries of each precinct; and the said common council shall also appoint, at least thirty days before the election, three judges of election and two clerks for each voting precinct, all of whom shall be qualified voters of the precinct; and no more than two judges and one clerk shall belong to the same political party. The common council shall also, at least thirty days before the date of the election, provide a suitable polling place for each voting precinct and give due notice of the election by posting a written or printed notice in three public places in each precinct, specifying the time and place of the election, and in case there are one or more newspapers of general circulation published in the town, then a copy of said notice shall also be published in one of such newspapers at least once a week for two consecutive weeks next prior to the date of the election. [34 Stat. L. 170.]

SEC. 5. [Election districts outside of towns — commissioners' duties — voting precincts — minimum number of voters — election notice — judges of election.] That all of the territory in each recording district now existing or hereafter created situate outside of an incorporated town shall, for the purposes of this act, constitute one election district; that in each year in which a Delegate is to be elected the commissioner in each of said election districts shall, at least thirty days before the date of said first election, and at least sixty days before the date of each subsequent election, issue an order and notice, signed by him and entered in his records in a book to be kept by him for that purpose, in which said order and notice he shall —

First. Divide his election district into such number of voting precincts as may in his judgment be necessary or convenient, defining the boundaries of each precinct by natural objects and permanent monuments or landmarks, as far as practicable, and in such manner that the boundaries of each can be readily determined and become generally known from such description, specify a polling place in each of said precincts, and give to each voting precinct an appropriate name by which the same shall thereafter be designated: Provided, however, That no such voting precinct shall be established with less than thirty qualified voters resident therein; that the precincts established as aforesaid shall remain as permanent precincts for all subsequent elections, unless discontinued or changed by order of the commissioner of that district.

Second. Give notice of said election, specifying in said notice, among other things, the date of such election, the boundary of the voting precincts as established, the location of the polling place in the precinct, and the hours between which said polling places will be open.

Said order and notice shall be given publicly by said commissioner by posting copies of the same at least twenty days before the date of said first election, and at least thirty days before the date of each subsequent election. Said copies shall be posted as follows: One at the office of the commissioner in said district, and three copies to be posted in three conspicuous public places in each of said voting precincts as established, one of which shall be the designated polling place in each precinct; and said commissioner shall also mail a certified copy of said order and notice to the governor of Alaska at his official residence. That at least thirty days prior to the date of the holding of such election the commissioners shall select, notify, and appoint from among the qualified electors in each voting precinct three judges of election for said precinct, no more than two of whom shall be of the same political party. Said commissioner shall notify all of said judges of election of their appointment as such, so that each and all of them shall receive said notice at least ten days before the date of the election. [34 Stat. L. 171.]

SEC. 6. [Election board — duties — oath — administering oaths to voters — clerks of election outside of towns — duties.] That the judges of election of each voting precinct shall constitute the election board for said precinct and shall supervise and have charge of the election therein. They shall secure and provide a place for holding the election and a suitable ballot box. They shall pass upon the qualification of the voter and, if he be found qualified, receive and deposit his ballot in the ballot box, and shall canvass and make a return of the votes cast, as hereinafter provided. That the members of said election board in each precinct, before entering upon the duties of their office, shall each severally take an oath, which shall be reduced to writing, before an officer qualified to administer oaths, to honestly, faithfully, and promptly perform the duties of their positions; and if no officer qualified to administer oaths be present or available, then any one of said duly appointed or selected judges of election may administer the necessary oath to said other two judges, and he shall afterwards in turn be sworn by one of them. That each of said judges shall have authority to administer any oath to the voter necessary or proper under this act, and said judges shall have equal authority; and in case of any question or disagreement over any matter during the course of said election the decision of the majority of said judges shall govern. That two of the three judges of election in each voting precinct, outside of incorporated towns, to be selected by a majority of said judges shall also perform the duties of clerks of election for that precinct; the two judges performing the duties of clerks shall be of different political parties; it shall be the duty of the clerks at each voting precinct to make a full written record of such election as held in that precinct, and each of them shall keep a correct duplicate register and enter therein the names of the voters and the fact that they have voted, or have offered to vote and were refused, and a brief statement of the reasons for said refusal. [34 Stat. L. 171.]

SEC. 7. [Watchers at polls — rights allowed.] That each of the candidates for the office of Delegate herein provided for, at any election held hereunder, shall be entitled to one watcher at each voting precinct, who shall be permitted to be present within the place of voting at such precinct, and in some place therein where he may at all times be in full view of every act done. Such watcher shall have the right to be so present at all times from the opening of the polls until the ballots are finally counted and the result certified by the election board. Each watcher shall be required to present to the election board proper credentials, signed by the candidate he represents, showing him to be the duly authorized watcher for such person. [34 Stat. L. 172.]

SEC. 8. [Filling vacancies on election day.] That in case any of the judges of election selected as herein provided for any precinct shall fail to appear and qualify at the time and place designated for the election for which they shall be appointed, then, in that event, the qualified voters present may, by a majority viva voce vote, select a suitable person or persons to fill the vacancy or vacancies in said election board; and the person or persons so selected shall qualify and serve on said election board, with the same powers and in the same manner as if appointed as hereinbefore provided. [34 Stat. L. 172.]

SEC. 9. [Voting hours — ballots, form, etc. — casting ballots — register of votes.] That the election boards herein provided for shall keep the several polling places open for the reception of votes from eight o'clock antemeridian until seven o'clock postmeridian on the day of election. The voting at said election shall be by printed or written ballot. The ballot at said first election shall be substantially in the following form:

“ FOR DELEGATE FROM ALASKA.

“ For the short term (here insert the name of the person voted for).

“ For the long term (here insert the name of the person voted for).”

At all elections after said first election the ballot shall be substantially in the following form:

“ FOR DELEGATE FROM ALASKA.

“(Here insert the name of the person voted for.)”

Such ballot shall be folded by the voter so as not to disclose the vote, and by him handed to any one of the judges of election, who shall immediately, in the presence of the voter and of all the members of the election board, deposit the same, folded as aforesaid, in the ballot box, where the same shall remain untouched until the polls are closed. At the time the ballot is so deposited the clerks of election shall each of them enter in his duplicate register the name of the voter and the fact that he has voted. [34 Stat. L. 172.]

SEC. 10. [Challenges — oath required — acceptance or rejection — penalty for false swearing.] That any person offering to vote may be challenged by any election officer or any other person entitled to vote at the same polling place, or by any duly appointed watcher, and when so challenged, before being allowed to vote he shall make and subscribe to the following oath: " You do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be) that you are twenty-one years of age and a citizen of the United States; that you are an actual and bona fide resident of Alaska, and have been such resident during the entire year immediately preceding this election, and have been a resident in this voting precinct for thirty days next preceding this election, and that you have not voted at this election," and further naming the place from which the voter came immediately prior to living in the precinct in which he offers to vote, and giving the length of time of his residence in the former place. And when he has made such an affidavit he shall be allowed to vote; but if any person so challenged shall refuse or fail to take such oath and sign such affidavit, then his vote shall be rejected; and any person swearing falsely in any such affidavit shall be guilty of perjury and shall, upon conviction thereof, suffer punishment as is prescribed by law for persons guilty of perjury. [34 Stat. L. 172.]

SEC. 11. [Canvass of votes cast — certificates in duplicate — certified copy — preservation of documents.] That the election board at each polling place, as soon as the polls are closed, shall immediately publicly proceed to open the ballot box and count and canvass the votes cast, and they shall thereupon, under their hands and seals, make out in duplicate a certificate of the result of said election, specifying the number of votes, in words and figures, cast for each candidate, and they shall then immediately carefully and securely seal up in one envelope one of said duplicate certificates and one of the registers of voters, all the ballots cast, and all affidavits made, and mail such envelope, with said papers inclosed, at the nearest post-office by registered mail, if possible, duly addressed to the governor of Alaska at his place of residence, with the postage prepaid thereon. The other duplicate certificate and register of voters, with the oaths of the judges of election, the judges of election shall at once seal up in an envelope addressed to the clerk of the district court for the division in which the precinct is situate, at his place of residence, with the postage thereon prepaid, and deposit the same in the nearest post-office, by registered mail, if possible. And the said clerk shall, as soon as he receives the said duplicate certificate, at once make out and duly mail to the governor of Alaska a certified copy of such certificate. The clerks of the district courts for the various divisions of Alaska and the governor of Alaska shall each retain and carefully preserve all such documents received by them until the end of the term for which the Delegate chosen has been elected. [34 Stat. L. 173.]

SEC. 12. [Territorial canvassing board — canvass of result — certified copy of certificate — declaration of result.] That the governor, the surveyor-general, and the collector of customs for Alaska shall constitute a canvassing board for the Territory of Alaska to canvass and compile in writing the vote specified in the certificates of election returned to the governor from all the several election precincts as aforesaid. The said canvassing board shall commence the performance of its duties at the office of the governor within ten days after the third Tuesday of October in each year in which an election is held under and by virtue of this act, and shall continue with such work from day to day until the same is completed; and said canvass shall be publicly made. In case it shall appear to said board that no election return as hereinbefore prescribed has been received by the governor from any precinct in which an election has been held, the said board may accept in place thereof the certified copy of the certificate of election for such precinct received from the clerk of the court, and may canvass and compile the same with the other election returns. Said board, upon the completion of said canvass, shall declare the person who has received the greatest number of votes for Delegate to be the duly elected Delegate from Alaska for the term for which he has been so elected and shall issue and deliver to him in writing under their hands and seal a certificate of his election. [34 Stat. L. 173.]

SEC. 13. [Fees — publication in newspapers — posting notices in polling places — rental — election officers.] That each newspaper in Alaska, authorized to publish the notice of election provided for herein, and having published the same according to law, shall be entitled to receive therefor not more than ten dollars for the entire publications of any one election; that each commissioner in the Territory of Alaska is authorized to contract for the proper posting of all elections notices, as provided herein, in each voting precinct created in his said election district, and that not more than the sum of ten dollars shall be allowed at each election for the posting of said notices in any one voting precinct in Alaska; that not more than ten dollars at each election shall be allowed for the rental of a proper polling place in each voting precinct in Alaska; that each of the judges of election who shall qualify and serve as such in any precinct on said election day and each of the clerks of election in an incorporated town shall be entitled to a compensation of five dollars for all services performed. [34 Stat. L. 174.]

SEC. 14. [Payment of expenses — audit.] That the compensation for said newspaper publications, the proper posting of said notices, the rental of said polling places, the fees of the judges and clerks of election in each precinct, together with the cost of securing a ballot box and the cost of necessary postage and stationery, shall be certified with proper vouchers and receipts attached by the various election officials to the judge of the district court in the said judicial division in which said voting precinct is situate, and the same shall be audited by said judge and shall be paid by the clerk of the court of said division out of the same fund and in the same manner as the incidental expenses of said district court are paid. [34 Stat. L. 174.]

SEC. 15. [Penalties — for illegal voting, etc. — intimidation, bribery, etc. — changing returns, etc. — neglect of duty, etc., by officers — jurisdiction.] That any person who, by any means, shall hinder, delay, prevent, or obstruct any other person from qualifying himself to vote or from lawfully voting at any election herein provided for, or who shall knowingly personate and vote or attempt to vote in the name of any other person, or who shall vote more than once at the same election, or shall vote at a place where or at a time when he may not lawfully be entitled to vote, or shall do any unlawful act to secure an opportunity to vote, for himself or for any other person, or who, by or through any force, threat, intimidation, bribery, reward or offer thereof, unlawfully vote himself or procures another to vote, or prevents or induces another to refrain from exercising his right of suffrage, or induces by any means any officer of an election to do any unlawful act or omit to do his duty in any manner, or who, directly or indirectly, in any manner shall fraudulently change or cause to be changed the returns or the true and lawful result of any election hereunder or shall attempt to do the same, or who shall delay, cause to be delayed, or connive at the delay of election returns in any manner or attempt to do so, shall be guilty of a crime, and upon the conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars nor less than one hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than three years, or both, in the discretion of the court, and pay the costs of the prosecution; and every officer of an election held hereunder who neglects to perform or violates any duty imposed upon him as such officer, or knowingly does any unauthorized act with the intent to affect the election or the result thereof, or who shall permit, make, or connive at any false count or certificate of election, or who shall conceal, withhold, destroy, or willfully delay the returns of election, or connive at the same being done, or who shall aid, counsel, or procure any person to do or attempt to do any act made a crime hereinbefore, or shall attempt to do any of the acts hereinbefore mentioned, shall be guilty of a crime, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than two hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment of not more than five years, or both, in the discretion of the court, and shall pay all costs of the prosecution; and jurisdiction of all such matters is hereby conferred upon the district court of Alaska. [34 Stat. L. 174.]

SEC. 14. [Bonded warehouse privileges for exportations to British Columbia or Northwest Territory.] That under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, the privilege of entering goods, wares, and merchandise in bond or of placing them in bonded warehouses at any of the ports in the District of Alaska, and of withdrawing the same for exportation to any place in British Columbia or the Northwest Territory without payment of duty, is hereby granted to the Government of the Dominion of Canada and its citizens or citizens of the United States and to persons who have declared their intention to become such whenever and so long as it shall appear to the satisfaction of the President of the United States, who shall ascertain and declare the fact by proclamation, that corresponding privileges have been and are being granted by the Government of the Dominion of Canada in respect of goods, wares and merchandise passing through the territory of the Dominion of Canada to any point in the District of Alaska from any point in said District. [30 Stat. L. 415.]

This is from an Act of May 14, 1908, ch. 299, entitled "An Act extending the homestead laws and providing for right of way for railroads in the District of Alaska and for other purposes." See, in general, the title CUSTOMS DUTIES.

SEC. 7. [Insane persons — care of.] * * * That the Secretary of the Interior shall hereafter, as in his judgment may be deemed advisable, advertise for and receive bids for the care and custody of persons legally adjudged insane in the district of Alaska, and in behalf of the United States shall contract, for one or more years, as he may deem best, with a responsible asylum or sanitarium west of the main range of the Rocky Mountains submitting the lowest and best responsible bid for the care and custody of persons legally adjudged insane in said district of Alaska, the cost of advertising for bids, executing the contract, and caring for the insane to be paid from appropriations to be made for such service upon estimates to be submitted to Congress annually. [35 Stat. L. 601.]

The foregoing part of section 7, and the following sections 10 to 18, inclusive, are from an Act of Feb. 6, 1909, ch. 80, entitled "An Act relating to affairs in the Territories." It supersedes similar provisions contained in the Act of April 28, 1904, ch. 1773, 33 Stat. L. 526. It likewise supersedes the second paragraph of section 9 of the Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 786, given supra, p. 266.

The first part of this section repealed a part of the Act of Jan. 27, 1905, ch. 277, § 1, and was superseded by the subsequent amendment of said section to read as given supra, p. 279.

SEC. 10. [License for practice of medicine.] That it shall be unlawful for any person to practice medicine or surgery, or any of the departments thereof, within the Territory of Alaska, until he or she shall have first obtained a license therefor as hereinafter in this Act prescribed. [35 Stat. L. 603.]

SEC. 11. [Requirements.] That no person shall receive a license to practice medicine or surgery, or any of the departments thereof, within the Territory of Alaska until he or she shall have, first, submitted a diploma issued by some legally chartered medical school authorizing the holder thereof to practice medicine or surgery, the requirements for graduation of which medical school shall have been at the time of granting said diploma in no particular less than those prescribed by the Association of American Medical Colleges for that year, or, second, submitted proof of having practiced medicine or surgery, or both, for a period of not less than three successive years continuously prior to the passage of this Act and within the jurisdiction of one of the judicial districts of Alaska. [35 Stat. L. 603.]

SEC. 12. [Applications.] That any person desiring to obtain a license to practice medicine or surgery within the Territory of Alaska shall first make application therefor to the clerk of the court of the district in which he desires to practice. The application shall be in writing, and shall state the name of the applicant, his age, his residence, the name and location of the college whence his diploma issued, the length of time, if at all, he has practiced medicine, and where, giving specifically the names of places wherein he has so practiced medicine. The application shall be accompanied by the diploma of the applicant, or duly authenticated copy, as must also an affidavit setting forth that he or she is the person therein named, and that the diploma was procured in the regular manner after the regular course of study prescribed by the medical school granting the same, without fraud or misrepresentation. [35 Stat. L. 604.]

SEC. 13. [License to resident practitioners — requirements.] That any applicant for license to practice medicine or surgery within the Territory of Alaska, not in possession of the credentials specified in section three of this Act, may obtain a license at the discretion of the clerk of the district court to whom he applies upon furnishing a properly attested statement, to wit: That he or she is a bona fide resident of Alaska, and has been engaged in the practice of medicine exclusively within the Territory of Alaska for a period of not less than three successive years immediately prior to the passage of this Act. The application shall be accompanied by the written recommendation of three bona fide residents of the judicial district wherein the applicant desires to practice, one of whom must be a physician holding a license under section three of this Act, and shall state in a general way applicant's character and professional ability. [35 Stat. L. 604.]

SEC. 14. [Recording license, etc.] That every person receiving a license to practice medicine or surgery within the Territory of Alaska shall have such license recorded in the office of the clerk of the court of the district wherein he is practicing, or proposes to practice, within thirty days from date of issuance. And when such licentiate moves into another district for the purpose of continuing the practice of medicine, he shall first file for record with the clerk of the court of the district to which he moves a certified copy of the license. [35 Stat. L. 604.]

SEC. 15. [Prima facie evidence of practice — emergency cases — commissioned medical officers, etc.] That any person shall be regarded as practicing medicine within the meaning of this Act who shall within the Territory of Alaska append the letters M. D. to his name, or who shall prescribe or administer or make known his ability or willingness to prescribe or administer drugs, medicines, electricity, magnetism, hydrotherapy, or perform any operation or manipulation, or apply any apparatus or appliance for the cure, alleviation, correction, or reduction of any human disease, ill, deformity, defect, wound, or injury, including midwifery for hire, fee, compensation, or reward, promised, offered, or accepted, directly or indirectly. The doing of any of the acts of this section above mentioned shall be taken to be prima facie evidence on the part of the person so doing to represent himself or herself as engaged in the practice of medicine or surgery or both. But nothing in this Act shall be so construed as to inhibit service in case of emergency, medical or surgical relief of natives of Alaska by employees of the Bureau of Education, or to the domestic administration of family remedies, nor to legally qualified dentists when engaged exclusively in the practice of dentistry. Nor shall this Act apply to any commissioned medical officer in the United States Army or Marine-Hospital Service or Bureau of Education in the discharge of his professional duties, or to any ship's doctor attached to any vessel plying or operating in Alaska. [35 Stat. L. 604.]

SEC. 16. [Recording licenses, etc.—fee.] That applications for license to practice medicine within the Territory of Alaska shall be recorded by the clerk of the district court in which they are presented within five days of date of presentation. Said record shall specify under which section of this Act the license be issued, if issued, and the date thereof. The record containing said applications shall be accessible to the public during office hours of the clerk of the court for inspection. A fee of ten dollars shall accompany each application for license. [35 Stat. L. 604.]

SEC. 17. [Penalty for violation.] That every person who shall practice, or shall attempt to practice medicine within the meaning of this Act without having first obtained a license therefor as prescribed in this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not less than thirty nor more than one hundred days, or by both fine and imprisonment, and each day of such practice shall constitute a distinct and separate offense. [35 Stat. L. 605.]

SEC. 18. [Disposition of funds.] That all moneys collected from licenses or fines under this Act shall be disposed of in the manner already provided for by law applicable to the Territory of Alaska. [35 Stat. L. 605.]

An Act Authorizing the Attorney-General to appoint as special peace officers such employees of the Alaska school service as may be named by the Secretary of the Interior.

[Act of March 3, 1909, ch. 266, 35 Stat. L. 837.]

[School employees as special peace officers — authorized to arrest — summary arrests — trials — fees — expenses.] That the Attorney-General shall have power to appoint, in his discretion, any person employed in the Alaska school service who may be designated by the Secretary of the Interior as a special peace officer of the division of the district of Alaska in which such person resides; and such special peace officer shall have authority to arrest, upon warrant duly issued, any native of the district of Alaska charged with the violation of any of the provisions of the Criminal Code of Alaska (Act March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, second supplement Revised Statutes, page one thousand and three) or any amendment thereof, or any white man charged with the violation of any of said provisions to the detriment of any native of the district of Alaska; and such peace officer shall also have authority to make such arrests, without warrant, for a crime committed or attempted in his presence, or when the person arrested has committed a felony, although not in his presence, or when a felony has in fact been committed and he has reasonable cause for believing the person arrested to have committed it; and any person so arrested shall be taken, in accordance with such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Attorney-General, and without unnecessary delay, before a United States commissioner or other judicial officer for trial: Provided, however, That no person so appointed shall be entitled to any fees or emoluments of any character whatsoever for performing any of the services herein mentioned, but may be allowed, in the discretion of the Attorney-General, expenses actually and necessarily incurred in connection with such services. [35 Stat. L. 837.]

SEC. 6. [Four marshals authorized.] That four United States marshals shall be appointed for the district, one of whom shall be assigned to each division, and shall reside at such place in the division as the Attorney-General shall direct. [35 Stat. L. 841.]

This and the following sections 8 and 10 are from an Act of March 3, 1900, ch. 269, entitled "An Act To amend section eighty-six of an Act to provide a government for the Territory of Hawaii, to provide for additional judges, and for other judicial purposes." Sections 2, 3, 4, and 5, respectively, constitute amendments to the Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 786, supra, p. 260, and are there inserted. Section 7 amends section 728 of the Alaska Code of Civil Procedure. Section 9 amends section 771 of the Alaska Code of Civil Procedure.

Other provisions for the appointment and duties of marshals were made by the Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 786, § 9, supra, p. 266.

SEC. 8. [Terms of present officers not affected — officers in third division — assignments.] That nothing in this Act shall be construed to limit or terminate the term of office of any of the judges, district attorneys, or marshals now serving in Alaska; but each shall serve out the term for which he was appointed unless sooner removed. The judge, district attorney, and marshal now serving in the third division of said district shall hereafter have their residence and hold their respective offices in the fourth division created by this Act: Provided, That the President may, in his discretion, change the assignment of any of said officers from one division to another. [35 Stat. L. 842.]

SEC. 10. [Modification of time for court transmitting accounts allowed.] That when, in the opinion of the Attorney-General, it will be impossible for the accounts of any court official or other person whose accounts pertain to the United States courts in Alaska to be transmitted to the Department of Justice within the period prescribed by law, the Attorney-General may modify, as he may deem proper, any requirement of law concerning the time when such accounts shall be rendered and transmitted. [35 Stat. L. 842.]

[SEC. 1.] [Reindeer — disposal of.] All reindeer owned by the United States in Alaska shall, as soon as practicable, be turned over to missions in or natives of Alaska, to be held and used by them under such conditions as the Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe. The Secretary of the Interior may authorize the sale of surplus male reindeer and make regulations for the same. The proceeds of such sale shall be turned into the Treasury of the United States. [35 Stat. L. 990.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 4, 1909, ch. 299.
The same provision occurs in the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of May 27, 1908, ch. 200, 35 Stat. L. 351.

[Sec. 1.] [Expenditures of school funds — supervision.] * * *
All expenditures of money appropriated herein for school purposes in Alaska for schools other than those for the education of white children under the jurisdiction of the governor thereof shall be under the supervision and direction of the Commissioner of Education and in conformity with such conditions, rules, and regulations as to conduct and methods of instruction and expenditure of money as may from time to time be recommended by him and approved by the Secretary of the Interior. [38 Stat. L. 648.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of Aug. 1, 1914, ch. 223. Similar provisions have occurred in prior appropriation acts.

An Act To amend an Act entitled "An Act creating a legislative assembly in the Territory of Alaska and conferring legislative power thereon, and for other purposes," approved August twenty-fourth, nineteen hundred and twelve.

[Act of Aug. 29, 1914, ch. 292, 38 Stat. L. 710.]

[Power of courts to enforce statutes — legislative power — costs of prosecutions.] That nothing in that Act of Congress entitled "An Act creating a legislative assembly in the Territory of Alaska and conferring legislative power thereon, and for other purposes," approved August twenty-fourth, nineteen hundred and twelve, shall be so construed as to prevent the courts now existing or that may be hereafter created in said Territory from enforcing within their respective jurisdictions all laws passed by the legislature within the power conferred upon it, the same as if such laws were passed by Congress, nor to prevent the legislature passing laws imposing additional duties, not inconsistent with the present duties of their respective offices, upon the governor, marshals, deputy marshals, clerks of the district courts, and United States commissioners acting as justices of the peace, judges of probate courts, recorders, and coroners, and providing the necessary expenses of performing such duties, and in the prosecuting of all crimes denounced by Territorial laws the costs shall be paid the same as is now or may hereafter be provided by Act of Congress providing for the prosecution of criminal offenses in said Territory, except that in prosecutions growing out of any revenue law passed by the legislature the costs shall be paid as in civil actions and such prosecutions shall be in the name of the Territory. [38 Stat. L. 710.]

[Sec. 1.] [Repairs to government wharf at Sitka.] For repairs and preservation of * * * Government wharves and piers under the control of the Treasury Department, together with the necessary dredging adjacent thereto, buildings and wharf at Sitka, Alaska, and the Secretary of the Treasury may, in renting said wharf, require that the lessee shall make all necessary repairs thereto. [38 Stat. L. 829.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 3, 1915, ch. 75.

A prior appropriation for this purpose was made by the Act of June 11, 1896, ch. 420, § 1, supra, p. 259.

III. MINERAL LANDS, MINES, AND MINING.

Sec. 13. [Native-born Canadians — mining rights.] That native-born citizens of the Dominion of Canada shall be accorded in said District of Alaska the same mining rights and privileges accorded to citizens of the United States in British Columbia and the Northwest Territory by the laws of the Dominion of Canada or the local laws, rules, and regulations; but no greater rights shall be thus accorded than citizens of the United States or persons who have declared their intention to become such may enjoy in said District of Alaska; and the Secretary of the Interior shall from time to time promulgate and enforce rules and regulations to carry this provision into effect. [30 Stat. L. 415.]

This is from the Act of May 14, 1898, ch. 299, entitled "An Act extending the homestead laws and providing for a right of way for railroads in the District of Alaska and for other purposes." The first section of this Act, as amended by an Act of March 3, 1903, ch. 1002, and sections 10, 11, and 12, are given infra, this title, under the subdivision Public Lands, p. 316. Sections 2 to 9 inclusive are given infra, this title, under the subdivision Railroads, Wagon Roads, Aérials and Tramways, p. 330. Section 14 of this Act is given supra, under the subdivision Civil Government, p. 293.

So much of the above section as terms Alaska a "District" was superseded by the reorganization of Alaska as a territory by the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 387, § 1, supra, p. 250.

SEC. 26. [Mining laws extended to Alaska — regulation of mining.] The laws of the United States relating to mining claims, mineral locations, and rights incident thereto are hereby extended to the District of Alaska:

Provided, That subject only to such general limitations as may be necessary to exempt navigation from artificial obstructions all land and shoal water between low and mean high tide on the shores, bays, and inlets of Bering Sea, within the jurisdiction of the United States, shall be subject to exploration and mining for gold and other precious metals by citizens of the United States, or persons who have legally declared their intentions to become such, under such reasonable rules and regulations as the miners in organized mining districts may have heretofore made or may hereafter make governing the temporary possession thereof for exploration and mining purposes until otherwise provided by law:

Provided further, That the rules and regulations established by the miners shall not be in conflict with the mining laws of the United States; and no exclusive permit shall be granted by the Secretary of War authorizing any person or persons, corporation or company to excavate or mine under any of said waters below low tide, and if such exclusive permit has been granted it is hereby revoked and declared null and void; but citizens of the United States or persons who have legally declared their intention to become such shall have the right to dredge and mine for gold or other precious metals in said waters, below low tide, subject to such general rules and regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe for the preservation of order and the protection of the interests of commerce; such rules and regulations shall not, however, deprive miners on the beach of the right hereby given to dump tailings into or pump from the sea opposite their claims, except where such dumping would actually obstruct navigation, and the reservation of a roadway sixty feet wide, under the tenth section of the Act of May fourteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, entitled "An Act extending the homestead laws and providing for right of way for railroads in the District of Alaska, and for other purposes," shall not apply to mineral lands or town sites. [31 Stat. L. 329.]

This is from an Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 786, entitled "An Act making further provision for a civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes." The other sections of this Act are given supra, this title, under the subdivision Civil Government, p. 260. Section 10 of the Act of May 14, 1898, mentioned in this section, is given infra, under the subdivision Public Lands, p. 320.

The laws of the United States relating to mining claims were previously extended to Alaska by the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 8, 23 Stat. L. 26.

Mineral laws extended to Alaska.—By a similar provision in the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, 23 Stat. L. 24, it was held that its effect was to extend the mineral laws of the United States to Alaska. Meydenbauer v. Stevens, (1897) 78 Fed. 787. "Mineral laws" as amending section 2339 of Revised Statutes—section 2339 of Revised Statutes included by this section.—Section 2339 of the Revised Statutes has been classified as and considered by the courts and law writers to be one of the mineral laws of the United States ever since its enactment, and as such was extended by this provision to Alaska. McFarland v. Alaska Perseverance Min. Co., (1907) 3 Alaska 308.

An Act To extend the coal land laws to the district of Alaska.

[Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 796, 31 Stat. L. 658.]

[Coal-land laws extended to Alaska.] That so much of the public land laws of the United States are hereby extended to the district of Alaska as relate to coal lands, namely, sections twenty-three hundred and forty-seven to twenty-three hundred and fifty-two, inclusive, of the Revised Statutes. [31 Stat. L. 658.]

So much of the text as designates Alaska as a district was superseded by the reorganization thereof as a territory by the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 387, § 1, supra, p. 250.

For R. S. secs. 2347 to 2352 inclusive, above mentioned, see the title MINERAL LANDS, MINES AND MINING.

This Act was amended by the Act of April 28, 1904, ch. 1772, infra, this page.

An Act To amend an Act entitled "An Act to extend the coal-land laws to the district of Alaska," approved June sixth, nineteen hundred.

[Act of April 28, 1904, ch. 1772, 33 Stat. L. 525.]

[SEC. 1.] [Coal-land entries — location — boundaries — filing notice.]

That any person or association of persons qualified to make entry under the coal-land laws of the United States, who shall have opened or improved a coal mine or coal mines on any of the unsurveyed public lands of the United States in the district of Alaska, may locate the lands upon which such mine or mines are situated, in rectangular tracts containing forty, eighty, or one hundred and sixty acres, with north and south boundary lines run according to the true meridian, by marking the four corners thereof with permanent monuments, so that the boundaries thereof may be readily and easily traced. And all such locators shall, within one year from the passage of this Act, or within one year from making such location, file for record in the recording district, and with the register and receiver of the land district in which the lands are located or situated, a notice containing the name or names of the locator or locators, the date of the location, the description of the lands located, and a reference to such natural objects or permanent monuments as will readily identify the same. [33 Stat. L. 525.]

For the Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 796, mentioned in the title of this Act, see supra, p. 301.

"The single object of Congress in the Act of 1904 was to provide for the sale of coal lands which had not been surveyed. The provisions for the sale of such coal lands, in or out of Alaska, which had been surveyed, so that entries could be made 'by legal subdivision,' had already been covered by the general law which had been extended to Alaska. The conditions in Alaska were but temporary. When the coal land there should be brought under the system of surveys which prevailed in the better settled parts of the country, the Act of 1904 would cease to be operative, having nothing to which it could apply. The legislation, read in the light of the situation and of the uniform policy which had so long prevailed of prohibiting more than one entry to one person, makes it plain that Congress did not intend to except the unsurveyed coal lands of Alaska from the operation of the restrictions which attached to the sale of the surveyed coal lands in Alaska and elsewhere." United States v. Munday, (1911) 222 U. S. 175, 32 S. Ct. 53, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 149.

SEC. 2. [Procedure for obtaining patent.] That such locator or locators, or their assigns, who are citizens of the United States, shall receive a patent to the lands located by presenting, at any time within three years from the date of such notice, to the register and receiver of the land district in which the lands so located are situated an application therefor, accompanied by a certified copy of a plat of survey and field notes thereof, made by a United States deputy surveyor or a United States mineral-surveyor duly approved by the surveyor-general for the district of Alaska, and a payment of the sum of ten dollars per acre for the lands applied for; but no such application shall be allowed until after the applicant has caused a notice of the presentation thereof, embracing a description of the lands, to have been published in a newspaper in the district of Alaska published nearest the location of the premises for a period of sixty days, and shall have caused copies of such notice, together with a certified copy of the official plat or survey, to have been kept posted in a conspicuous place upon the land applied for and in the land office for the district in which the lands are located for a like period, and until after he shall have furnished proof of such publication and posting, and such other proof as is required by the coal-land laws: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to authorize entries to be made or title to be acquired to the shore of any navigable waters within said district. [33 Stat. L. 525.]

Payment pending protest.—The payment required by this section, to be made by locators of Alaska coal lands, as a condition precedent to patent therefor, need not be made, in cases where protest is filed, until after the termination of the protest. (1910) 28 Op. Atty-Gen. 448.

SEC. 3. [Adverse claims — proceedings.] That during such period of posting and publication, or within six months thereafter, any person or association of persons having or asserting any adverse interest or claim to the tract of land or any part thereof sought to be purchased shall file in the land office where such application is pending, under oath, an adverse claim, setting forth the nature and extent thereof, and such adverse claimant shall, within sixty days after the filing of such adverse claim, begin an action to quiet title in a court of competent jurisdiction within the district of Alaska, and thereafter no patent shall issue for such claim until the final adjudication of the rights of the parties, and such patent shall then be issued in conformity with the final decree of such court therein. [33 Stat. L. 525.]

The time for filing certain adverse claims was extended by the Act of June 7, 1910, ch. 265, infra, p. 305.

SEC. 4. [Continuance of existing laws.] That all the provisions of the coal-land laws of the United States not in conflict with the provisions of this Act shall continue and be in full force in the district of Alaska. [33 Stat. L. 526.]

An Act To amend the laws governing labor or improvements upon mining claims in Alaska.

[SEC. 1.] [Annual improvements, required on claims — affidavits — forfeiture.] That during each year and until patent has been issued therefor, at least one hundred dollars' worth of labor shall be performed or improvements made on, or for the benefit or development of, in accordance with existing law, each mining claim in the district of Alaska heretofore or hereafter located. And the locator or owner of such claim or some other person having knowledge of the facts may also make and file with the said recorder of the district in which the claims shall be situate an affidavit showing the performance of labor or making of improvements to the amount of one hundred dollars as aforesaid and specifying the character and extent of such work. Such affidavit shall set forth the following: First, the name or number of the mining claims and where situated; second, the number of days work done and the character and value of the improvements placed thereon; third, the date of the performance of such labor and of making improvements; fourth, at whose instance the work was done or the improvements made; fifth, the actual amount paid for work and improvement, and by whom paid when the same was not done by the owner. Such affidavit shall be prima facie evidence of the performance of such work or making of such improvements, but if such affidavits be not filed within the time fixed by this Act the burden of proof shall be upon the claimant to establish the performance of such annual work and improvements. And upon failure of the locator or owner of any such claim to comply with the provisions of this Act, as to performance of work and improvements, such claim shall become forfeited and open to location by others as if no location of the same had ever been made. The affidavits required hereby may be made before any officer authorized to administer oaths, and the provisions of sections fifty-three hundred and ninety-two and fifty-three hundred and ninety-three of the Revised Statu[t]es are hereby extended to such affidavits. Said affidavits shall be filed not later than ninety days after the close of the year in which such work is performed. [34 Stat. L. 1243.]

The requirement as to annual improvements was suspended during the year 1913, with respect to certain claims on the Seward Peninsula, by the Act of Dec. 1, 1913, ch. 39, 38 Stat. L. 235.

Where provisions of this Act are irreconcilable with section 2324 of the Revised Statutes, which was made applicable to Alaska by an Act passed June 6, 1900, 31 Stat. L. 321, sec. 26 (see supra, p. 300), section 2324 is necessarily repealed by implication. Thatcher v. Brown, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 190 Fed. 708, wherein the court said: "It will be seen that by both the acts (R. S. 2324 and this section) the annual assessment work is required to be done 'during' the year. But by the former act a failure to complete such work within the year, while rendering the ground open to relocation, was not declared to work a forfeiture of the locator's rights; on the contrary, he, together with his heirs, assigns, or legal representatives, was expressly given the right to resume work upon the claim after such failure to complete it, provided no other location be made in the meantime. By its Act of March 2, 1907, however, Congress, while conferring upon locators in Alaska a privilege not given by section 2324 of the Revised Statutes, to wit, a provision permitting Alaskan locators to file for record an affidavit showing the performance of the required annual assessment work, which affidavit should be prima facie evidence of such performance, expressly declared that, upon the failure of the locator or owner of any such claim in Alaska to comply with the provisions of the act as to the performance of work and improvements, 'such claim shall become forfeited and open to location by others as if no location of the same had ever been made.'

"It is true that the Act of March 2, 1907, contains no express repeal of any previous provision of the statutes, and it is also true that implied repeals are not favored. Still the courts are not at liberty to ignore a purpose to repeal clearly indicated by irreconcilable provisions. Here we have an old mining statute, made applicable to Alaska by the Act of June 6, 1900, expressly providing that while a failure on the part of the locator to complete the required annual assessment work would render the ground covered by the location open to relocation, yet such work might be resumed by the locator or his legal representatives, provided no other location had intervened, and then a later act to amend the law upon the subject in so far as mining claims in Alaska are concerned, which in terms declares that upon the failure of the locator to perform the required amount of work upon the claim within the year 'such claim shall become forfeited and open to location by others as if no location of the same had ever been made.'

"Both acts expressly require $100 worth of work or improvements to be done or made on or for the benefit of each claim during each year. But the consequences of a failure to complete such work or improvements within the year are differently declared, and such differences are irreconcilable. In the earlier act such failure is not declared to end the locator's right; but he is thereby given the right to resume the work after the expiration of the year, provided there has been no other location meanwhile. By the later Act no such permission is accorded, and there is therein an express declaration that such failure works a forfeiture of the claim. To that extent the prior law, so far as it affects claims in Alaska, was necessarily repealed by the later one."

SEC. 2. [Fee.] That the recorders for the several divisions or districts of Alaska shall collect the sum of one dollar and fifty cents as a fee for the filing, recording, and indexing said annual proofs of work and improvements for each claim so recorded. [34 Stat. L. 1243.]

An Act To encourage the development of coal deposits in the Territory of Alaska.

[SEC. 1.] [Development of coal deposits — consolidation of claims — limit of acreage.] That all persons, their heirs or assigns, who have in good faith personally or by an attorney in fact made locations of coal land in the Territory of Alaska in their own interest, prior to November twelfth, nineteen hundred and six, or in accordance with circular of instructions issued by the Secretary of the Interior May sixteenth, nineteen hundred and seven, may consolidate their said claims or locations by including in a single claim, location, or purchase not to exceed two thousand five hundred and sixty acres of contiguous lands, not exceeding in length twice the width of the tract thus consolidated and for this purpose such persons, their heirs or assigns, may form associations or corporations who may perfect entry of and acquire title to such lands in accordance with the other provisions of law under which said locations were originally made: Provided, That no corporation shall be permitted to consolidate its claims under this Act unless seventy-five per centum of its stock shall be held by persons qualified to enter coal lands in Alaska. [35 Stat. L. 424.]

Locations made in good faith.—The benefits of the Act authorizing the consolidation of claims or locations of coal lands in Alaska can be shared only by persons who made such locations in good faith—that is, honestly and lawfully—prior to Nov. 16, 1906, in their own interests individually, without fraud, collusion, or deceit, or any purpose to violate any provision of the law. Therefore if it can be shown that agreements or arrangements for transferring entries to a company or corporation were entered into by locators of coal lands in Alaska after they had made their locations in good faith and in their own interest alone, such locations may, under the provisions of this Act, lawfully pass to entry and patent in accordance with the terms of said Act; but if such agreements or arrangements were entered into prior to such locations being made, the locations do not come within the provisions of the Act and cannot be lawfully passed to entry and patent. (1909) 27 Op. Atty-Gen. 412.

SEC. 2. [Preference right to purchase product for army and navy reserved.] That the United States shall, at all times, have the preference right to purchase so much of the product of any mine or mines opened upon the lands sold under the provisions of this Act as may be necessary for the use of the Army and Navy, and at such reasonable and remunerative price as may be fixed by the President; but the producers of any coal so purchased who may be dissatisfied with the price thus fixed shall have the right to prosecute suits against the United States in the Court of Claims for the recovery of any additional sum or sums they may claim as justly due upon such purchase. [35 Stat. L. 424.]

SEC. 3. [Unlawful trust, etc., forbidden—forfeiture.] That if any of the lands or deposits purchased under the provisions of this Act shall be owned, leased, trusteeed, possessed, or controlled by any device permanently, temporarily, directly, indirectly, tacitly, or in any manner whatsoever so that they form part of, or in any way effect any combination, or are in anywise controlled by any combination in the form of an unlawful trust, or form the subject of any contract or conspiracy in restraint of trade in the mining or selling of coal, or of any holding of such lands by any individual, partnership, association, corporation, mortgage, stock ownership, or control, in excess of two thousand five hundred and sixty acres in the district of Alaska, the title thereto shall be forfeited to the United States by proceedings instituted by the Attorney-General of the United States in the courts for that purpose. [35 Stat. L. 424.]

SEC. 4. [Patents—Recitals.] That every patent issued under this Act shall expressly recite the terms and conditions prescribed in sections two and three hereof. [35 Stat. L. 424.]

An Act Extending the time in which to file adverse claims and institute adverse suits against mineral entries in the district of Alaska.

[Act of June 7, 1910, ch. 265, 36 Stat. L. 459.]

[Time extended for filing adverse claims.] That in the district of Alaska adverse claims authorized and provided for in sections twenty-three hundred and twenty-five and twenty-three hundred and twenty-six, United States Revised Statutes, may be filed at any time during the sixty days period of publication or within eight months thereafter, and the adverse suits authorized and provided for in section twenty-three hundred and twenty-six, United States Revised Statutes, may be instituted at any time within sixty days after the filing of said claims in the local land office. [36 Stat. L. 459.]

Prior provisions fixing the time for filing adverse claims were made by the Act of April 28, 1904, ch. 1772, § 3, supra, p. 302.

For R. S. secs. 2325, 2326 mentioned in the text, see the title MINERAL LANDS, MINES AND MINING.

So much of the above section as terms Alaska a "district" was superseded by the reorganization thereof as a territory by the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 387, § 1, supra, p. 250.

An Act To create, establish, and enforce a miner's labor lien in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes.

[Act of June 25, 1910, ch. 422, 36 Stat. L. 848.]

[SEC. 1.] [Miner's labor lien — persons entitled.] That every miner or other laborer who shall labor in or upon any mine or mining ground for another in the Territory of Alaska in digging, thawing, conveying, hoisting, piling, cleaning up, or any other kind of work in producing any mineral-bearing sands, gravels, earth, or rock, gold or gold dust, or other minerals, or shall aid or assist therein by his labor as cook, engineer, fireman, or in cutting and delivering wood used in said work, or in work in any like capacity in producing the dump, shall, where his labor directly aided in such production, have a lien upon the dump or mass of mineral-bearing sands, gravels, earth, or rocks, and all gold and gold dust, or other minerals therein, and all gold and gold dust extracted therefrom, for the full amount of wages for all the time which he was so employed as such laborer in producing the said dump, within one year next preceding his ceasing to labor thereon; and to the extent of the labor of the said miner or other laborer actually employed or expended thereon, within one year next prior to ceasing to labor thereon, the said lien shall be prior to and preferred over any deed, mortgage, bill of sale, attachment, conveyance, or other claim, whether the same was made or given prior to such labor or not: Provided, That this preference shall not apply to any such deed, mortgage, bill of sale, attachment, conveyance, or other claim given in good faith and for value prior to the approval of this Act. [36 Stat. L. 848.]

This is known as the "Miners' Labor Lien Act."

SEC. 2. [Claim of lien to be filed — form.] That every laborer, within ninety days after the completion of the performance of the work or labor mentioned in the foregoing section who shall claim the benefit thereof, must, personally or by some other person for him, file for record in the recording precinct where the labor was performed a claim of lien containing a statement of his demand under oath, substantially in the following form:

NOTICE OF LABORER'S LIEN.

Territory of Alaska, ——— precinct, ss:

———, claimant, against ———, defendant.

Notice is hereby given that ———, claimant, claims a lien upon (describing the dump or mass of mineral-bearing sands, gravels, earth, or rock, and its location with reasonable certainty) in the ——— precinct, in the Territory of Alaska, for labor performed in (digging, and so forth; describe the work). That the name of the owner or reputed owner of the said property is ———, and that ——— is the owner or reputed owner of the mine or mining ground from which the dump or mass of mineral-bearing sands, gravels, earth, or rock and the minerals therein were extracted, and that ——— employed claimant to perform such work and labor upon the following terms and conditions (state substance of contract, if any, or reasonable value); that said contract has been faithfully performed and fully complied with on the part of the claimant, who performed labor thereunder aforesaid for the period of _____ days; that said labor was performed between the _____ day of _____ and the _____ day of _____, and the rendition of said service was closed on the _____ day of _____, and ninety days have not elapsed since that time; that the amount of claimant's demand for said service is _____; that no part thereof has been paid (except the sum of _____ dollars), and there is now due and remaining unpaid thereon, after deducting all just credits and offsets, the sum of _____ dollars, in which amount he claims a lien upon said property.

Claimant.

Territory of Alaska, _____ precinct, ss:

_____, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says, that I am the claimant (or if by some other person state the fact) named in the foregoing claim; that I have heard the same read, know the contents thereof, and believe the same to be true.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this _____ day of _____.

[36 Stat. L. 848.]

SEC. 3. [Recording — fees.] That the recorder must record every claim filed under the provisions of this Act in books kept by him for that purpose, which record must be indexed as deeds and other conveyances are required by law to be indexed, and for which he may receive the following fees and none other: For filing, ten cents; for recording, one dollar; for indexing, fifteen cents for each name. [36 Stat. L. 849.]

SEC. 4. [Time to bring actions.] That no lien provided for in this Act shall bind any property for a longer period than ninety days after the claim has been filed, unless an action be commenced within that time to enforce the same. [36 Stat. L. 849.]

SEC. 5. [Jurisdiction.] That the action for the foreclosure of the lien provided for in this Act shall be begun either in the district court or in the justice's court in the precinct where the lien was filed and the justices of the peace in Alaska are hereby given full jurisdiction in the foreclosure of such liens under the provisions of this Act, and shall also have such other jurisdiction and power as is now conferred on them by law in aid of the enforcement of this Act, and the provisions of section seven hundred and twenty-three of chapter seventy-one of the Code of Civil Procedure now in force in Alaska shall be applicable to the jurisdiction intended to be conferred by this Act. [36 Stat. L. 849.]

SEC. 6. [Amendments allowed before action.] That no mistake, informality, or mere matter of form or lack of statement, either in the lien notice or pleadings, shall be ground for dismissal or unnecessary delay in the action to foreclose the lien, but the lien notice and pleadings may be amended at any time before judgment, and section ninety-two of chapter eleven of the Code of Civil Procedure now in force in Alaska shall apply to such amendments: Provided, That if it be shown that a material statement or averment has been omitted or misstated, it shall be ground for a reasonable delay or continuance to give the defendant a reasonable opportunity to meet it upon amendment. [36 Stat. L. 849.]

SEC. 7. [Process — appearance — posting notice — adverse claimants — effect.] That the claimant may file the original or a certified copy of the notice of lien in the district or justice's court as the statement of his case, and thereupon the court or justice shall issue the usual summons directed to the defendant or defendants, which summons, together with a copy of the lien notice, shall, by any officer authorized to serve process, be served upon the defendant or defendants, as provided in sections nine hundred and fifty and nine hundred and fifty-one of chapter ninety-two of the Code of Civil Procedure now in force in Alaska. The summons shall require the defendant or defendants to appear before such court or justice at a time and a place to be named therein, not less than six nor more than twenty days from the date thereof, to answer the demand of the claimant in the said lien notice, or judgment for want of an answer will be taken against them. Service by publication may be had pursuant to sections forty-seven and forty-eight of chapter four of said Code of Civil Procedure. The officer serving the summons shall also immediately post a copy of said lien notice in a conspicuous place on the dump or mass of mineral-bearing sands, gravels, earth, or rock, and gold and gold dust, and other minerals therein upon which the lien is filed, and from the moment of posting the lien notice the dump or mass of mineral-bearing sands, gravels, earth, and rock, and gold and gold dust, and other minerals therein shall be in the custody and under the control of the officer. All persons who claim any interest therein in opposition to the lien claimant may come in and answer and set up and defend their said claims, but no claim or claims of any owner, lessee, or other adverse defendant shall bar the lien claimant from recovering the sum due him for actual labor in producing the said dump or mass of mineral-bearing sands, gravels, earth, or rock, or gold and gold dust, or other minerals. [36 Stat. L. 850.]

SEC. 8. [Joining of parties — consolidation — court allowances — waiver of right to lien void.] That any number of persons claiming liens under this Act may join in the same action, and when separate actions are commenced the court may consolidate them. The court shall also allow, as a part of the costs, the moneys paid for filing, recording, and indexing the notice of lien, the sum of five dollars for drawing the same, and a reasonable attorney's fee for each person claiming a lien, not to exceed ten per centum of the amount of the lien established on judgment. Any contract or agreement or any waiver of any kind made or signed by any minor [sic] or laborer whereby it is sought to waive or abandon his right to file a lien under this Act, or any agreement for an extended time of payment whereby the same end is sought, shall to that extent be null and void as against public policy. [36 Stat. L. 850.]

SEC. 9. [Execution of judgment — sales — extracting minerals — disposal of proceeds.] That in such action judgment must be rendered in favor of each person having a laborer's lien for the amount due him, and the court shall order the dump or mass of mineral-bearing sands, gravels, earth, or rock, and the gold and gold dust, and other minerals therein subject to the lien to be sold by the marshal in the same manner that personal property is sold on execution; or the court may, upon a showing that it is necessary to do so to preserve the property from loss or waste, by order require the marshal to wash up or extract the gold and gold dust or other mineral from the said mineral-bearing sands, gravels, earth, or rock; or the court may, by order, allow the defendant or defendants or any party interested to wash up and extract the said mineral, in the presence of the marshal or deputy marshal or special officer, who shall take the gold or gold dust or other minerals as it is washed up and extracted and return the same into court, and it shall be immediately paid out as follows: First, the cost of cleaning up or extracting the gold or gold dust or other minerals shall be paid; second, the court costs shall be paid; and, third, the judgment or judgments so rendered in favor of the lien claimants shall be paid; and if there is not sufficient gold or gold dust, or other minerals, or sufficient moneys obtained from the sale of the property to pay all claims in full, the court shall apportion the proceeds to the payment of such judgments pro rata: Provided, That no part of any such proceeds shall be paid upon any claim or judgment to any person who did not actually perform labor in producing the dump or the proceeds thereof until all such preferred claims are paid in full. [36 Stat. L. 850.]

SEC. 10. [Appeal — disposition of metal pending appeal.] That an appeal may be taken from a final judgment of a justice of the peace in actions instituted under this Act to the district court, in the manner provided in chapter ninety-seven of the Code of Civil Procedure now in force in Alaska, and upon such appeal being perfected the dump or mass of mineral-bearing sands, gravels, earth and rock, gold and gold dust, or other minerals shall be washed up by the marshal or any party mentioned in section nine of this Act as the district court may direct, and all the gold or gold dust or other mineral so washed up shall be paid into the registry of the district court there to await the final judgment on appeal: Provided, That the gold or gold dust or other mineral in excess of the amount of the judgment, including an additional amount equal to the probable accruing costs on appeal and two years' interest at the legal rate, shall after the expiration of ninety days from the time it was paid into the registry of the district court, be released to the owners upon a showing that no liens have been filed against it. The defendant or defendants, or any one or more of them, may deposit cash in lieu of the gold or gold dust on the dump, which shall remain in the custody of the law until the final judgment, and shall then be applied in payment of the judgment or judgments rendered on each lien claims, and costs, and interest. [36 Stat. L. 851.]

SEC. 11. [Liability for buying minerals, etc., posted.] That any person or persons who shall, after the copy of the notice of lien is posted upon any dump or mass of mineral-bearing sands, gravels, earth or rock, gold and gold dust, or other mineral, as provided in this Act, and with knowledge of such notice of lien, buy, purchase, wash up, remove, destroy, or carry away all or any part or portion of the same, or the gold or gold dust therein, or who shall render it difficult, uncertain, or impossible to identify the gold or gold dust or other mineral obtained therefrom, shall be liable to the lien holder for the full amount of his judgment and costs; and any person who shall take and carry away all or any part or portion of said dump of mineral-bearing sands, gravels, earth or rock, or the gold or gold dust or other minerals therefrom, after the same shall come into the custody of the officer, shall be guilty of a crime and shall be punished as for the larceny of a like amount; and any district attorney in Alaska is specially required to immediately cause a warrant to be issued for the arrest of any such person or persons and to prosecute them according to law. [36 Stat. L. 851.]

An Act To modify and amend the mining laws in their application to the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Association placer-mining claims limited — assessment required.] That no association placer-mining claim shall hereafter be located in Alaska in excess of forty acres, and on every placer-mining claim hereafter located in Alaska, and until a patent has been issued therefor, not less than one hundred dollars' worth of labor shall be performed or improvements made during each year, including the year of location, for each and every twenty acres or excess fraction thereof. [37 Stat. L. 242.]

SEC. 2. [Location by attorneys — restriction.] That no person shall hereafter locate any placer-mining claim in Alaska as attorney for another unless he is duly authorized thereto by a power of attorney in writing, duly acknowledged and recorded in any recorder's office in the judicial division where the location is made. Any person so authorized may locate placer-mining claims for not more than two individuals or one association under such power of attorney, but no such agent or attorney shall be authorized or permitted to locate more than two placer-mining claims for any one principal or association during any calendar month, and no placer-mining claim shall hereafter be located in Alaska except under the limitations of this Act. [37 Stat. L. 243.]

SEC. 3. [Number of locations limited — ownership.] That no person shall hereafter locate, cause or procure to be located, for himself more than two placer-mining claims in any calendar month: Provided, That one or both of such locations may be included in an association claim. [37 Stat. L. 243.]

SEC. 4. [Area of claims.] That no placer-mining claim hereafter located in Alaska shall be patented which shall contain a greater area than is fixed by law, nor which is longer than three times its greatest width. [37 Stat. L. 243.]

SEC. 5. [Effect of violations.] That any placer-mining claim attempted to be located in violation of this Act shall be null and void, and the whole area thereof may be located by any qualified locator as if no such prior attempt had been made. [37 Stat. L. 243.]

An Act To provide for the leasing of coal lands in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes.

[Act of Oct. 20, 1914, ch. 330, 38 Stat. L. 741.]

[SEC. 1.] [Coal lands—surveys.] That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to survey the lands of the United States in the Territory of Alaska known to be valuable for their deposits of coal, preference to be given first in favor of surveying lands within those areas commonly known as the Bering River, Matanuska, and Nenana coal fields, and thereafter to such areas or coal fields as lie tributary to established settlements or existing or proposed rail or water transportation lines: Provided, That such surveys shall be executed in accordance with existing laws and rules and regulations governing the survey of public lands. There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $100,000 for the purpose of making the surveys herein provided for, to continue available until expended: Provided, That any surveys heretofore made under the authority or by the approval of the Department of the Interior may be adopted and used for the purposes of this Act. [38 Stat. L. 741.]

This is known as the "Alaska Coal Lands Act."

SEC. 2. [Partial reservation of lands by government.] That the President of the United States shall designate and reserve from use, location, sale, lease, or disposition not exceeding five thousand one hundred and twenty acres of coal-bearing land in the Bering River field and not exceeding seven thousand six hundred and eighty acres of coal-bearing land in the Matanuska field, and not to exceed one-half of the other coal lands in Alaska: Provided, That the coal deposits in such reserved areas may be mined under the direction of the President when, in his opinion, the mining of such coal in such reserved areas, under the direction of the President, becomes necessary, by reason of an insufficient supply of coal at a reasonable price for the requirements of Government works, construction and operation of Government railroads, for the Navy, for national protection, or for relief from monopoly or oppressive conditions. [38 Stat. L. 742.]

SEC. 3. [Unreserved lands leased.] That the unreserved coal lands and coal deposits shall be divided by the Secretary of the Interior into leasing blocks or tracts of forty acres each, or multiples thereof, and in such form as in the opinion of the Secretary will permit the most economical mining of the coal in such blocks, but in no case exceeding two thousand five hundred and sixty acres in any one leasing block or tract; and thereafter, the Secretary shall offer such blocks or tracts and the coal, lignite, and associated minerals therein for leasing, and may award leases thereof through advertisement, competitive bidding, or such other methods as he may by general regulations adopt, to any person above the age of twenty-one years who is a citizen of the United States, or to any association of such persons, or to any corporation or municipality organized under the laws of the United States or of any State or Territory thereof: Provided, That a majority of the stock of such corporation shall at all times be owned and held by citizens of the United States: And provided further, That no railroad or common carrier shall be permitted to take or acquire through lease or permit under this Act any coal or coal lands in excess of such area or quantity as may be required and used solely for its own use, and such limitation of use shall be expressed in all leases or permits issued to railroads or common carriers hereunder: And provided further, That any person, association, or corporation qualified to become a lessee under this Act and owning any pending claim under the public-land laws to any coal lands in Alaska may, within one year from the passage of this Act, enter into an arrangement with the Secretary of the Interior by which such claim shall be fully relinquished to the United States; and if in the judgment of the Secretary of the Interior, the circumstances connected with such claim justify so doing, the moneys paid by the claimant or claimants to the United States on account of such claim shall, by direction of the Secretary of the Interior, be returned and paid over to such person, association, or corporation as a consideration for such relinquishment.

All claims of existing rights to any of such lands in which final proof has been submitted and which are now pending before the Commissioner of the General Land Office or the Secretary of the Interior for decision shall be adjudicated within one year from the passage of this Act. [38 Stat. L. 742.]

SEC. 4. [Lessees, when entitled to additional lands.] That a person, association, or corporation holding a lease of coal lands under this Act may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior and through the same procedure and upon the same terms and conditions as in the case of an original lease under this Act, secure a further or new lease covering additional lands contiguous to those embraced in the original lease, but in no event shall the total area embraced in such original and new leases exceed in the aggregate two thousand five hundred and sixty acres.

That upon satisfactory showing by any lessee to the Secretary of the Interior that all of the workable deposits of coal within a tract covered by his or its lease will be exhausted, worked out, or removed within three years thereafter, the Secretary of the Interior may, within his discretion, lease to such lessee an additional tract of land or coal deposits, which, including the coal area remaining in the original lease, shall not exceed two thousand five hundred and sixty acres, through the same procedure and under the same competitive conditions as in case of an original lease. [38 Stat. L. 742.]

SEC. 5. [Consolidation of leases.] That, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, lessees holding under leases small blocks or areas may consolidate their said leases or holdings so as to include in a single holding not to exceed two thousand five hundred and sixty acres of contiguous lands. [38 Stat. L. 743.]

SEC. 6. [Quantity of land covered by lease — forfeiture of interests.] That each lease shall be for such leasing block or tract of land as may be offered or applied for, not exceeding in area two thousand five hundred and sixty acres of land, to be described by the subdivisions of the survey, and no person, association, or corporation, except as hereinafter provided, shall be permitted to take or hold any interest as a stockholder or otherwise in more than one such lease under this Act, and any interest held in violation of this proviso shall be forfeited to the United States by appropriate proceedings instituted by the Attorney General for that purpose in any court of competent jurisdiction, except that any such ownership and interest hereby forbidden which may be acquired by descent, will, judgment, or decree may be held for two years, and not longer, after its acquisition. [38 Stat. L. 743.]

SEC. 7. [Violations of Act — punishment.] That any person who shall purchase, acquire, or hold any interest in two or more such leases, except as herein provided, or who shall knowingly purchase, acquire, or hold any stock in a corporation having an interest in two or more such leases, or who shall knowingly sell or transfer to one disqualified to purchase, or except as in this Act specifically provided, disqualified to acquire, any such interest, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon conviction shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than three years and by a fine not exceeding $1,000: Provided, That any such ownership and interest hereby forbidden which may be acquired by descent, will, judgment, or decree may be held two years after its acquisition and not longer, and in case of minority or other disability such time as the court may decree. [38 Stat. L. 743.]

SEC. 8. [Directors, etc., of corporation — punishment for violations of Act.] That any director, trustee, officer, or agent of any corporation holding any interest in such a lease who shall, on behalf of such corporation, act in the purchase of any interest in another lease, or who shall knowingly act on behalf of such corporation in the sale or transfer of any such interest in any lease held by such corporation to any corporation or individual holding any interest in any such a lease, except as herein provided, shall be guilty of a felony and shall be subject to imprisonment for a term of not exceeding three years and a fine of not exceeding $1,000. [38 Stat. L. 743.]

SEC. 8a. [Restraint of trade — forfeiture of leases.] If any of the lands or deposits leased under the provisions of this Act shall be subleased, trustee, possessed, or controlled by any device permanently, temporarily, directly, indirectly, tacitly, or in any manner whatsoever, so that they form part of or are in anywise controlled by any combination in the form of an unlawful trust, with consent of lessee, or form the subject of any contract or conspiracy in restraint of trade in the mining or selling of coal, entered into by the lessee, or of any holding of such lands by any individual, partnership, association, corporation, or control, in excess of two thousand five hundred and sixty acres in the Territory of Alaska, the lease thereof shall be forfeited by appropriate court proceedings. [38 Stat. L. 743.]

SEC. 9. [Royalties — terms of leases — net profits.] That for the privilege of mining and extracting and disposing of the coal in the lands covered by his lease the lessee shall pay to the United States such royalties as may be specified in the lease, which shall not be less than two cents per ton, due and payable at the end of each month succeeding that of the shipment of the coal from the mine, and an annual rental, payable at the beginning of each year, on the lands covered by such lease, at the rate of twenty-five cents per acre for the first year thereafter, fifty cents per acre for the second, third, fourth, and fifth years, and $1 per acre for each and every year thereafter during the continuance of the lease, except that such rental for any year shall be credited against the royalties as they accrue for that year. Leases may be for periods of not more than fifty years each, subject to renewal, on such terms and conditions as may be authorized by law at the time of such renewal. All net profits from operation of Government mines, and all royalties and rentals under leases as herein provided, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States in a separate and distinct fund to be applied to the reimbursement of the Government of the United States on account of any expenditures made in the construction of railroads in Alaska, and the excess shall be deposited in the fund known as The Alaska Fund, established by the Act of Congress of January twenty-seventh, nineteen hundred and five, to be expended as provided in said last-mentioned Act. [38 Stat. L. 744.]

SEC. 10. [Limited licenses.] That in order to provide for the supply of strictly local and domestic needs for fuel the Secretary of the Interior may, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe in advance, issue to any applicant qualified under section three of this Act a limited license or permit granting the right to prospect for, mine, and dispose of coal belonging to the United States on specified tracts not to exceed ten acres to any one person or association of persons in any one coal field for a period of not exceeding ten years, on such conditions not inconsistent with this Act as in his opinion will safeguard the public interest, without payment of royalty for the coal mined or for the land occupied: Provided, That the acquisition of [or] holding of a lease under the preceding sections of this Act shall be no bar to the acquisition, holding, or operating under the limited license in this section permitted. And the holding of such a license shall be no bar to the acquisition or holding of such a lease or interest therein. [38 Stat. L. 744.]

SEC. 11. [Reservations in leases — easements.] That any lease, entry, location, occupation, or use permitted under this Act shall reserve to the Government of the United States the right to grant or use such easements in, over, through, or upon the land leased, entered, located, occupied, or used as may be necessary or appropriate to the working of the same or other coal lands by or under authority of the Government and for other purposes: Provided, That said Secretary, in his discretion, in making any lease under this Act, may reserve to the United States the right to lease, sell, or otherwise dispose of the surface of the lands embraced within such lease under existing law or laws hereafter enacted in so far as said surface is not necessary for use by the lessee in extracting and removing the deposits of coal therein. If such reservation is made, it shall be so determined before the offering of such lease.

That the said Secretary during the life of the lease is authorized to issue such permits for easements herein provided to be reserved, and to permit the use of such other public lands in the Territory of Alaska as may be necessary for the construction and maintenance of coal washeries or other works incident to the mining or treatment of coal, which lands may be occupied and used jointly or severally by lessees or permittees, as may be determined by said Secretary. [38 Stat. L. 744.]

SEC. 12. [Assignments, etc., of leases.] That no lease issued under authority of this Act shall be assigned or sublet except with the consent of the Secretary of the Interior. Each lease shall contain provisions for the purpose of insuring the exercise of reasonable diligence, skill, and care in the operation of said property, and for the safety and welfare of the miners and for the prevention of undue waste, including a restriction of the workday to not exceeding eight hours in any one day for underground workers except in cases of emergency; provisions securing the workers complete freedom of purchase, requiring the payment of wages at least twice a month in lawful money of the United States, and providing proper rules and regulations to secure fair and just weighing or measurement of the coal mined by each miner, and such other provisions as are needed for the protection of the interests of the United States, for the prevention of monopoly, and for the safeguarding of the public welfare. [38 Stat. L. 744.]

SEC. 13. [Adverse claims.] That the possession of any lessee of the land or coal deposits leased under this act for all purposes involving adverse claims to the leased property shall be deemed the possession of the United States, and for such purposes the lessee shall occupy the same relation to the property leased as if operated directly by the United States. [38 Stat. L. 745.]

SEC. 14. [Breach of terms of lease — forfeiture.] That any such lease may be forfeited and canceled by appropriate proceeding in a court of competent jurisdiction whenever the lessee fails to comply with any provision of the lease or of general regulations promulgated under this Act; and the lease may provide for the enforcement of other appropriate remedies for breach of specified conditions thereof. [38 Stat. L. 745.]

SEC. 15. [Scope of Act — pending proceedings — no lease of lands adversely claimed.] That on and after the approval of this Act no lands in Alaska containing deposits of coal withdrawn from entry or sale shall be disposed of or acquired in any manner except as provided in this Act: Provided, That the passage of this Act shall not affect any proceeding now pending in the Department of the Interior, and any such proceeding may be carried to a final determination in said department notwithstanding the passage hereof: Provided, further, That no lease shall be made, under the provisions hereof, of any land, a claim for which is pending in the Department of the Interior at the date of the passage of this Act, until and unless such claim is finally disposed of by the department adversely to the claimant. [38 Stat. L. 745.]

SEC. 16. [Statements, etc., under oath — false oaths.] That all statements, representations, or reports required, unless otherwise specified, by the Secretary of the Interior under this Act shall be upon oath and in such form and upon such blanks as the Secretary of the Interior may require, and any person making false oath, representation, or report shall be subject to punishment as for perjury. [38 Stat. L. 745.]

SEC. 17. [Authority of Secretary of Interior.] That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to prescribe the necessary and proper rules and regulations and to do any and all things necessary to carry out and accomplish the purposes of this Act. [38 Stat. L. 745.]

SEC. 18. [Repeal of conflicting Acts.] That all Acts and parts of Acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed. [38 Stat. L. 745.]

IV. PUBLIC LANDS.

SEC. 8. [Missionary stations.] * * * That the land not exceeding six hundred and forty acres at any station now occupied as missionary stations among the Indian tribes in said section, with the improvements thereon erected by or for such societies, shall be continued in the occupancy of the several religious societies to which said missionary stations respectively belong until action by Congress. [23 Stat. L. 26.]

This is a part of section 8 of an Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, entitled "An Act providing a civil government for Alaska." The remainder of this Act has long been superseded by subsequent Acts passed for the same purpose.

See the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 561, § 14, infra, p. 318, and the Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 786, § 27, infra, p. 324.

SEC. 11. [Town sites, how entered.] That until otherwise ordered by Congress lands in Alaska may be entered for town-site purposes, for the several use and benefit of the occupants of such town sites, by such trustee or trustees as may be named by the Secretary of the Interior for that purpose, such entries to be made under the provisions of section twenty-three hundred and eighty-seven of the Revised Statutes as near as may be;

And when such entries shall have been made the Secretary of the Interior shall provide by regulation for the proper execution of the trust in favor of the inhabitants of the town site, including the survey of the land into lots, according to the spirit and intent of said section twenty-three hundred and eighty-seven of the Revised Statutes, whereby the same results would be reached as though the entry had been made by a county judge and the disposal of the lots in such town site and the proceeds of the sale thereof had been prescribed by the legislative authority of a State or Territory:

Provided, That no more than six hundred and forty acres shall be embraced in one townsite entry. [26 Stat. L. 1099.]

This section 11, and the following sections 12, 13, 14, and 15, are from the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 561, entitled "An Act to repeal timber culture laws and for other purposes."

Acquisition of town site title.—Under this and the three following sections the legal title to town lots can only be acquired from the town site trustee. McGrath v. Valentine, (1909) 167 Fed. 473.

Conclusiveness of trustee's decision.—Under this section and regulations promulgated thereunder providing for the disposition of town site lots in Alaska, and authorizing the trial of conflicting claims before the trustee on notice with an appeal to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and from his decision to the Secretary of the Interior, the decision of the trustee is final, in the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, with reference to all questions of fact arising in such proceeding, except as the same may be reversed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office or the Secretary of the Interior. Miller v. Margerie, (1907) 149 Fed. 694. See also McGrath v. Valentine, (1909) 167 Fed. 473.

Right of locators within town site.—The right of locators within an alleged town site, not shown to have been entered for that purpose, is at most a mere possessory right with the privilege of regularly entering the town site in the future, if the citizens so desire, and is insufficient on which to base a suit to remove a cloud on title. Ripinsky v. Hinchman, (1910) 181 Fed. 786.

Abandonment of possession.—In Gordon v. Ross-Higgins Co., (1908) 162 Fed. 637, it appeared that the plaintiff staked out a lot in the mining camp of Fairbanks, Alaska, and built a log cabin thereon in which he resided for some three months, and then left and did not return for three years. He left some tools, a stove, etc., in the cabin, and asked two different persons to look after the property for him, but neither of them took possession of or occupied the same. No steps had been taken to locate a town site at Fairbanks, and there was no law under which titles were recorded, but books were kept for the benefit of settlers in which locations were recorded, and plaintiff's was recorded therein. About a year after he left, other persons located the lot and went into possession, which was continuous thereafter; their rights having been subsequently acquired in good faith by defendants, who with their grantors had made valuable improvements on the property. It was held that plaintiff's acts amounted to an abandonment of the lot, and that he was not an occupant or in possession and had no right therein which could ripen into a title under the town site law at the time of its location by defendants' predecessor in interest, or which would support an action to recover the property from them.

Judicial notice.—This section extends the town site law to Alaska and the court will take notice of it in an action to quiet title brought by one in possession of a lot on public lands in Alaska. Foss v. Dam, (1901) 1 Alaska 346.

SEC. 12. [Purchases for trade or manufacture.] That any citizen of the United States twenty-one years of age, and any association of such citizens, and any corporation incorporated under the laws of the United States, or of any State or Territory of the United States now authorized by law to hold lands in the Territories now or hereafter in possession of and occupying public lands in Alaska for the purpose of trade or manufactures, may purchase not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres to be taken as near as practicable in a square form, of such land at two dollars and fifty cents per acre:

Provided, That in case more than one person, association or corporation shall claim the same tract of land the person, association or corporation having the prior claim by reason of possession and continued occupation shall be entitled to purchase the same; but the entry of no person, association, or corporation shall include improvements made by or in possession of another prior to the passage of this act. [26 Stat. L. 1100.]

This and the following section are in effect superseded by the Act of May 14, 1898, ch. 299, § 10, infra, p. 320.

Prior possession as entitling one to possessory action.—Possession based upon a claim of use for purposes of trade and residence is founded upon sufficient title to maintain a possessory action under the code, either by ejectment or suit to quiet title, as the fact of possession or want of it determines. Foss v. Dam, (1901) 1 Alaska 346.

SEC. 13. [Surveys — making — payment.] That it shall be the duty of any person, association, or corporation entitled to purchase land under this act to make an application to the United States marshal, ex officio surveyor-general of Alaska, for an estimate of the cost of making a survey of the lands occupied by such person, association, or corporation, and the cost of the clerical work necessary to be done in the office of the said United States marshal, ex officio surveyor-general; and on the receipt of such estimate from the United States marshal, ex officio surveyor-general, the said person, association, or corporation shall deposit the amount in a United States depository, as is required by section numbered twenty-four hundred and one, Revised Statutes, relating to deposits for surveys.

That on the receipt by the United States marshal, ex officio surveyor-general, of the said certificates of deposit, he shall employ a competent person to make such survey, under such rules and regulations as may be adopted by the Secretary of the Interior, who shall make his return of his field notes and maps to the office of the said United States marshal, ex officio surveyor-general; and the said United States marshal, ex officio surveyor-general, shall cause the said field notes and plats of such survey to be examined, and, if correct, approve the same, and shall transmit certified copies of such maps and plats to the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

That when the said field notes and plats of said survey shall have been approved by the said Commissioner of the General Land Office, he shall notify such person, association, or corporation, who shall then, within six months after such notice, pay to the said United States marshal, ex officio surveyor-general, for such land, and patent shall issue for the same. [26 Stat. L. 1100.]

See the note to the preceding section 12 of this Act.

As originally enacted the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 8, 23 Stat. L. 26, stated that the marshal provided for by that Act should be ex officio surveyor-general of the district. This provision was stricken out by an Act of July 24, 1897, ch. 14, § 1, 30 Stat. L. 215; section 2 of which Act, given supra, p. 319, provided for the appointment of a surveyor-general.

SEC. 14. [What lands reserved from entry.] That none of the provisions of the last two preceding sections of this act shall be so construed as to warrant the sale of any lands belonging to the United States which shall contain coal or the precious metals, or any town site, or which shall be occupied by the United States for public purposes, or which shall be reserved for such purposes, or to which the natives of Alaska have prior rights by virtue of actual occupation, or which shall be selected by the United States Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries on the island of Kadiak and Afognak for the purpose of establishing fish-culture stations.

And all tracts of land not exceeding six hundred and forty acres in any one tract now occupied as missionary stations in said district of Alaska are hereby excepted from the operation of the last three preceding sections of this act.

No portion of the islands of the Pribylov Group or the Seal Islands of Alaska shall be subject to sale under this act;

And the United States reserves, and there shall be reserved in all patents issued under the provisions of the last two preceding sections the right of the United States to regulate the taking of salmon and to do all things necessary to protect and prevent the destruction of salmon in all the waters of the lands granted frequented by salmon. [26 Stat. L. 1100.]

See the note to section 12 of this Act.

So far as this section refers to the "district" of Alaska, it is superseded by the organization thereof as a territory by the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 387, supra, p. 250.

Effect of reservation by government of fish culture station.—Any rights acquired under sections 12 and 13 of this Act, by settlement upon and survey of public lands in Alaska, is terminated by the proclamation of the President that the land in question is reserved for the purpose of establishing a fish culture station, in accordance with the declaration of this section that the provisions of the last two preceding sections shall not be so construed as to warrant the sale of any lands belonging to the United States which shall be reserved for public purposes or selected for fish culture stations. Russian-American Packing Co. v. U. S., (1905) 199 U. S. 570, 26 S. Ct. 157, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 314.

The value of improvements made on public lands in Alaska by a mere trespasser, occupying the land without a shadow of title, cannot be recovered from the United States upon the selection of the land in question by the government, in accordance with this section, for a fish culture station. Russian-American Packing Co. v. U. S., (1905) 199 U. S. 570, 26 S. Ct. 157, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 314.

SEC. 15. [Annette Islands reserved for natives.] That until otherwise provided by law the body of lands known as Annette Islands, situated in Alexander Archipelago in Southeastern Alaska, on the north side of Dixon's entrance, be, and the same is hereby, set apart as a reservation for the use of the Metlakahtla Indians, and those people known as Metlakahtlans who have recently emigrated from British Columbia to Alaska, and such other Alaskan natives as may join them, to be held and used by them in common, under such rules and regulations, and subject to such restrictions, as may be prescribed from time to time by the Secretary of the Interior. [26 Stat. L. 1101.]

See the note to section 12 of this Act.

An Act To amend section eight of the Act entitled "An Act providing a civil government for Alaska," approved May seventeenth, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, to create the office of surveyor-general for Alaska, and for other purposes.

[Act of July 24, 1897, ch. 14, 30 Stat. L. 215.]

SEC. 2. [Surveyor-general.] That there shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a surveyor-general for the District of Alaska, embracing one surveying district. [30 Stat. L. 215.]

Section 1 of this Act constituted an amendment to the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, § 8, 23 Stat. L. 26, which was superseded by the various subsequent acts providing for the civil government of Alaska.

Section 4 of this Act created two land districts in Alaska. It was superseded by the Act of May 14, 1898, ch. 299, § 12, infra, p. 323.

So much of the text as refers to Alaska as a "district" was superseded by the organization thereof as a territory by the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 387, supra, p. 250.

SEC. 3. [Salary.] That the surveyor-general of Alaska shall receive a salary at the rate of two thousand dollars per annum. [30 Stat. L. 215.]

See the note to section 2 of this Act.

By the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 141, § 1, 38 Stat. L. 1034, there was appropriated $4,000 for the salary of the surveyor-general of Alaska.

SEC. 10. [Purchases for trade or manufacture, etc., reserved lands — adverse claims — procedure.] That any citizen of the United States twenty-one years of age, or any association of such citizens, or any corporation incorporated under the laws of the United States or of any State or Territory now authorized by law to hold lands in the Territories, hereafter in the possession of and occupying public lands in the District of Alaska in good faith for the purposes of trade, manufacture, or other productive industry, may each purchase one claim only not exceeding eighty acres of such land for any one person, association, or corporation, at two dollars and fifty cents per acre, upon submission of proof that said area embraces improvements of the claimant and is needed in the prosecution of such trade, manufacture, or other productive industry, such tract of land not to include mineral or coal lands, and ingress and egress shall be reserved to the public on the waters of all streams, whether navigable or otherwise:

Provided, That no entry shall be allowed under this Act on lands abutting on navigable water of more than eighty rods:

Provided further, That there shall be reserved by the United States a space of eighty rods in width between tracts sold or entered under the provisions of this Act on lands abutting on any navigable stream, inlet, gulf, bay, or seashore, and that the Secretary of the Interior may grant the use of such reserved lands abutting on the water front to any citizen or association of citizens, or to any corporation incorporated under the laws of the United States or under the laws of any State or Territory, for landings, and wharves, with the provision that the public shall have access to and proper use of such wharves, and landings, at reasonable rates of toll to be prescribed by said Secretary, and a roadway sixty feet in width, parallel to the shore line as near as may be practicable, shall be reserved for the use of the public as a highway:

Provided further, That in case more than one person, association, or corporation shall claim the same tract of land, the person, association, or corporation having the prior claim, by reason of actual possession and continued occupation in good faith, shall be entitled to purchase the same, but where several persons are or may be so possessed of parts of the tract applied for the same shall be awarded to them according to their respective interests:

Provided further, That all claims substantially square in form and lawfully initiated, prior to January twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, by survey or otherwise, under sections twelve and thirteen of the Act approved March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-one (Twenty-sixth Statutes at Large, Chapter five hundred and sixty-one), may be perfected and patented upon compliance with the provisions of said Act, but subject to the requirements and provisions of this Act, except as to area, but in no case shall such entry extend along the water front for more than one hundred and sixty rods:

And provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior shall reserve for the use of the natives of Alaska suitable tracts of land along the water front of any stream, inlet, bay, or sea shore for landing places for canoes and other craft used by such natives:

Provided, That the Annette, Pribilof Islands, and the islands leased or occupied for the propagation of foxes be excepted from the operation of this Act.

That all affidavits, testimony, proofs and other papers provided for by this Act and by said Act of March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, or by any departmental or Executive regulation thereunder, by depositions or otherwise, under commission from the register and receiver of the land office, which may have been or may hereafter be taken and sworn to anywhere in the United States, before any court, judge, or other officer authorized by law to administer an oath, shall be admitted in evidence as if taken before the register and receiver of the proper local land office.

And thereafter such proof, together with a certified copy of the field notes and plat of the survey of the claim, shall be filed in the office of the surveyor-general of the District of Alaska, and if such survey and plat shall be approved by him, certified copies thereof, together with the claimant's application to purchase, shall be filed in the United States land office in the land district in which the claim is situated, whereupon, at the expense of the claimant, the register of such land office shall cause notice of such application to be published for at least sixty days in a newspaper of general circulation published nearest the claim within the District of Alaska, and the applicant shall at the time of filing such field notes, plat, and application to purchase in the land office, as aforesaid, cause a copy of such plat, together with the application to purchase, to be posted upon the claim, and such plat and application shall be kept posted in a conspicuous place on such claim continuously for at least sixty days, and during such period of posting and publication or within thirty days thereafter any person, corporation, or association, having or asserting any adverse interest in, or claim to, the tract of land or any part thereof sought to be purchased, may file in the land office where such application is pending, under oath, an adverse claim setting forth the nature and extent thereof, and such adverse claimant shall, within sixty days after the filing of such adverse claim, begin action to quiet title in a court of competent jurisdiction within the District of Alaska, and thereafter no patent shall issue for such claim until the final adjudication of the rights of the parties, and such patent shall then be issued in conformity with the final decree of the court. [30 Stat. L. 413.]

This and the following two sections are from an Act of May 14, 1898, ch. 299, entitled "An Act extending the homestead laws, and providing a right of way for railroads in the District of Alaska, and for other purposes." Section 1 of this Act, as amended by an Act of March 3, 1903, ch. 1002, is given infra, p. 325. Sections 2 to 9 inclusive are given infra, this title, under the subdivision Railroads, Wagon Roads, Aérials and Tramways. By section 26 of an Act of June 6, 1900, infra, p. 300, the

By this provision all persons in peaceable possession are guaranteed the right ultimately to acquire a perfect title. Young v. Goldsteen, (1899) 97 Fed. 303.

The only titles that could be held under this section were those arising by reason of possession. Malony v. Adsit, (1899) 175 U. S. 281, 20 S. Ct. 115, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 163. Littoral rights are the same as in ownership of fee. Lewis v. Johnson, (1896) 76 Fed. 476.

No intention on the part of Congress to permit rights to public lands in Alaska to be initiated by a settlement made after the enactment of this Act can be gathered from the first proviso of this section, especially when considered with the last clause of the section that "nothing contained in this Act shall be construed to put in force in said district the general land laws," and with the provision of section 12, for the appointment of a commission to report the facts to enable Congress to determine what limitations or conditions should be imposed when the land laws should be extended to the district. Russian-American Packing Co. v. U. S., (1905) 199 U. S. 570, 26 S. Ct. 157, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 314.

Commissioners for transfer under treaty of cession were not empowered to decide questions of ownership or title. Kinkead v. U. S., (1893) 150 U. S. 483, 14 S. Ct. 172, 37 U. S. (L. Ed.) 1152.

Foreign Indians have no right to go on lands under this section. (1877) 18 Op. Attv.-Gen. 559.

The general land laws were not applicable to Alaska, by virtue of this section, though the government recognizes and sanctions the actual possession and use of public land in Alaska by any Indian or other person. Martin v. Burford, (1910) 181 Fed. 922.

SEC. 27. [Indians in possession—missionary stations.] The Indians or persons conducting schools or missions in the district shall not be disturbed in the possession of any lands now actually in their use or occupation, and the land, at any station not exceeding six hundred and forty acres, now occupied as missionary stations among the Indian tribes in the section, with the improvements thereon erected by or for such societies, shall be continued in the occupancy of the several religious societies to which the missionary stations respectively belong, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to have such lands surveyed in compact form as nearly as practicable and patents issued for the same to the several societies to which they belong; but nothing contained in this Act shall be construed to put in force in the district the general land laws of the United States. [31 Stat. L. 330.]

This is from the Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 786, making further provisions for the civil government of Alaska. The other sections of this Act are given supra, p. 260.

So far as the text designates Alaska as a "district" it was superseded by the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 387, supra, p. 250, which reorganized the district as a territory.

[SEC. 1.] [Land districts and offices.] * * * That on and after June first, nineteen hundred and two, the number of land offices and land districts in the district of Alaska is hereby reduced to one, the location of which shall be fixed by the President. [32 Stat. L. 20.]

The above provision is from the Urgent Deficiencies Appropriation Act of Feb. 14, 1902, ch. 17.

See the Act of May 14, 1898, ch. 299, § 12, supra, p. 323. Additional land districts were created by the Act of March 2, 1907, ch. 2537, infra, p. 328.

An Act To amend section one of the Act of Congress approved May fourteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, entitled "An Act extending the homestead laws and providing for a right of way for railroads in the district of Alaska."

[Act of March 3, 1903, ch. 1002, 32 Stat. L. 1028.]

[Homestead laws extended to Alaska — allotment — procedure.] That all the provisions of the homestead laws of the United States not in conflict with the provisions of this Act, and all rights incident thereto, are hereby extended to the district of Alaska, subject to such regulations as may be made by the Secretary of the Interior; and no indemnity, deficiency, or lieu land selections pertaining to any land grant outside of the district of Alaska shall be made, and no land scrip or land warrant of any kind whatsoever shall be located within or exercised upon any lands in said district except as now provided by law;

and provided further that no more than one hundred and sixty acres shall be entered in any single body by such scrip, lieu selection, or soldier's additional homestead right;

and provided further that no location of scrip, selection, or right along any navigable or other waters shall be made within the distance of eighty rods of any lands, along such waters, theretofore located by means of any such scrip or otherwise; and provided further that no commutation privileges shall be allowed in excess of one hundred and sixty acres included in any homestead entry under the provisions hereof:

Provided, That no entry shall be allowed extending more than one hundred and sixty rods along the shore of any navigable water, and along such shore a space of at least eighty rods shall be reserved from entry between all such claims; and that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to authorize entries to be made or title to be acquired to the shore of any navigable waters within said district;

and no patent shall issue hereunder until all the requirements of sections twenty-two hundred and ninety-one, twenty-two hundred and ninety-two, and twenty-three hundred and five of the Revised Statutes of the United States have been fully complied with as to residence, improvements, cultivation, and proof except as to commuted lands as herein provided:

And it is further provided, That every person who is qualified under existing laws to make homestead entry of the public lands of the United States who has settled upon or who shall hereafter settle upon any of the public lands of the United States situated in the district of Alaska, whether surveyed or unsurveyed, with the intention of claiming the same under the homestead laws, shall, subject to the provisions and limitations hereof, be entitled to enter three hundred and twenty acres or a less quantity of unappropriated public land in said district of Alaska.

If any of the land so settled upon, or to be settled upon, is unsurveyed, then the land settled upon, or to be settled upon, must be located in a rectangular form, not more than one mile in length, and located by north and south lines run according to the true meridian; that the location so made shall be marked upon the ground by permanent monuments at each of the four corners of the said location, so that the boundaries of the same may be readily and easily traced; that the record of said location shall, within ninety days from the date of settlement, be filed for record in the recording district in which the land is situated. Said record shall contain the name of the settler, the date of the settlement, and such a description of the land settled upon, by reference to some natural object or permanent monument, as will identify the same;

and, if after the expiration of the said period of five years or at such date as the settler may desire to commute the public surveys of the United States have not been extended over the land located, a patent shall nevertheless issue for the land included within the boundaries of said location as thus recorded, upon proof to be submitted to the register and receiver of the proper land office, upon proof that he is a citizen of the United States, and upon the further proof required by section twenty-two hundred and ninety-one of the Revised Statutes of the United States as heretofore and herein amended, and under the procedure in the obtaining of patents to the unsurveyed lands of the United States, as provided for by section ten of the Act hereby amended, and under such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior as hereinbefore provided, without the payment of any purchase price or other charges, except the ordinary office fees and commissions of the register and receiver except one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre on land commuted:

And provided always, That no title shall be obtained hereunder to any of the mineral or coal lands of the district of Alaska:

And it is further provided, That the right of any homestead settler to transfer any portion of the land so settled upon, as provided by section twenty-two hundred and eighty-eight of the Revised Statutes of the United States, shall be restricted and limited within the district of Alaska as follows: For church, cemetery, or school purposes to five acres, and for the right of railroads across such homestead to one hundred feet in width on either side of the center line of said railroad; and all contracts by the settler made before his receipt of patent from the Government, for the conveyance of the land homesteaded by him or her, except as herein provided, shall be held null and void. [32 Stat. L. 1028.]

The Act of May 14, 1898, ch. 299, § 1, mentioned in the title of the foregoing Act was as follows:

[SEC. 1.] That the homestead land laws of the United States and the rights incident thereto, including the right to enter surveyed or unsurveyed lands under provisions of law relating to the acquisition of title through soldiers' additional homestead rights, are hereby extended to the District of Alaska, subject to such regulations as may be made by the Secretary of the Interior; and no indemnity, deficiency, or lieu lands pertaining to any land grant whatsoever originating outside of said District of Alaska shall be located within or taken from lands in said District:

Provided, That no entry shall be allowed extending more than eighty rods along the shore of any navigable water, and along such shore a space of at least eighty rods shall be reserved from entry between all such claims, and that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to authorize entries to be made, or title to be acquired, to the shore of any navigable waters within said District:

And it is further provided, That no homestead shall exceed eighty acres in extent. [30 Stat. L. 409.]

Section 10 of the Act of May 14, 1898, ch. 299, mentioned in the text is given supra, p. 320.

"The intention of the amendment was to increase the quantity of land which might be taken as a homestead in Alaska, to subject unsurveyed lands to homestead settlement and patent, and to require that the boundaries of a homestead claim be plainly marked on the ground. That was substantially all that was accomplished by the amendment. There is no ground for the contention that by virtue of the provision requiring a homestead settler to furnish proof under the procedure for obtaining patents to surveyed lands of the United States as provided for by section 10 of the Act of May 14, 1898 (see p. 320) one who has a mining location in conflict with a homestead claim is required to bring a suit to quiet title before the decision of his adverse claim which is filed and pending in the land office. The amendment makes section 10 of the prior Act applicable to proof of homesteads on unsurveyed lands as well as those on surveyed lands, and with that exception leaves its purport and meaning unchanged. In brief, the law under the amendment is what it was before, so far as it directs that a suit would be brought to quiet title. If a person, association, or corporation in the occupation of land for the purpose of trade, manufacture, or productive industry claims by right of occupation land whether surveyed or unsurveyed which is included in a homestead settlement, he must at the appropriate time bring a suit to determine in a court the questions on which his right of occupation depends. The jurisdiction of the land office to determine contests between locators of mining claims and homestead settlers remains as it was before." Nelson v. Brownell, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1912) 193 Fed. 641.

Homestead entry along shore.—There is nothing in the above section authorizing the reservation of a roadway above high-water mark. Dalton v. Hazelet, (1910) 182 Fed. 561; Alaska Cent. R. Co. v. Dooley, (1910) 4 Alaska 184.

The "shore" of navigable water is the ground lying between ordinary high-water and low-water mark. Dalton v. Hazelet, (1910) 182 Fed. 561.

Rights of riparian owner.—While the owner or locator of lands in Alaska which border upon navigable or tidal waters has, under the general law, the right of access to such waters for the purpose of navigation, he can acquire no right or title in the soil below high-water mark, and he can have therefore no right of possession upon which he can base an action against an intruder whom he charges with interfering with and obstructing him in the erection and use of a structure upon the shore below such high-water mark. He may have, however, a right of action against an intruder who places obstacles on the shore that prevent him from having access to the navigable waters. Columbia Canning Co. v. Hampton, (1908) 161 Fed. 60.

Right of fishery.—An owner or claimant of lands in Alaska which border on navigable waters, having no right to the shore lands, has no exclusive right of fishery in such waters, nor to erect and maintain a fish trap either on the shore between high and low water mark, or in the adjacent deep waters, to the exclusion of others. Columbia Canning Co. v. Hampton, (1908) 161 Fed. 60.

An Act Authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to allot homesteads to the natives of Alaska.

[Act of May 17, 1906, ch. 2469, 34 Stat. L. 197.]

[Homestead allotments to natives.] That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and empowered, in his discretion and under such rules as he may prescribe, to allot not to exceed one hundred and sixty acres of nonmineral land in the district of Alaska to any Indian or Eskimo of full or mixed blood who resides in and is a native of said district, and who is the head of a family, or is twenty-one years of age; and the land so allotted shall be deemed the homestead of the allottee and his heirs in perpetuity, and shall be inalienable and nontaxable until otherwise provided by Congress. Any person qualified for an allotment as aforesaid shall have the preference right to secure by allotment the nonmineral land occupied by him not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres. [34 Stat. L. 197.]

An Act To provide for the creation of additional land districts in the district of Alaska.

[SEC. 1.] [Nome and Fairbanks districts, created.] That there are hereby created two additional land districts, the boundaries of which shall be designated by the President, in the district of Alaska, to be known as the Nome land district and the Fairbanks land district, with the land offices located, respectively, at Nome, Alaska, and Fairbanks, Alaska. [34 Stat. L. 1232.]

For the prior laws relating to land districts, see the Act of May 14, 1898, ch. 299, § 12, supra, p. 323, and the Act of Feb. 14, 1902, ch. 17, § 1, supra, p. 324.

Alaska was organized as a territory by the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 387, supra, p. 250.

SEC. 2. [Registers and receivers — clerks of court and marshals to act.] That the clerks of the district courts of Nome and Fairbanks shall respectively be ex-officio registers of the land offices at Nome and Fairbanks and the marshals of the said courts at Nome and Fairbanks shall be ex-officio receivers of public moneys for the Nome and Fairbanks land districts. Said officers shall perform the several duties of register of the land office and receiver of public moneys for the land districts with all the powers incident to such offices to the same extent as now performed by the register of the land office and the receiver of public moneys at Juneau, Alaska. [34 Stat. L. 1232.]

SEC. 3. [Fees, etc. — surplus — salary.] That the said officers shall, in addition to their present compensation as clerk or marshal as provided by law, receive all the fees and commissions allowed by law for their services as registers of land offices and receivers of public moneys for land districts under the land laws: Provided, That any fees or commissions in excess of one thousand five hundred dollars per annum received by either such officials shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States: Provided, That no other salary than aforesaid shall be paid such registers and receivers. [34 Stat. L. 1232.]

SEC. 4. [Surveys — approval.] That the surveyor-general of the district of Alaska, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, shall furnish the receivers of said land offices a sufficient quantity of numbers to be used in the different classes of official surveys that may be made in said Nome and Fairbanks land districts to meet the requirements thereof, and upon application by any person desiring to have an official survey made the receivers shall furnish a number or numbers for such survey or surveys, together with an order directing a qualified deputy surveyor to make the same, and such application, order, and the fee required to be paid to the surveyor-general in the district of Alaska shall be transmitted to the surveyor-general: Provided, That all surveys thus made shall be approved by the surveyor-general as at present. [34 Stat. L. 1232.]

SEC. 5. [Effect.] That this Act shall take effect and be in force from and after July first, nineteen hundred and seven. [34 Stat. L. 1232.]

An Act To reserve lands to the Territory of Alaska for educational uses, and for other purposes.

[Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 181, 38 Stat. L. 1214.]

[SEC. 1.] [Public lands — reservation for educational uses — leases — mineral lands.] That when the public lands of the Territory of Alaska are surveyed, under direction of the Government of the United States, sections numbered sixteen and thirty-six in each township in said Territory shall be, and the same are hereby, reserved from sale or settlement for the support of common schools in the Territory of Alaska; and section thirty-three in each township in the Tanana Valley between parallels sixty-four and sixty-five north latitude and between the one hundred and forty-fifth and the one hundred and fifty-second degrees of west longitude (meridian of Greenwich) shall be, and the same is hereby, reserved, from sale or settlement for the support of a Territorial agricultural college and school of mines when established by the Legislature of Alaska upon the tract granted in section two of this Act: Provided, That where settlement with a view to homestead entry has been made upon any part of the sections reserved hereby before the survey thereof in the field, or where the same may have been sold or otherwise appropriated by or under the authority of any Act of Congress, or are wanting or fractional in quantity, other lands may be designated and reserved in lieu thereof in the manner provided by the Act of Congress of February twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and ninety-one (Twenty-sixth Statutes, page seven hundred and ninety-one): Provided further, That the Territory may, by general law, provide for leasing said land in area not to exceed one section to any one person, association, or corporation for not longer than ten years at any one time: And provided further, That if any of said sections, or any part thereof, shall be of known mineral character at the date of acceptance of survey thereof, the reservation herein made shall not be effective or applicable, but the entire proceeds or income derived by the United States from such sections sixteen and thirty-six and such section thirty-three in each township in the Tanana Valley area hereinbefore described, and the minerals therein, together with the entire proceeds or income derived from said reserved lands, are hereby appropriated and set apart as separate and permanent funds in the Territorial treasury, to be invested and the income from which shall be expended only for the exclusive use and benefit of the public schools of Alaska or of the agricultural college and school of mines, respectively, in such manner as the legislature of Alaska may by law direct. [38 Stat. L. 1214.]

SEC. 2. [Lands in Fairbanks section reserved for same uses — vested rights of persons not disturbed.] That section numbered six, in township numbered one south of the Fairbanks base line and range numbered one west of the Fairbanks meridian; section numbered thirty-one, in township numbered one north of the Fairbanks base line and range numbered one west of the Fairbanks meridian; section numbered one, in township numbered one south of the Fairbanks base line and range numbered two west of the Fairbanks meridian; and section numbered thirty-six, in township numbered one north of the Fairbanks base line and range numbered two west of the Fairbanks meridian, be, and the same are hereby, granted to the Territory of Alaska, but with the express condition that they shall be forever reserved and dedicated to use as a site for an agricultural college and school of mines: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall be held to interfere with or destroy any legal claim of any person or corporation to any part of said lands under the homestead or other law for the disposal of the public lands acquired prior to the approval of this Act: Provided further, That so much of the said land as is now used by the Government of the United States as an agricultural experiment station may continue to be used for such purpose until abandoned for that use by an order of the President of the United States or by Act of Congress. [38 Stat. L. 1215.]

V. RAILROADS, WAGON ROADS, AÉRIALS, AND TRAMWAYS.

SEC. 2. [Right of way to railroads — mineral rights — title to tide lands — posting of charges.] That the right of way through the lands of the United States in the District of Alaska is hereby granted to any railroad company, duly organized under the laws of any State or Territory or by the Congress of the United States, which may hereafter file for record with the Secretary of the Interior a copy of its articles of incorporation, and due proofs of its organization under the same, to the extent of one hundred feet on each side of the center line of said road;

also the right to take from the lands of the United States adjacent to the line of said road, material, earth, stone, and timber necessary for the construction of said railroad;

also the right to take for railroad uses, subject to the reservation of all minerals and coal therein, public lands adjacent to said right of way for station buildings, depots, machine shops, side tracks, turn-outs, water stations, and terminals, and other legitimate railroad purposes, not to exceed in amount twenty acres for each station, to the extent of one station for each ten miles of its road, excepting at terminals and junction points, which may include additional forty acres, to be limited on navigable waters to eighty rods on the shore line, and with the right to use such additional ground as may in the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior be necessary where there are heavy cuts or fills:

Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to give to such railroad company, its lessees, grantees, or assigns the ownership or use of minerals, including coal, within the limits of its right of way, or of the lands hereby granted:

Provided further, That all mining operations prosecuted or undertaken within the limits of such right of way or of the lands hereby granted shall, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, be so conducted as not to injure or interfere with the property or operations of the road over its said lands or right of way.

And when such railway shall connect with any navigable stream or tide water such company shall have power to construct and maintain necessary piers and wharves for connection with water transportation, subject to the supervision of the Secretary of the Treasury:

Provided, That nothing in this Act contained shall be construed as impairing in any degree the title of any State that may hereafter be erected out of said District, or any part thereof, to tide lands and beds of any of its navigable waters, or the right of such State to regulate the use thereof, nor the right of the United States to resume possession of such lands, it being declared that all such rights shall continue to be held by the United States in trust for the people of any State or States which may hereafter be erected out of said District.

The term "navigable waters," as herein used, shall be held to include all tidal waters up to the line of ordinary high tide and all nontidal waters navigable in fact up to the line of ordinary high-water mark.

That all charges for the transportation of freight and passengers on railroads in the District of Alaska shall be printed and posted as required by section six of an Act to regulate commerce as amended on March second, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine, and such rates shall be subject to revision and modification by the Secretary of the Interior. [30 Stat. L. 409.]

This section and the following sections 3 to 9 inclusive are from an Act of May 14, 1898, ch. 299, entitled "An Act extending the homestead laws, and providing for the right of way for railroads in the District of Alaska, and for other purposes." The first section of this Act, as amended by the Act of March 3, 1903, ch. 1002, is given supra, p. 325. Sections 10, 11, and 12, relating to public lands, are given supra, this title, in the subdivision Public Lands. Section 13, relating to mining rights, is given supra, this title, under the subdivision Mineral Lands, Mines and Mining. Section 14, relating to bonded warehouses, is given supra, this title, under the subdivision Civil Government.

Prior claim as preventing railroad from getting right of way.—Where, prior to a survey, certain oil claims had been located on the public land in controversy in Alaska, such claims, if valid, withdrew the land from entry, so that a railroad company could not obtain a right of way over the same under this section. Alaska Pac. R., etc., Co. v. Copper River, etc., R. Co., (1908) 160 Fed. 862.

Easement over tidelands.—Where a railroad company is empowered under this Act to build whatever piers, docks and wharves are necessary to connect the railroad with the navigable waters of Alaska, there is granted to the railroad corporation such an easement over tidelands as is necessary to enable such corporation to connect its railroad with water transportation facilities. Dalton v. Katalla Co., (1911) 4 Alaska 410.

SEC. 3. [Restrictions on right to pass through canyon — regulation of charges.] That any railroad company whose right of way, or whose track or roadbed upon such right of way, passes through any canyon, pass, or defile shall not prevent any other railroad company from the use and occupancy of said canyon, pass, or defile for the purposes of its road, in common with the road first located, or the crossing of other railroads at grade; and the location of such right of way through any canyon, pass, or defile shall not cause the disuse of any tramway, wagon road, or other public highway now located therein, nor prevent the location through the same of any such tramway, wagon road, or highway where such tramway, wagon road, or highway may be necessary for the public accommodation; and where any change in the location of such tramway, wagon road, or highway is necessary to permit the passage of such railroad through any canyon, pass, or defile, said railroad company shall, before entering upon the ground occupied by such tramway, wagon road, or highway, cause the same to be reconstructed at its own expense in the most favorable location, and in as perfect a manner as the original road or tramway:

Provided, That such expenses shall be equitably divided between any number of railroad companies occupying and using the same canyon, pass, or defile, and that where the space is limited the United States district court shall require the road first constructed to allow any other railroad or tramway to pass over its track or tracks through such canyon, pass, or defile on such equitable basis as the said court may prescribe; and all shippers shall be entitled to equal accommodations as to the movement of their freight and without discrimination in favor of any person or corporation:

Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed as depriving Congress of the right to regulate the charges for freight, passengers, and wharfage. [30 Stat. L. 410.]

SEC. 4. [Condemnation of right of way — preliminary survey.] That where any company, the right of way to which is hereby granted, shall in the course of construction find it necessary to pass over private lands or possessory claims on lands of the United States, condemnation of a right of way across the same may be made in accordance with section three of the Act entitled "An Act to amend an Act entitled 'An Act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes, approved July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two,'" approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four:

Provided further, That any such company, by filing with the Secretary of the Interior a preliminary actual survey and plat of its proposed route, shall have the right at any time within one year thereafter, to file the map and profile of definite location provided for in this Act, and such preliminary survey and plat shall, during the said period of one year from the time of filing the same, have the effect to render all the lands on which said preliminary survey and plat shall pass subject to such right of way. [30 Stat. L. 410.]

Prerequisites to acquisition of right of way.—A railroad acquires no right of way until the preliminary survey and plat shall have been named and probably filed. Such preliminary survey and plat reserves the rights of the company for one year thereafter and protects the company during the year within which it has to make its definite location only in so far as the right of way is fixed by the preliminary survey and plat. Steele v. Tanana Mines R. Co., (1905) 2 Alaska 451.

SEC. 5. [Filing maps — effect of failure to file.] That any company desiring to secure the benefits of this Act shall, within twelve months after filing the preliminary map of location of its road as hereinbefore prescribed, whether upon surveyed or unsurveyed lands, file with the register of the land office for the district where such land is located a map and profile of at least a twenty-mile section of its road or a profile of its entire road if less than twenty miles, as definitely fixed; and shall thereafter each year definitely locate and file a map of such location as aforesaid of not less than twenty miles additional of its line of road until the entire road has been thus definitely located, and upon approval thereof by the Secretary of the Interior the same shall be noted upon the records of said office, and thereafter all such lands over which such right of way shall pass shall be disposed of subject to such right of way:

Provided, That if any section of said road shall not be completed within one year after the definite location of said section so approved, or if the map of definite location be not filed within one year as herein required, or if the entire road shall not be completed within four years from the filing of the map of definite location, the rights herein granted shall be forfeited as to any such uncompleted section of said road, and thereupon shall revert to the United States without further action or declaration, the notation of such uncompleted section upon the records of the land office shall be canceled, and the reservations of such lands for the purposes of said right of way, stations, and terminals shall cease and become null and void without further action. [30 Stat. L. 410.]

Upon making and filing the definite map of location, the right of way fixed therein excludes any further disposition of the land except subject to that right of way. Steele v. Tanana Mines R. Co., (1905) 2 Alaska 451.

Validity of mortgages.—In Washington Trust Co. v. Dunaway, (1909) 169 Fed. 37, it appeared that the Council City & Solomon River Railroad Company, under its then corporate name, filed its preliminary map of location under this Act in 1903, and afterward commenced the actual construction of its road. In 1905 it executed a mortgage on all of its property then owned or to be thereafter acquired to secure bonds to be used for construction purposes, which mortgage was recorded as required by the Act. It had not at that time complied with the provision requiring the filing of map and profile of definite survey, but the time for doing so and for completion of its road was afterward extended by special Act of Congress, with which it complied. It was held that having in view the purpose of the legislation to encourage the building of roads, the mortgage was within the scope of its provisions and constituted a valid lien on the company's property.

SEC. 6. [Wagon roads — wire rope, aerial, or other tramways — map of location — tolls — priorities — mortgages — liens.] That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to issue a permit, by instrument in writing, in conformity with and subject to the restrictions herein contained, unto any responsible person, company, or corporation, for a right of way over the public domain in said District, not to exceed one hundred feet in width, and ground for station and other necessary purposes, not to exceed five acres for each station for each five miles of road, to construct wagon roads and wire rope, aerial, or other tramways, and the privilege of taking all necessary material from the public domain in said District for the construction of such wagon roads or tramways, together with the right, subject to supervision and at rates to be approved by said Secretary, to levy and collect toll or freight and passenger charges on passengers, animals, freight, or vehicles passing over the same for a period not exceeding twenty years, and said Secretary is also authorized to sell to the owner or owners of any such wagon road or tramway, upon the completion thereof, not to exceed twenty acres of public land at each terminus at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, such lands when located at or near tide water not to extend more than forty rods in width along the shore line and the title thereto to be upon such expressed conditions as in his judgment may be necessary to protect the public interest, and all minerals, including coal, in such right of way or station grounds shall be reserved to the United States:

Provided, That such lands may be located concurrently with the line of such road or tramway, and the plat or preliminary survey and the map of definite location shall be filed as in the case of railroads and subject to the same conditions and limitations:

Provided further, That such rights of way and privileges shall only be enjoyed by or granted to citizens of the United States or companies or corporations organized under the laws of a State or Territory; and such rights and privileges shall be held subject to the right of Congress to alter, amend, repeal, or grant equal rights to others on contiguous or parallel routes.

And no right to construct a wagon road on which toll may be collected shall be granted unless it shall first be made to appear to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Interior that the public convenience requires the construction of such proposed road, and that the expense of making the same available and convenient for public travel will not be less on an average than five hundred dollars per mile:

Provided, That if the proposed line of road in any case shall be located over any road or trail in common use for public travel, the Secretary of the Interior shall decline to grant such right of way, if, in his opinion, the interests of the public would be injuriously affected thereby.

Nor shall any right to collect toll upon any wagon road in said District be granted or inure to any person, corporation, or company until it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of said Secretary that at least an average of five hundred dollars per mile has been actually expended in constructing such road; and all persons are prohibited from collecting or attempting to collect toll over any wagon road in said District, unless such person or the company or person for whom he acts shall at the time and place the collection is made or attempted to be made possess written authority, signed by the Secretary of the Interior, authorizing the collection and specifying the rates of toll:

Provided, That accurate printed copies of said written authority from the Secretary of the Interior, including toll, freight, and passenger charges thereby approved, shall be kept constantly and conspicuously posted at each station where toll is demanded or collected. And any person, corporation, or company collecting or attempting to collect toll without such written authority from the Secretary of the Interior, or failing to keep the same posted as herein required, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined for each offense not less than fifty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and in default of payment of such fine and costs of prosecution shall be imprisoned in jail not exceeding ninety days, or until such fine and costs of prosecution shall have been paid.

That any person, corporation, or company qualified to construct a wagon road or tramway under the provisions of this Act that may heretofore have constructed not less than one mile of road, at a cost of not less than five hundred dollars per mile, or one-half mile of tramway at a cost of not less than five hundred dollars; shall have the prior right, to apply for such right of way and for lands at stations and terminals and to obtain the same pursuant to the provisions of this Act over and along the line hitherto constructed or actually being improved by the applicant, including wharves connected therewith. That if any party to whom license has been granted to construct such wagon road or tramway shall, for the period of one year, fail, neglect, or refuse to complete the same, the rights herein granted shall be forfeited as to any such uncompleted section of said wagon road or tramway, and thereupon shall revert to the United States without further action or declaration, the notation of such uncompleted section upon the records of the land office shall be canceled, and the reservations of such lands for the purposes of said right of way shall cease and become null and void without further action.

And if such road or tramway shall not be kept in good condition for use, the Secretary of the Interior may prohibit the collection of toll thereon pending the making of necessary repairs.

That all mortgages executed by any company acquiring a right of way under this Act, upon any portion of its road that may be constructed in said District of Alaska, shall be recorded with the Secretary of the Interior, and the record thereof shall be notice of their execution, and shall be a lien upon all the rights and property of said company as therein expressed, and such mortgage shall also be recorded in the office of the secretary of the District of Alaska and in the office of the secretary of the State or Territory wherein such company is organized:

Provided, That all lawful claims of laborers, contractors, subcontractors, or material men, for labor performed or material furnished in the construction of the railroad, tramway, or wagon road shall be a first lien thereon and take precedence of any mortgage or other lien. [30 Stat. L. 411.]

Record of mortgage.—The provision in this section regarding the recording of mortgages on railroads contemplates a mortgage on the road as an entirety, including right of way, roadbed, track, rolling stock, and appurtenant property, and the general provisions of the Alaska Code of June 6, 1900, §§ 314, 315, 31 Stat. L.

343, requiring chattel mortgages to be recorded in the precinct where the mortgagor resides and where the property is, and to be renewed each year, do not apply to such a railroad mortgage nor repeal the special provisions for its recording. Washington Trust Co. v. Dunaway, (1909) 169 Fed. 37.

SEC. 7. [Act not applicable to lands in reservation, etc.] That this act shall not apply to any lands within the limits of any military, park, Indian, or other reservation unless such right of way shall be provided for by Act of Congress. [30 Stat. L. 412.]

SEC. 8. [Right to repeal — assignment of right of way.] That Congress hereby reserves the right at any time to alter, amend, or repeal this Act or any part thereof; and the right of way herein and hereby authorized shall not be assigned or transferred in any form whatever prior to the construction and completion of at least one-fourth of the proposed mileage of such railroad, wagon road, or tramway, as indicated by the map of definite location, except by mortgages or other liens that may be given or secured thereon to aid in the construction thereof:

Provided, That where within ninety days after the approval of this Act, proof is made to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Interior that actual surveys, evidenced by designated monuments, were made, and the line of a railroad, wagon road or tramway located thereby, or that actual construction was commenced on the line of any railroad, wagon road or tramway, prior to January twenty-first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, the rights to inure hereunder shall, if the terms of this Act are complied with as to such railroad, wagon road or tramway, relate back to the date when such survey or construction was commenced; and in all conflicts relative to the right of way or other privilege of this Act the person, company or corporation having been first in time in actual survey or construction, as the case may be, shall be deemed first in right. [30 Stat. L. 412.]

SEC. 9. [Requisites of map.] That the map and profile of definite location of such railroad, wagon road, or tramway, to be filed as hereinbefore provided, shall, when the line passes over surveyed lands, indicate the location of the road by reference to section or other established survey corners, and where such line passes over unsurveyed lands the location thereon shall be indicated by courses and distances and by references to natural objects and permanent monuments in such manner that the location of the road may be readily determined by reference to descriptions given in connection with said profile map. [30 Stat. L. 413.]

An Act To authorize the President of the United States to locate, construct, and operate railroads in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Railroads — construction and operation by government — leases — telegraphs and telephones — disposal of public domain.] * * * That the President of the United States is hereby empowered, authorized, and directed to adopt and use a name by which to designate the railroad or railroads and properties to be located, owned, acquired, or operated under the authority of this Act; to employ such officers, agents, or agencies, in his discretion, as may be necessary to enable him to carry out the purposes of this Act; to authorize and require such officers, agents, or agencies to perform any or all of the duties imposed upon him by the terms of this Act; to detail and require any officer or officers in the Engineer Corps in the Army or Navy to perform service under this Act; to fix the compensation of all officers, agents, or employees appointed or designated by him; to designate and cause to be located a route or routes for a line or lines of railroad in the Territory of Alaska not to exceed in the aggregate one thousand miles, to be so located as to connect one or more of the open Pacific Ocean harbors on the southern coast of Alaska with the navigable waters in the interior of Alaska, and with a coal field or fields so as best to aid in the development of the agricultural and mineral or other resources of Alaska, and the settlement of the public lands therein, and so as to provide transportation of coal for the Army and Navy, transportation of troops, arms, munitions of war, the mails, and for other governmental and public uses, and for the transportation of passengers and property; to construct and build a railroad or railroads along such route or routes as he may so designate and locate, with the necessary branch lines, feeders, sidings, switches, and spurs; to purchase or otherwise acquire all real and personal property necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act; to exercise the power of eminent domain in acquiring property for such use, which use is hereby declared to be a public use, by condemnation in the courts of Alaska in accordance with the laws now or hereafter in force there; to acquire rights of way, terminal grounds, and all other rights; to purchase or otherwise acquire all necessary equipment for the construction and operation of such railroad or railroads; to build or otherwise acquire docks, wharves, terminal facilities, and all structures needed for the equipment and operation of such railroad or railroads; to fix, change, or modify rates for the transportation of passengers and property, which rates shall be equal and uniform, but no free transportation or passes shall be permitted except that the provisions of the interstate commerce laws relating to the transportation of employees and their families shall be in force as to the lines constructed under this Act; to receive compensation for the transportation of passengers and property, and to perform generally all the usual duties of a common carrier by railroad; to make and establish rules and regulations for the control and operation of said railroad or railroads; in his discretion, to lease the said railroad or railroads, or any portion thereof, including telegraph and telephone lines, after completion under such terms as he may deem proper, but no lease shall be for a longer period than twenty years, or in the event of failure to lease, to operate the same until the further action of Congress: Provided, That if said railroad or railroads, including telegraph and telephone lines, are leased under the authority herein given, then and in that event they shall be operated under the jurisdiction and control of the provisions of the interstate commerce laws; to purchase, condemn, or otherwise acquire upon such terms as he may deem proper any other line or lines of railroad in Alaska which may be necessary to complete the construction of the line or lines of railroad designated or located by him: Provided, That the price to be paid in case of purchase shall in no case exceed the actual physical value of the railroad; to make contracts or agreements with any railroad or steamship company or vessel owner for joint transportation of passengers or property over the road or roads herein provided for, and such railroad or steamship line or by such vessel, and to make such other contracts as may be necessary to carry out any of the purposes of this Act; to utilize in carrying on the work herein provided for any and all machinery, equipment, instruments, material, and other property of any sort whatsoever used or acquired in connection with the construction of the Panama Canal, so far and as rapidly as the same is no longer needed at Panama, and the Isthmian Canal Commission is hereby authorized to deliver said property to such officers or persons as the President may designate, and to take credit therefor at such percentage of its original cost as the President may approve, but this amount shall not be charged against the fund provided for in this Act.

The authority herein granted shall include the power to construct, maintain, and operate telegraph and telephone lines so far as they may be necessary or convenient in the construction and operation of the railroad or railroads as herein authorized and they shall perform generally all the usual duties of telegraph and telephone lines for hire.

That it is the intent and purpose of Congress through this Act to authorize and empower the President of the United States, and he is hereby fully authorized and empowered, through such officers, agents, or agencies as he may appoint or employ, to do all necessary acts and things in addition to those specially authorized in this Act to enable him to accomplish the purposes and objects of this Act.

The President is hereby authorized to withdraw, locate, and dispose of, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, such area or areas of the public domain along the line or lines of such proposed railroad or railroads for town-site purposes as he may from time to time designate.

Terminal and station grounds and rights of way through the lands of the United States in the Territory of Alaska are hereby granted for the construction of railroads, telegraph and telephone lines authorized by this Act, and in all patents for lands hereafter taken up, entered or located in the Territory of Alaska there shall be expressed that there is reserved to the United States a right of way for the construction of railroads, telegraph and telephone lines to the extent of one hundred feet on either side of the center line of any such road and twenty-five feet on either side of the center line of any such telegraph or telephone lines, and the President may, in such manner as he deems advisable, make reservation of such lands as are or may be useful for furnishing materials for construction and for stations, terminals, docks, and for such other purposes in connection with the construction and operation of such railroad lines as he may deem necessary and desirable. [38 Stat. L. 305.]

This is known as the "Alaska Railroad Act."

SEC. 2. [Amount of expenditures.] That the cost of the work authorized by this Act shall not exceed $35,000,000, and in executing the authority granted by this Act the President shall not expend nor obligate the United States to expend more than the said sum; and there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,000,000 to be used for carrying out the provisions of this Act, to continue available until expended. [38 Stat. L. 307.]

SEC. 3. [Disposition of moneys derived from sales, etc., of public property — earnings of railroads, telegraphs and telephones.] That all moneys derived from the lease, sale, or disposal of any of the public lands, including townsites, in Alaska, or the coal or mineral therein contained, or the timber thereon, and the earnings of said railroad or railroads, together with the earnings of the telegraph and telephone lines constructed under this Act, above maintenance charges and operating expenses, shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States as other miscellaneous receipts are paid, and a separate account thereof shall be kept and annually reported to Congress. [38 Stat. L. 307.]

SEC. 4. [Reports to President — transmission to Congress.] That the officers, agents, or agencies placed in charge of the work by the President shall make to the President annually, and at such other periods as may be required by the President or by either House of Congress, full and complete reports of all their acts and doings and of all moneys received and expended in the construction of said work and in the operation of said work or works and in the performance of their duties in connection therewith. The annual reports herein provided for shall be by the President transmitted to Congress. [38 Stat. L. 307.]

An Act To levy and collect an income tax on railroads in Alaska, and for other purposes.

[Railroads—tax on gross annual income—repeal of license tax.]

That in addition to the normal income tax of one per centum on net income there shall be levied and collected one per centum on the gross annual income of all railroad corporations doing business in Alaska, on business done in Alaska, which shall be computed and collected in the manner provided in the Act of Congress, approved October third, nineteen hundred and thirteen, entitled "An Act to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," the proceeds of which tax when collected shall be paid to the treasurer of Alaska and be applicable to general Territorial purposes. So much of the provisions of the Act of Congress approved March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, entitled "An Act to define and punish crimes in the District of Alaska and to provide a code of criminal procedure for said district," or Acts amendatory thereof as impose a license tax of $100 per mile per annum on railroads operated in Alaska is hereby repealed, and all penalties for nonpayment thereof are hereby remitted. [38 Stat. L. 517.]

For the provisions of the Act of Oct. 3, 1913, ch. 16, mentioned in the text, see the title INTERNAL REVENUE.

VI. SEALS AND OTHER FUR-BEARING ANIMALS.

Sec. 1956. [Killing of fur-bearing animals prohibited.] No person shall kill any otter, mink, marten, sable, or fur seal, or other fur-bearing animal, within the limits of Alaska Territory or in the waters thereof; and every person guilty thereof shall, for each offense, be fined not less than two hundred nor more than one thousand dollars or imprisoned not more than six months, or both; and all vessels, their tackle, apparel, furniture, and cargo found engaged in violation of this section shall be forfeited; but the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall have power to authorize the killing of any such mink, marten, sable, fur seal, or other fur-bearing animal under such regulations as he may prescribe; and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to prevent the killing of any fur seal except as authorized by law and to provide for the execution of the provisions of this section until it is otherwise provided by law. [R. S.]

This section was amended to read as above given by an Act of April 21, 1910, ch. 183, § 4, 36 Stat. L. 327. As originally enacted the section was as follows:

"No person shall kill any otter, mink, marten, sable, or fur-seal, or other fur-bearing animal within the limits of Alaska Territory, or in the waters thereof; and every person guilty thereof shall, for each offense, be fined not less than two hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than six months, or both; and all vessels, their tackle, apparel, furniture and cargo, found engaged in violation of this section shall be forfeited; but the Secretary of the Treasury shall have power to authorize the killing of any such mink, marten, sable, or other fur-bearing animal, except fur-seals, under such regulation as he may prescribe; and it shall be the duty of the Secretary to prevent the killing of any fur-seal, and to provide for the execution of the provisions of this section until it is otherwise provided by law; nor shall he grant any special privileges under this section." Act of July 27, 1868, ch. 273, 15 Stat. L. 241.

As here noted, this section was re-enacted in the Alaska Penal Laws as section 173, ch. 12. By said Act of April 21, 1910, ch. 183, § 4, both this section and said section 173 were amended to read as given in the text.

By the Act of March 2, 1889, ch. 415, § 3, 25 Stat. L. 1009, this section was further amended by being extended to include the dominion of the United States in the waters of Bering Sea, and the President was authorized to proclaim a warning against violating the provisions of said section. This Act was superseded by the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 373, infra, p. 345.

The words "and Labor," wherever they occur in this and the following sections, were superseded by the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, 37 Stat. L. 736, creating a Department of Labor and designating the Secretary of Commerce and Labor as the Secretary of Commerce.

Killing of fur seals unlawful.—The killing of fur seals anywhere within the boundaries defined by the treaty of March 30, 1867, whereby Alaska was ceded to the United States, is unlawful; and "vessels found within said boundaries, engaged in that business, are subject to seizure and condemnation as forfeited to the United States." The James G. Swan, (1892) 50 Fed. 108.

Courts do not discuss political questions.—A vessel was seized by a United States vessel acting under orders from the government, within the entrance of Cook's Inlet, as determined by a line drawn from Cape Douglas to Point Bede, for contravening the above section. It was held that the presumption is that such orders "were given in the assertion on the part of this government of territorial jurisdiction over these waters;" and "it is not the province of courts to participate in the discussion of the questions arising out of this claim of jurisdiction or dominion, for they are of a political nature and not judicial." The Kodiak, (1892) 53 Fed. 126. To same effect see The James G. Swan, (1892) 50 Fed. 108; and see In re Cooper, (1892) 143 U. S. 472, 12 S. Ct. 453, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 232.

In The Alexander, (1894) 60 Fed. 914, the vessel seized was held, upon the evidence, to have been within Alaskan waters and liable to forfeiture under the above section.

Under the arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain, it was decided that the United States does not possess exclusive jurisdiction in Bering Sea waters beyond the regularly recognized three-mile limit; nor does it have, outside of the three-mile limit, any right of property in, or right of protection over, the fur seals which frequent American islands. It follows therefrom that the words "in the waters thereof," as used in the above section, and the words "dominion of the United States in the waters of Bering Sea," in the amendment thereto, must be construed to mean the waters within three miles from the shores of Alaska. The La Ninfa, (C. C. A. 1896) 75 Fed. 513.

A vessel which is not used or employed in the actual killing of fur seal is not violating this section; the fact that the masters or owners intend and are preparing so to employ her, not sufficing to constitute the offense, provided, from whatever cause, no seals were killed. The Ocean Spray, (1876) 4 Sawy. 105, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,412.

Killing by natives.—In The Kodiak, (1892) 53 Fed. 126, a fur company was held not to have contravened the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury prohibiting the killing of seals by all others than natives, by allowing the natives who did the killing to live on its vessel, furnishing such natives with an outfit, and buying the skins of them. And see generally as to the privileges of Indian natives, The James G. Swan, (1892) 50 Fed. 108.

Forfeiture of vessel equipped for hunting sea otter.—See The Alexander, (1894) 60 Fed. 914.

The District Court of Alaska has admiralty jurisdiction over the forfeiture of vessels for violation of this section. In re Cooper, (1892) 143 U. S. 472, 12 S. Ct. 453, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 232.

Liability of sureties upon bond given for release of vessel seized, see U. S. v. Moseley, (1881) 8 Fed. 88.

Sec. 1957. [What courts have jurisdiction of offenses.] Until otherwise provided by law, all violations of this chapter, and of the several laws hereby extended to the Territory of Alaska and the waters thereof, committed within the limits of the same, shall be prosecuted in any district court of the United States in California or Oregon, or in the district courts of Washington; and the collector and deputy collectors appointed for Alaska Territory, and any person authorized in writing by either of them.

or by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall have power to arrest persons and seize vessels and merchandise liable to fines, penalties, or forfeitures under this and the other laws extended over the Territory, and to keep and deliver the same to the marshal of some one of such courts; and such courts shall have original jurisdiction, and may take cognizance of all cases arising under this act and the several laws hereby extended over the Territory, and shall proceed therein in the same manner and with the like effect as if such cases had arisen within the district or Territory where the proceedings are brought. [R. S.]

Act of July 27, 1868, ch. 273, 15 Stat. L. 241.

"This chapter," as used in the foregoing text, refers to chapter 3 of title XXIII of the Revised Statutes, the provisions of which have nearly all been repealed or superseded.

Sec. 1958. [Remission of fines, etc.] In all cases of fine, penalty, or forfeiture, embraced in the act approved March 3, 1797, ch. 13, or mentioned in any act in addition to or amendatory of such act, that have occurred or may occur in the collection district of Alaska, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized, if in his opinion the fine, penalty, or forfeiture was incurred without willful negligence or intention of fraud, to ascertain the facts in such manner and under such regulations as he may deem proper without regard to the provisions of the act above referred to, and upon the facts so to be ascertained, he may exercise all the power of remission conferred upon him by that act, as fully as he might have done had such facts been ascertained under and according to the provisions of that act. [R. S.]

Act of July 27, 1868, ch. 273, 15 Stat. L. 242. See the notes to the preceding section.

Sec. 1959. [Pribilof Islands made a special reservation—landing, etc., on, unlawful.] The Pribilof Islands, including the islands of Saint Paul and Saint George, Walrus and Otter Islands, and Sea Lion Rock, in Alaska, are declared a special reservation for government purposes; and until otherwise provided by law it shall be unlawful for any person to land or remain on any of those islands, except through stress of weather or like unavoidable cause or by the authority of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor; and any person found on any of those islands contrary to the provisions hereof shall be summarily removed and shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or by both fine and imprisonment; and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to carry this section into effect. [R. S.]

This section was amended to read as above by section 5 of an Act of April 21, 1910, ch. 183, 36 Stat. L. 327, entitled "An Act to protect the seal fisheries of Alaska, and for other purposes." And the same section amended section 176 of the Alaska Penal Code (30 Stat. L. 1280). The original section was as follows:

"The Islands of Saint Paul and Saint George, in Alaska, are declared a special reservation for Government purposes; and until otherwise provided by law it shall be unlawful for any person to land or remain on either of those islands, except by the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury; and any person found on either of those islands contrary to the provisions hereof shall be summarily removed; and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to carry this section into effect." Res. of March 3, 1869, No. 22, 15 Stat. L. 348.

As to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, see the note to R. S. sec. 1956, supra, p. 340.

Sec. 1960. [Restrictions on killing seals on Pribilof Islands.] It shall be unlawful to kill any fur seal upon the Pribilof Islands, or in the waters adjacent thereto, except under the authority of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, and it shall be unlawful to kill such seals by the use of firearms or by other means tending to drive the seals away from those islands; but the natives of the islands shall have the privilege of killing such young seals as may be necessary for their own food and clothing, and also such old seals as may be required for their own clothing and for the manufacture of boats for their own use; and the killing in such cases shall be limited and controlled by such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. [R. S.]

This section, and with it section 177 of the Alaska Penal Laws, were amended to read as above given by the Act of April 21, 1910, ch. 183, § 6, 36 Stat. L. 327. The original section was as follows:

"It shall be unlawful to kill any fur-seal upon the islands of Saint Paul and Saint George, or in the waters adjacent thereto, except during the months of June, July, September, and October in each year; and it shall be unlawful to kill such seals at any time by the use of firearms, or by other means tending to drive the seals away from those islands; but the natives of the islands shall have the privilege of killing such young seals as may be necessary for their own food and clothing during other months, and also such old seals as may be required for their own clothing, and for the manufacture of boats for their own use; and the killing in such cases shall be limited and controlled by such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury." Act of July 1, 1870, ch. 189, 16 Stat. L. 180.

As to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, see the note to R. S. sec. 1956, supra, p. 340.

Sec. 1961. [Killing of certain seal prohibited.] It shall be unlawful to kill any female seal or any seal less than one year old at any season of the year, except as above provided; and it shall also be unlawful to kill any seal in the waters adjacent to the Pribilof Islands, or on the beaches, cliffs, or rocks where they haul up from the sea to remain; and every person who violates the provisions of this or the preceding section shall be punished for each offense by a fine of not less than two hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars or by imprisonment not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment; and all vessels, their tackle, apparel, and furniture, whose crews are found engaged in the violation of either this or the preceding section shall be forfeited to the United States. [R. S.]

This section, as well as section 178 of the Alaska Penal Laws, was amended to read as above given by the Act of April 21, 1910, ch. 183, § 7, 36 Stat. L. 328. Originally the section was as follows:

"It shall be unlawful to kill any female seal, or any seal less than one year old, at any season of the year, except as above provided; and it shall also be unlawful to kill any seal in the waters adjacent to the islands of Saint Paul and Saint George, or on the beaches, cliffs, or rocks where they haul up from the sea to remain; and every person who violates the provisions of this or the preceding section shall be punished for each offense by a fine of not less than two hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment; and all vessels, their tackle, apparel, and furniture, whose crews are found engaged in the violation of either this or the preceding section, shall be forfeited to the United States." Act of July 1, 1870, ch. 189, 16 Stat. L. 180.

Sections 1962-1972 repealed.—R. S. sec. 1962 limited for twenty years the number of seals which could be killed for their skins. R. S. secs. 1963-1972 inclusive provided for the leasing of the right to take seals. These sections were repealed by the Act of April 21, 1910, ch. 183, § 10, 32 Stat. L. 328, the repeal to take effect May 1, 1910.

Sec. 1973. [Agent and assistants to manage seal fisheries.] The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to appoint one agent and three assistant agents, who shall be charged with the management of the seal fisheries in Alaska, and the performance of such other duties as may be assigned to them by the Secretary of the Treasury. [R. S.]

Act of March 5, 1872, ch. 31, 17 Stat. L. 35.

This and the following section have not been repealed, but are apparently superseded by the various appropriation acts. The Sundry Civil Appropriation Act for the fiscal year 1915 provides for two agents and caretakers at a salary of $2,000 each (Act Aug. 1, 1914, ch. 223, § 1, 38 Stat. L. 661). And see the notes to the following section.

Sec. 1974. [Their pay, etc.] The agent shall receive the sum of ten dollars each day, one assistant agent the sum of eight dollars each day, and two assistant agents the sum of six dollars each day while so employed; and they shall also be allowed their necessary traveling expenses in going to and returning from Alaska, for which expenses vouchers shall be presented to the proper accounting officers of the Treasury, and such expenses shall not exceed in the aggregate six hundred dollars each in any one year. [R. S.]

Act of March 5, 1872, ch. 31, 17 Stat. L. 35.

See the note to R. S. sec. 1973, given above. The Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of July 31, 1876, ch. 246, contained the following provision: " * * * that the two assistant agents whose salaries as fixed by law at two thousand one hundred and ninety dollars each per annum, shall be discontinued from and after the first day of October eighteen hundred and seventy-six." [19 Stat. L. 118.]

Sec. 1975. [Not to be interested in right to take seals.] Such agents shall never be interested, directly or indirectly, in any lease of the right to take seals, nor in any proceeds or profits thereof, either as owner, agent, partner, or otherwise. [R. S.]

Act of March 5, 1872, ch. 31, 17 Stat. L. 35.

Sec. 1976. [Agents may administer certain oaths and take testimony.] Such agents are empowered to administer oaths in all cases relating to the service of the United States, and to take testimony in Alaska for the use of the Government in any matter concerning the public revenues. [R. S.]

Act of March 5, 1872, ch. 31, 17 Stat. L. 35.

[Sec. 1.] [St. Paul Island — price for fox skins.] Saint Paul Island * * ; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby required to fix a reasonable price to be paid the natives of said island for blue fox skins secured by them. [28 Stat. L. 391.]

The above is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of Aug. 18, 1894, ch. 301.

[Sec. 1.] [Investigation of seal life on Pribilof Island and Bering Sea.] * * * And the Commissioner of Fisheries is authorized and required to investigate, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, and when so requested and report annually to him regarding the conditions of seal life upon the rookeries of the Pribilof Island; and he is also directed to continue the inquiries relative to the life history and migrations of the fur seals frequenting the waters of Bering Sea. * * [27 Stat. L. 585.]

The above is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 3, 1893, ch. 208.

An Act To protect the seal fisheries of Alaska and for other purposes.

[Act of April 21, 1910, ch. 183, 36 Stat. L. 326.]

[SEC. 1.] [Seal fisheries on Pribilof Islands — regulations.] That the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall have power to authorize the killing of fur seals and the taking of sealskins on the Pribilof Islands, in Alaska, under regulations established by him prescribing the manner in which such killing shall be done and limiting the number of seals to be killed, whenever he shall determine that such killing is necessary or desirable and not inconsistent with the preservation of the seal herd: Provided, however, That under such authority the right of killing fur seals and taking sealskins shall be exercised by officers, agents, or employees of the United States appointed by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, and by the natives of the Pribilof Islands under the direction and supervision of such officers, agents, or employees, and by no other person: And provided further, That male seals only shall be killed and that not more than ninety-five per centum of three-year-old male seals shall be killed in any one year. [36 Stat. L. 326.]

This is known as the "Seal Fisheries Act."

Sections 4, 5, 6, and 7 of this Act amended R. S. secs. 1956, 1959, 1960 and 1961 and are embodied in these sections as given supra, p. 339, et seq.

Section 8 of this Act amended the Act of Dec. 29, 1897, ch. 3, § 1, 30 Stat. L. 226, which, as amended, was superseded by the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 373, infra, p. 345.

The Secretary of Commerce and Labor was designated the Secretary of Commerce by the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, 37 Stat. L. 736.

See the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 373, infra, p. 345, section 11 of which suspended the killing of seals on the Pribilof Islands for five years.

SEC. 2. [Sales.] That any and all sealskins taken under the authority conferred by the preceding section shall be sold by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor in such market, at such times, and in such manner as he may deem most advantageous; and the proceeds of such sale or sales shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States: Provided, That the directions of this section, relating to the disposition of sealskins and the proceeds thereof, shall be subject to the provisions of any treaty hereafter made by the United States for the protection of seal life. [36 Stat. L. 326.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act.

SEC. 3. [Employment of Pribilof natives.] That whenever seals are killed and sealskins taken on any of the Pribilof Islands the native inhabitants of said islands shall be employed in such killing and in curing the skins taken, and shall receive for their labor fair compensation, to be fixed from time to time by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, who shall have the authority to prescribe by regulation the manner in which such compensation shall be paid to the said natives or expended or otherwise used in their behalf and for their benefit. [36 Stat. L. 327.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act.

SEC. 9. [Additional officers, authorized — purchase of right of present lessee, etc.— maintenance of depots, etc.— food, etc., to natives.] That the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall have authority to appoint such additional officers, agents, and employees as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act and the laws of the United States relating to the seal fisheries of Alaska, to prescribe their duties and to fix their compensation; he shall likewise have authority to purchase from the present lessee of the right to take seals on the islands of Saint Paul and Saint George, at a fair valuation to be agreed upon, the warehouses, salt houses, boats, launches, lighters, horses, mules, wagoes, and other property of the said lessee on the islands of Saint Paul and Saint George, including the dwellings of the natives of said islands; he shall likewise have authority to establish and maintain depots for provisions and supplies on the Pribilof Islands and to provide for the transportation of such provisions and supplies from the mainland of the United States to the said islands by the charter of private vessels or by the use of public vessels of the United States which may be placed at his disposal by the President; and he shall likewise have authority to furnish food, shelter, fuel, clothing, and other necessities of life to the native inhabitants of the Pribilof Islands and to provide for their comfort, maintenance, education, and protection. [36 Stat. L. 328.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act.

The words "and Labor" in the text were superseded by the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, 37 Stat. L. 736, creating a Department of Labor and designating the Secretary of Commerce and Labor as the Secretary of Commerce.

SEC. 10. [Effect—appropriation.] * * * The provisions of this Act shall take effect from and after the first day of May, nineteen hundred and ten; and there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars for carrying into effect the provisions of this Act. [36 Stat. L. 328.]

The first part of the foregoing section repealed R. S. secs. 1962–1972 inclusive, as noted, supra, p. 342.

An Act To give effect to the convention between the Governments of the United States, Great Britain, Japan, and Russia for the preservation and protection of the fur seals and sea otter which frequent the waters of the north Pacific Ocean, concluded at Washington July seventh, nineteen hundred and eleven.

[SEC. 1.] [Killing, etc., seals or sea-otter in north Pacific Ocean forbidden.] That no citizen of the United States, nor person owing duty of obedience to the laws or the treaties of the United States, nor any of their vessels, nor any vessel of the United States, nor any person belonging to or on board of such vessel, shall kill, capture, or pursue, at any time or in any manner whatever, any fur seal in the waters of the north Pacific Ocean north of the thirtieth parallel of north latitude and including the seas of Bering, Kamchatka, Okhotsk, and Japan; nor shall any such person or vessel kill, capture, or pursue sea otter in any of the waters mentioned beyond the distance of three miles from the shore line of the territory of the United States. [37 Stat. L. 499.]

This is the first section of the "Pelagic Sealing Act." Immediately preceding the foregoing section was the following preamble:

"Whereas the plenipotentiaries of the United States, Great Britain, Japan, and Russia did, on the seventh day of July, anno Domini nineteen hundred and eleven, enter into a convention for the preservation and protection of the fur seals and sea otter which frequent the waters of the north Pacific Ocean, which convention was subsequently ratified by the Governments of the United States, Great Britain, Japan, and Russia and the exchange of ratifications thereof was effected on the twelfth day of December, nineteen hundred and eleven: Now, therefore," etc.

The treaty in pursuance of which this Act was made is set out in 37 Stat. L. 1538.

This Act supersedes the Act of Dec. 29, 1897, ch. 3, 30 Stat. L. 226, as amended by the Act of April 21, 1910, ch. 183, § 8, 36 Stat. L. 238.

The provisions of this Act also superseded those of the Act of April 6, 1892, ch. 57, 28 Stat. L. 52, being "An Act to give effect to the award rendered by the Tribunal of Arbitration, at Paris, under the treaty between the United States and Great Britain, concluded at Washington, February twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, for the purpose of submitting to arbitration certain questions concerning the preservation of the fur seals," as amended by the Act of April 24, 1894, ch. 63, 28 Stat. L. 64. Said Act of April 6, 1894, ch. 57, superseded the prior Act of Feb. 21, 1893, ch. 150, 27 Stat. L. 472.

The statute of Great Britain, passed to carry out the provisions of said award of the Tribunal of Arbitration, is given in Law Reports, The Statutes 57 Victoria.

This Act also supersedes the Act of June 5, 1894, ch. 91, 28 Stat. 85, which was supplementary to the Act of April 6, 1894, ch. 57, previously cited.

R. S. sec. 1956, supra, p. 339, was also superseded in part by this Act.

In addition to the provisions of this Act, see the Act of April 21, 1910, ch. 183, supra, p. 344, and the various sections of the Revised Statutes given under this subdivision.

SEC. 2. [Equipping, etc., vessels—use of ports, etc.—vessels excluded.] That no citizen of the United States, nor person above described in the first section, shall equip, use, or employ, or furnish aid in equipping, using, or employing, or furnish supplies to any vessel used or employed, or to be used or employed, in carrying on or taking part in pelagic sealing or in sea-otter hunting in said waters, nor shall any of their vessels nor any vessel of the United States be so used or employed; and no person or vessel shall use any of the ports or harbors of the United States, or any part of the territory of the United States, for any purposes whatsoever connected with the operations of pelagic sealing or sea-otter hunting in the waters named in the first section of this Act; and no vessel which is engaged or employed, or intended to be engaged or employed, for or in connection with pelagic sealing or sea-otter hunting in such waters shall use any of the ports or harbors or any part of the territory of the United States for any purpose whatsoever. [37 Stat. L. 500.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act.

SEC. 3. [Killing by natives.] That the provisions of the first and second sections of this Act shall not apply to Indians, Aleuts, or other aborigines dwelling on the American coast of the waters mentioned in the first section of this Act who carry on pelagic sealing in canoes or undecked boats propelled wholly by paddles, oars, or sails, and not transported by or used in connection with other vessels, and manned by not more than five persons each, in the way hitherto practiced by the said Indians, Aleuts, or other aborigines, and without the use of firearms: Provided, however, That the exception made in this section shall not apply to Indians, Aleuts, or other aborigines in the employment of other persons or who shall kill, capture, or pursue fur seals or sea otters under contract to deliver the skins to any person. [37 Stat. L. 500.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act.

SEC. 4. [Importing illegally taken skins.] That the importation or bringing into territory of the United States, by any person whatsoever, of skins of fur seals or sea otters taken in the waters mentioned in the first section of this Act, or of skins identified as those of the species known as Callorhinus alascanus, Callorhinus ursinus, and Callorhinus kurilensis, or belonging to the American, Russian, or Japanese herds, whether raw, dressed, dyed, or manufactured, except such as have been taken under the authority of the respective parties to said convention, to which the breeding grounds of such herds belong, and have been officially marked and certified as having been so taken, is hereby prohibited; and all such articles imported or brought in after this Act shall take effect shall not be permitted to be exported, but shall be seized and forfeited to the United States. [37 Stat. L. 500.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act.

SEC. 5. [Regulations to be made by the President.] That the President shall have power to make regulations to carry this Act and the said convention into effect, and from time to time to add to, modify, amend, or revoke such regulations, as in his judgment may seem expedient. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, under the direction of the President, to see that the said convention, the provisions of this Act, and the regulations made thereunder are executed and enforced; and all officers of the United States engaged in the execution and enforcement of this Act are authorized and directed to cooperate with the proper officers of any of the other parties to the said convention in taking such measures as may be appropriate and available under the said convention, this Act, or the regulations made thereunder for the purpose of preventing pelagic sealing as in this Act prohibited. [37 Stat. L. 500.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act.

SEC. 6. [Punishment for violations.] That every person guilty of a violation of any of the provisions of said convention, or of this Act, or of any regulation made thereunder, shall, for each offense, be fined not less than two hundred dollars or more than two thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than six months, or both; and every vessel, its tackle, apparel, furniture, and cargo, at any time used or employed in violation of this Act, or of the regulations made thereunder, shall be forfeited to the United States. [37 Stat. L. 501.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act.

Intent.—Under a similar section in the Act of April 6, 1894, it was held that forfeiture took place regardless of any question of intent on the part of any owner of the vessel or her equipage or cargo or any part thereof, or any interest therein. The James G. Swan, (1896) 77 Fed. 473.

SEC. 7. [Vessels presumed to be violating law, etc.] That if any vessel shall be found within the waters to which this Act applies, having on board fur-seal skins or sea-otter skins, or bodies of seals or sea otters, or apparatus or implements for killing or taking seals or sea otter, it shall be presumed that such vessel was used or employed in the killing of said seals or sea otters, or that said apparatus or implements were used in violation of this Act, until the contrary is proved to the satisfaction of the court, in so far as such vessel, apparatus, and implements are subject to the jurisdiction of the United States. [37 Stat. L. 501.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act.

SEC. 8. [Prosecutions — venue.] That any violation of the said convention, or of this Act, or of the regulations thereunder, may be prosecuted either in the district court of Alaska, or in any district court of the United States in California, Oregon, or Washington. [37 Stat. L. 501.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act.

SEC. 9. [Guard or patrol of waters — seizure and search of vessels.] That it shall be the duty of the President to cause a guard or patrol to be maintained in the waters frequented by the seal herd or herds and sea otter, in the protection of which the United States is especially interested, composed of naval or other public vessels of the United States designated by him for such service; and any officer of any such vessel engaged in such service and any other officers duly designated by the President may search any vessel of the United States, in port, or in territorial waters of the United States, or on the high seas, when suspected of having violated, or being about to violate, the provisions of said convention, or of this Act, or of any regulation made thereunder, and may seize such vessel and the officers and crew thereof and bring them into the most accessible port of the Territory or of any of the States mentioned in the eighth section of this Act for trial. [37 Stat. L. 501.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act.

SEC. 10. [Seizure outside of territorial jurisdiction — delivery to proper officials — seizures by other than United States officers — proclamation to issue.] That any vessel or person described in the first section of this Act offending or being about to offend against the prohibitions of the said convention, or of this Act, or of the regulations made thereunder, may be seized and detained by the naval or other duly commissioned officers of any of the parties to the said convention other than the United States, except within the territorial jurisdiction of one of the other of said parties, on condition, however, that when such vessel or person is so seized and detained by officers of any party other than the United States such vessel or person shall be delivered as soon as practicable at the nearest point to the place of seizure, with the witnesses and proofs necessary to establish the offense so far as they are under the control of such party, to the proper official of the United States, whose courts alone shall have jurisdiction to try the offense and impose the penalties for the same: Provided, however, That the said officers of any party to said convention other than the United States shall arrest and detain vessels and persons, as in this section specified, only after such party, by appropriate legislation or otherwise, shall have authorized the naval or other officers of the United States duly commissioned and instructed by the President to that end to arrest, detain, and deliver to the proper officers of such party vessels and subjects under the jurisdiction of that Government offending against said convention or any statute or regulation made by that Government to enforce said convention. The President of the United States shall determine by proclamation when such authority has been given by the other parties to said convention, and his determination shall be conclusive upon the question; and such proclamation may be modified, amended, or revoked by proclamation of the President whenever, in his judgment, it is deemed expedient. [37 Stat. L. 501.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act.

SEC. 11. [Killing fur seals on Pribilof Islands suspended for five years — exemptions.] That from and after the approval of this Act all killing of fur seals on the Pribilof Islands, or anywhere within the jurisdiction of the United States in Alaska, shall be suspended for a period of five years, and shall be, and is hereby, declared to be unlawful; and all punishments and penalties heretofore enacted for the illegal killing of fur seals shall be applicable and inflicted upon offenders under this section: Provided, That this prohibition shall not apply to the annual killing on the Pribilof Islands of such male seals as are needed to supply food, clothing, and boat skins for the natives on the islands, as is provided for in article eleven of said convention; the skins of all seals so used for food shall be preserved and annually sold by the Government, and proceeds of such annual sales shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States: Provided further, That at the expiration of the said five years' suspension of all commercial killing as above provided, said killing may be resumed under authority of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor: Provided, however, That the number of three-year-old males selected from among the finest and most perfect seals of that age found on the hauling grounds, to be reserved for breeding purposes, in each year ending August first, shall not be fewer than the following: In nineteen hundred and seventeen, and in each year thereafter until nineteen hundred and twenty-six, inclusive, five thousand. The Secretary of Commerce and Labor, or his authorized agents, shall have authority to receive on behalf of the United States any and all fur-seal skins taken as provided in the thirteenth and fourteenth articles of said convention and tendered for delivery by the Governments of Japan and Great Britain in accordance with the terms of said articles; and all skins which are or shall become the property of the United States from any source whatsoever shall be sold by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor in such market, at such times, and in such manner as he may deem most advantageous; and the proceeds of such sale or sales shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States. The Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall likewise have authority to deliver to the authorized agents of the Canadian Government and the Japanese Government the skins to which they are entitled under the provisions of the tenth article of said convention; to pay to Great Britain and Japan such sums as they are entitled to receive, respectively, under the provisions of the eleventh article of said convention; to retain such skins as the United States may be entitled to retain under the provisions of the eleventh article of said convention; and to do or perform, or cause to be done or performed, any and every act which the United States is authorized or obliged to do or perform by the provisions of the tenth, eleventh, thirteenth, and fourteenth articles of said convention; and to enable the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to carry out the provisions of the said eleventh article there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of four hundred thousand dollars. [37 Stat. L. 502.]

By Res. of Feb. 24, 1915, No. 7, it was provided: "That the Secretary of Commerce be, and he hereby is, authorized to postpone the sale of all skins now in possession of the Government, taken from seals killed on the Pribilof Islands for food purposes, under section eleven of the Act of August twenty-fourth, nineteen hundred and twelve, until such time as, in his discretion, he shall deem advisable; and the proceeds of such sale shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States." [38 Stat. L. 1222.]

SEC. 12. ["Pelagic sealing" defined — "person" construed.] That the term "pelagic sealing" where used in this Act shall be taken to mean the killing, capturing, or pursuing in any manner whatsoever of fur seals while the same are in the water. The word "person" where used in this Act shall extend and be applied to partnerships and corporations. [37 Stat. L. 502.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act.

SEC. 13. [Effect and duration.] That this Act shall take effect immediately, and shall continue in force until the termination of the said convention. [37 Stat. L. 502.]

VII. FISH AND FISHERIES.

[SEC. 1.] [Agent and assistant agent—appointment and salary.]
* * * For the protection of the salmon fisheries of Alaska, including salaries of one agent, at two thousand five hundred dollars, and one assistant agent, at two thousand dollars, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and to be in lieu of any and all agents or inspectors now authorized by law for this purpose, seven thousand dollars. [33 Stat. L. 478.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of April 28, 1904, ch. 1762.

The Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of June 4, 1897, provided for one agent and one assistant agent. This superseded the Act of June 9, 1896, ch. 387, § 4, 29 Stat. L. 317, providing for an inspector and two assistant inspectors, which latter section was, however, re-enacted by section 182, ch. 12, of the Alaska Penal Code (30 Stat. L. 1281).

Additional employees were authorized by the Act of June 26, 1906, ch. 3547, § 12, supra, p. 357.

The Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of June 23, 1913, ch. 3, § 1, 38 Stat. L. 63, made provisions for an agent, an inspector, and two assistant agents.

An Act To prohibit aliens from fishing in the waters of Alaska.

[Act of June 14, 1906, ch. 3299, 34 Stat. L. 263.]

[SEC. 1.] [Fishing in waters of, by aliens, except with rod, etc., prohibited — sale of fish to aliens permitted — alien labor may be employed.] That it shall be unlawful for any person not a citizen of the United States, or who has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and is not a bona fide resident therein, or for any company, corporation, or association not organized or authorized to transact business under the laws of the United States or under the laws of any State, Territory, or district thereof, or for any person not a native of Alaska, to catch or kill, or attempt to catch or kill, except with rod, spear, or gaff, any fish of any kind or species whatsoever in any of the waters of Alaska under the jurisdiction of the United States: Provided, however, That nothing contained in this Act shall prevent those lawfully taking fish in the said waters from selling the same, fresh or cured, in Alaska or in Alaskan waters, to any alien person, company, or vessel then being lawfully in said waters: And provided further, That nothing contained in this Act shall prevent any person, firm, corporation, or association lawfully entitled to fish in the waters of Alaska from employing as laborers any aliens who can now be lawfully employed under the existing laws of the United States, either at stated wages or by piecework, or both, in connection with Alaskan fisheries, or with the canning, salting or otherwise preserving of fish. [34 Stat. L. 263.]

No treaty rights are affected by this Act, but if they were the Act would not be void, as the power of Congress to enact laws for subsequent observance is not restricted by prior treaties with foreign nations. The Tokai Maru, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 190 Fed. 450, wherein the court said: "The remaining defensive argument is that by the first and second articles of the treaty between Japan and the United States, concluded November 24, 1894, proclaimed March, 1895 (29 Stat. L. 849), the officers and crew of this schooner are given the same rights in Alaskan waters, with reference to fishing, as are given to our own citizens [and] that statutes which discriminate against aliens, in violation of their treaty rights, are void. In re Ah Chong, (C. C.) 2 Fed. 733; In re Tiburico Parrot, (C. C.) 2 Fed. 481; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356 (6 Sup. Ct. 1064) 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 220; The authorities here cited do no more than affirm the fundamental principle that state laws and municipal ordinances may not override national treaties; and they give no sanction to an argument questioning the validity of a national law. The power of Congress to enact laws for subsequent observance is not restricted by prior treaties with foreign nations. The Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U. S. 581, 9 Sup. Ct. 623, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 1068. Moreover the articles of the treaty referred to contain no allusion to fishing privileges, and do not purport to grant any right to sea rovers to resort to American fishing grounds for the purpose of taking fish for their own consumption or for any purpose whatever."

Fishing by aliens to supply their personal need for food is prohibited by this section. The Tokai Maru, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 190 Fed. 450.

Alien employee.—The words "in connection with Alaskan fisheries" do not limit the right to employ labor in connection with the preservation of fish. The words refer to work or labor performed in connection with the fisheries, and any sort of labor, in connection with the taking of fish from the place that is defined as a fishery, is excepted from the denunciation of the Act. Aliens therefore are allowed to fish as employees in connection with fisheries. U. S. v. Miyata, (1911) 4 Alaska 436.

SEC. 2. [Penalty for violations.] That every person, company, corporation, or association found guilty of a violation of any provision of this Act or of any regulation made thereunder shall, for each offense, be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, which fine shall be a lien against any vessel or other property of the offending party or which was used in the commission of such unlawful act. Every vessel used or employed in violation of any provision of this Act or of any regulation made thereunder shall be liable to a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and may be seized and proceeded against by way of libel in any court having jurisdiction of the offense. [34 Stat. L. 264.]

The ship's "company" includes the captain and crew, and the section authorizes the imposition of a single fine against the company in addition to the fine imposed against the vessel as a distinct entity. The Tokai Maru, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 190 Fed. 450.

SEC. 3. [Prosecution.] That the violation of any provision of this Act or of any regulation made thereunder may be prosecuted in any United States district court of Alaska, California, Oregon, or Washington. [34 Stat. L. 264.]

Jurisdiction.—It is clear that the provisions of section 3 do not curtail the jurisdiction of the justice's court; that the intention and effect of that section were to give the courts of other jurisdictions, into which offending vessels might flee, power to try parties accused of the violation of the law and not to deprive the courts of Alaska of jurisdiction in the district in which the crime was committed, for such vessels might not only leave the territory of Alaska and be brought into the districts of California, Oregon and Washington, but they might pass from the division in Alaska in which the offense had been committed into other divisions of the district of Alaska; therefore it is provided that any United States District Court of Alaska may entertain jurisdiction. The Tokai Maru, (1911) 4 Alaska 311.

SEC. 4. [Seizures and arrests.] That the collector of customs of the district of Alaska is hereby authorized to search and seize every foreign vessel and arrest every person violating any provision of this Act or any regulation made thereunder, and the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall have power to authorize officers of the Navy and of the Revenue-Cutter Service and agents of the Department of Commerce and Labor to likewise make such searches, seizures, and arrests. If any foreign vessel shall be found within the waters to which this Act applies, having on board fresh or cured fish and apparatus or implements suitable for killing or taking fish, it shall be presumed that the vessel and apparatus were used in violation of this Act until it is otherwise sufficiently proved. And every vessel, its tackle, apparatus, or implements so seized shall be given into the custody of the United States marshal of either of the districts mentioned in section three of this Act, and shall be held by him subject to the proceedings provided for in section two of this Act. The facts in connection with such seizure shall be at once reported to the United States district attorney for the district to which the vessel so seized shall be taken, whose duty it shall be to institute the proper proceedings. [34 Stat. L. 264.]

The Secretary of Commerce and Labor was designated the Secretary of Commerce by the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, 37 Stat. 1. 736.

SEC. 5. [Enforcement of regulations — existing treaties, etc., not affected.] That the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall have power to make rules and regulations not inconsistent with law to carry into effect the provisions of this Act. And it shall be the duty of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to enforce the provisions of this Act and the rules and regulations made thereunder, and for that purpose he may employ, through the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of the Navy, the vessels of the United States Revenue-Cutter Service and of the Navy: Provided, however, That nothing contained in this Act shall be construed as affecting any existing treaty or convention between the United States and any foreign power. [34 Stat. L. 264.]

As to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor see the note to the preceding section 4 of this Act.

An Act for the protection and regulation of the fisheries of Alaska.

[Act of June 26, 1906, ch. 3547, 34 Stat. L. 478.]

[SEC. 1.] [Salmon, etc., canneries — license tax on products — collection.] That every person, company, or corporation carrying on the business of canning, curing, or preserving fish or manufacturing fish products within the territory known as Alaska, ceded to the United States by Russia by the treaty of March thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, or in any of the waters of Alaska over which the United States has jurisdiction, shall, in lieu of all other license fees and taxes therefor and thereon, pay license taxes on their said business and output as follows: Canned salmon, four cents per case; pickled salmon, ten cents per barrel; salt salmon in bulk, five cents per one hundred pounds; fish oil, ten cents per barrel; fertilizer, twenty cents per ton. The payment and collection of such license taxes shall be under and in accordance with the provisions of the Act of March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, entitled "An Act to define and punish crimes in the district of Alaska, and to provide a code of criminal procedure for the district," and amendments thereto. [34 Stat. L. 478.]

This is known as the "Alaska Salmon Fisheries Act." The provisions of this Act supersede those of the Act of June 9, 1896, ch. 387, 29 Stat. L. 316, which amended the Act of March 2, 1889, ch. 415, 25 Stat. L. 109, and which were re-enacted as ch. 12 of the Alaska Penal Laws (30 Stat. L. 1279).

Applicability of Oregon laws.—The Act of March 2, 1889, was intended by Congress to cover the whole question relating to the protection of salmon in the waters of Alaska, and repealed any laws of the state of Oregon upon that subject which had been in force in said territory, so far as such territory was concerned; and therefore fishing for salmon on Sunday in the waters of Alaska was not illegal. Nelson v. Pyramid Harbor Packing Co., (1892) 4 Wash. 689, 30 Pac. 1096.

SEC. 2. [Private hatcheries — exemption from taxation in proportion to fry liberated — procedure to obtain exemption.] That the catch and pack of salmon made in Alaska by the owners of private salmon hatcheries operated in Alaska shall be exempt from all license fees and taxation of every nature at the rate of ten cases of canned salmon to every one thousand red or king salmon fry liberated, upon the following conditions: That the Secretary of Commerce and Labor may from time to time, and on the application of the hatchery owner shall, within a reasonable time thereafter, cause such private hatcheries to be inspected for the purpose of determining the character of their operations, efficiency, and productiveness, and if he approve the same shall cause notice of such approval to be filed in the office of the clerk or deputy clerk of the United States district court of the division of the district of Alaska wherein any such hatchery is located, and shall also notify the owners of such hatchery of the action taken by him. The owner, agent, officer, or superintendent of any hatchery the effectiveness and productiveness of which has been approved as above provided shall, between the thirtieth day of June and the thirty-first day of December of each year, make proof of the number of salmon fry liberated during the twelve months immediately preceding the thirtieth day of June, by a written statement under oath. Such proof shall be filed in the office of the clerk or deputy clerk of the United States district court of the division of the district of Alaska wherein such hatchery is located, and when so filed shall entitle the respective hatchery owners to the exemption as herein provided; and a false oath as to the number of salmon fry liberated shall be deemed perjury and subject the offender to all the pains and penalties thereof. Duplicates of such statements shall also be filed with the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. It shall be the duty of such clerk or deputy clerk in whose office the approval and proof heretofore provided for are filed to forthwith issue to the hatchery owner, causing such proofs to be filed, certificates which shall not be transferable and of such denominations as said owner may request (no certificate to cover fewer than one thousand fry), covering in the aggregate the number of fry so proved to have been liberated; and such certificates may be used at any time by the person, company, corporation, or association to whom issued for the payment pro tanto of any license fees or taxes upon or against or on account of any catch or pack of salmon made by them in Alaska; and it shall be the duty of all public officials charged with the duty of collecting or receiving such license fees or taxes to accept such certificates in lieu of money in payment of all license fees or taxes upon or against the pack of canned salmon at the ratio of one thousand fry for each ten cases of salmon. No hatchery owner shall obtain the rebates from the output of any hatchery to which he might otherwise be entitled under this Act unless the efficiency of said hatchery has first been approved by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor in the manner herein provided for. [34 Stat. L. 478.]

The Secretary of Commerce and Labor was designated the Secretary of Commerce by the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, 37 Stat. L. 736.

SEC. 3. [Stationary obstructions for taking salmon in waters, unlawful.] That it shall be unlawful to erect or maintain any dam, barricade, fence, trap, fish wheel, or other fixed or stationary obstruction, except for purposes of fish culture, in any of the waters of Alaska at any point where the distance from shore to shore is less than five hundred feet, or within five hundred yards of the mouth of any red-salmon stream where the same is less than five hundred feet in width, with the purpose or result of capturing salmon or preventing or impeding their ascent to their spawning grounds, and the Secretary of Commerce and Labor is hereby authorized and directed to have any and all such unlawful obstructions removed or destroyed. [34 Stat. L. 479.]

As to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor see the note to section 2 of this Act.

This section is cited in Barron v. Alexander, (1912) 4 Alaska 591.

SEC. 4. [Restriction on nets, seines, etc.] That it shall be unlawful to lay or set any drift net, seine, set net, pound net, trap, or any other fishing appliance for any purpose except for purposes of fish culture, across or above the tide waters of any creek, stream, river, estuary, or lagoon, for a distance greater than one-third the width of such creek, stream, river, estuary, or lagoon, or within one hundred yards outside of the mouth of any red-salmon stream where the same is less than five hundred feet in width. It shall be unlawful to lay or set any seine or net of any kind within one hundred yards of any other seine, net, or other fishing appliance which is being or which has been laid or set in any of the waters of Alaska, or to drive or construct any trap or any other fixed fishing appliance within six hundred yards laterally or within one hundred yards endwise of any other trap or fixed fishing appliance. [34 Stat. L. 479.]

SEC. 5. [Weekly close season for taking salmon — night seining in small streams prohibited — release of obstructions, etc., during close season.] That it shall be unlawful to fish for, take, or kill any salmon of any species in any manner or by any means except by rod, spear, or gaff, in any of the waters of Alaska over which the United States has jurisdiction, except Cook Inlet, the Delta of Copper River, Bering Sea, and the waters tributary thereto, from six o'clock postmeridian of Saturday of each week until six o'clock antemeridian of the Monday following, or to fish for, or catch, or kill in any manner or by any appliances except by rod, spear, or gaff, any salmon in any stream of less than one hundred yards in width in Alaska between the hours of six o'clock in the evening and six o'clock in the morning of the following day of each and every day of the week. Throughout the weekly close season herein prescribed the gate, mouth, or tunnel of all stationary and floating traps shall be closed, and twenty-five feet of the webbing or net of the "heart" of such traps on each side next to the "pot" shall be lifted or lowered in such manner as to permit the free passage of salmon and other fishes. [34 Stat. L. 479.]

SEC. 6. [Spawn grounds to be set aside — close season authorized — notices required — not applicable to artificially stocked streams.] That the Secretary of Commerce and Labor may, in his discretion, set aside any streams or lakes as preserves for spawning grounds, in which fishing may be limited or entirely prohibited; and when, in his judgment, the results of fishing operations in any stream, or off the mouth thereof, indicate that the number of salmon taken is larger than the natural production of salmon in such stream, he is authorized to establish close seasons or to limit or prohibit fishing entirely for one year or more within such stream or within five hundred yards of the mouth thereof, so as to permit salmon to increase: Provided, however, That such power shall be exercised only after all persons interested shall be given a hearing, of which due notice must be given by publication; and where the interested parties are known to the Department they shall be personally notified by a notice mailed not less than thirty days previous to such hearing. No order made under this section shall be effective before the next calendar year after same is made: And provided further, That such limitations and prohibitions shall not apply to those engaged in catching salmon who keep such streams fully stocked with salmon by artificial propagation. [34 Stat. L. 480.]

As to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor see the note to section 2 of this Act.

SEC. 7. [Canning prohibited forty-eight hours after killing.] That it shall be unlawful to can or salt for sale for food any salmon more than forty-eight hours after it has been killed. [34 Stat. L. 480.]

SEC. 8. [Wanton waste of fish unlawful.] That it shall be unlawful for any person, company, or corporation wantonly to waste or destroy salmon or other food fishes taken or caught in any of the waters of Alaska. [34 Stat. L. 480.]

SEC. 9. [False branding prohibited — terms permitted.] That it shall be unlawful for any person, company, or corporation canning, salting, or curing fish of any species in Alaska to use any label, brand, or trade-mark which shall tend to misrepresent the contents of any package of fish offered for sale: Provided, That the use of the terms "red," "medium red," "pink," "chum," and so forth, as applied to the various species of Pacific salmon under present trade usages shall not be deemed in conflict with the provisions of this Act when used to designate salmon of those known species. [34 Stat. L. 480.]

SEC. 10. [Annual reports of fish establishments.] That every person, company, and corporation engaged in catching, curing, or in any manner utilizing fishery products, or in operating fish hatcheries in Alaska, shall make detailed annual reports thereof to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, on blanks furnished by him, covering all such facts as may be required with respect thereto for the information of the Department. Such reports shall be sworn to by the superintendent, manager, or other person having knowledge of the facts, a separate blank form being used for each establishment in cases where more than one cannery, saltery, or other establishment is conducted by a person, company, or corporation, and the same shall be forwarded to the Department at the close of the fishing season and not later than December fifteenth of each year. [34 Stat. L. 480.]

As to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor see the note to section 2 of this Act.

SEC. 11. [Provisions applicable to all species of fish.] That the catching or killing, except with rod, spear, or gaff, of any fish of any kind or species whatsoever in any of the waters of Alaska over which the United States has jurisdiction, shall be subject to the provisions of this Act, and the Secretary of Commerce and Labor is hereby authorized to make and establish such rules and regulations not inconsistent with law as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this Act. [34 Stat. L. 480.]

As to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor see the note to section 2 of this Act.

SEC. 12. [Enforcement — officers authorized.] That to enforce the provisions of this Act and such regulations as he may establish in pursuance thereof, the Secretary of Commerce and Labor is authorized and directed to depute, in addition to the agent and assistant agent of salmon fisheries now provided by law, from the officers and employees of the Department of Commerce and Labor, a force adequate to the performance of all work required for the proper investigation, inspection, and regulation of the Alaskan fisheries and hatcheries, and he shall annually submit to Congress estimates to cover the cost of the establishment and maintenance of fish hatcheries in Alaska, the salaries and actual traveling expenses of such officials, and for such other expenditures as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act. [34 Stat. L. 480.]

As to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor see the note to section 2 of this Act. Provisions for an agent and assistant agent were made by the Act of April 28, 1904, ch. 1762, § 1, supra, p. 350.

SEC. 13. [Punishment for violations — vessels, etc.] That any person, company, corporation, or association violating any provision of this Act or any regulation established in pursuance thereof shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or imprisonment at hard labor for a term of not more than ninety days, or by both such fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court; and in case of the violation of any of the provisions of section four of this Act and conviction thereof a further fine of not more than two hundred and fifty dollars per diem may, at the discretion of the court, be imposed for each day such obstruction is maintained. And every vessel or other apparatus or equipment used or employed in violation of any provision of this Act, or of any regulation made thereunder, may be seized by order of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, and shall be held subject to the payment of such fine or fines as may be imposed. [34 Stat. L. 481.]

As to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor see the note to section 2 of this Act.

SEC. 14. [Prosecutions.] That the violation of any provision of this Act may be prosecuted in any district court of Alaska or any district court of the United States in the States of California, Oregon, or Washington. And it shall be the duty of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to enforce the provisions of this Act and the rules and regulations made thereunder. And it shall be the duty of the district attorney to whom any violation is reported by any agent or representative of the Department of Commerce and Labor to institute proceedings necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act. [34 Stat. L. 481.]

As to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor see the note to section 2 of this Act.

SEC. 15. [Inconsistent laws repealed.] That all Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act are, so far as inconsistent, hereby repealed. [34 Stat. L. 481.]

SEC. 16. [Effect.] That this Act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage. [34 Stat. L. 481.]

VIII. GAME LAWS.

An Act To amend an Act entitled "An Act for the protection of game in Alaska, and for other purposes," approved June seventh, nineteen hundred and two.

[Act of May 11, 1908, ch. 162, 35 Stat. L. 102.]

[SEC. 1.] [Protection of game — game defined — exemptions.] From and after the passage of this Act the wanton destruction of wild game animals or wild birds, except eagles, ravens, and cormorants, the destruction of nests and eggs of such birds, or the killing of any wild birds, other than game birds, except eagles, for the purposes of selling the same or the skins or any part thereof, except as hereinafter provided, is hereby prohibited.

GAME DEFINED.—The term "game animals" shall include deer, moose, caribou, mountain sheep, mountain goats, brown bear, sea lions, and walrus. The term "game birds" shall include water fowl, commonly known as ducks, geese, brant, and swans; shore birds, commonly known as plover, snipe, and curlew, and the several species of grouse and ptarmigan.

EXEMPTIONS.—Nothing in this Act shall affect any law now in force in Alaska relating to the fur seal, sea otter, or any fur-bearing animal or prevent the killing of any game animal or bird for food or clothing at any time by natives, or by miners or explorers, when in need of food; but the game animals or birds so killed during close season shall not be shipped or sold. [35 Stat. L. 102.]

Immediately preceding the foregoing section was the following provision: "That an Act entitled 'An Act for the protection of game in Alaska, and for other purposes,' approved June seventh, nineteen hundred and two, be amended to read as follows:" etc.

The prior Act of June 7, 1902, ch. 1037, 32 Stat. L. 327, was amended and entirely superseded by this Act.

By the Alaska Penal Laws, ch. 44, § 463, 31 Stat. L. 332, the eggs of certain wild birds are protected.

SEC. 2. Season.—That it shall be unlawful for any person in Alaska to kill any wild game animals or birds, except during the season herein-after provided: North of latitude sixty-two degrees, brown bear may be killed at any time; moose, caribou, sheep, walrus, and sea lions from August first to December tenth, both inclusive; south of latitude sixty-two degrees, moose, caribou, and mountain sheep from August twentieth to December thirty-first, both inclusive; brown bear from October first to July first, both inclusive; deer and mountain goats from April first to February first, both inclusive; grouse, ptarmigan, shore birds, and waterfowl from September first to March first, both inclusive: Provided, That no caribou shall be killed on the Kenai Peninsula before August twentieth, nineteen hundred and twelve: And provided further, That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized, whenever he shall deem it necessary for the preservation of game animals or birds, to make and publish rules and regulations prohibiting the sale of any game in any locality modifying the close seasons hereinbefore established, providing different close seasons for different parts of Alaska, placing further restrictions and limitations on the killing of such animals or birds in any given locality, or prohibiting killing entirely for a period not exceeding two years in such locality. [35 Stat. L. 102.]

SEC. 3. Number.—That it shall be unlawful for any person to kill any female or yearling moose or for any one person to kill in any one year more than the number specified of each of the following animals: Two moose, one walrus or sea lion, three caribou, three mountain sheep, three brown bear, or to kill or have in his possession in any one day more than twenty-five grouse or ptarmigan or twenty-five shore birds or waterfowl.

GUNS AND BOATS.—That it shall be unlawful for any person at any time to hunt with dogs any of the game animals specified in this Act; to use a shotgun larger than number ten gauge, or any gun other than that which can be fired from the shoulder; or to use steam launches or any boats other than those propelled by oars or paddles in the pursuit of game animals or birds. [35 Stat. L. 103.]

SEC. 4. Sale.—That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons at any time to sell or offer for sale any hides, skins, or heads of any game animals or game birds in Alaska, or to sell, offer for sale, or purchase, or offer to purchase, any game animals or game birds, or parts thereof, during the time when the killing of such animals or birds is prohibited: Provided, That it shall be lawful for dealers having in possession game animals or game birds legally killed during the open season to dispose of the same within fifteen days after the close of said season. [35 Stat. L. 103.]

SEC. 5. Licenses.—That it shall be unlawful for any nonresident of Alaska to hunt any of the game animals protected by this Act, except deer and goats, without first obtaining a hunting license, or to hunt on the Kenai Peninsula without a registered guide, and such license shall not be transferable and shall be valid only during the calendar year in which issued. Each applicant shall pay a fee of one hundred dollars for such license, unless he be a citizen of the United States, in which case he shall pay a fee of fifty dollars. Each license shall be accompanied by coupons authorizing the shipment of two moose if killed north of latitude sixty-two degrees, four deer, three caribou, three mountain sheep, three goats, and three brown bear, or any part of said animals, but no more of any one kind.

A resident of Alaska desiring to export heads or trophies of any of the game animals mentioned in this Act shall first obtain a shipping license, for which he shall pay a fee of forty dollars, permitting the shipment of heads or trophies of one moose, if killed north of latitude sixty-two degrees, four deer, two caribou, two sheep, two goats, and two brown bear, but no more of any one kind; or a shipping license, for which he shall pay a fee of ten dollars, permitting the shipment of a single head or trophy of caribou or sheep; or a shipping license, for which he shall pay a fee of five dollars, permitting the shipment of a single head or trophy of any goat, deer, or brown bear. Any person wishing to ship moose killed south of latitude sixty-two degrees must first obtain a special shipping license, for which he shall pay a fee of one hundred and fifty dollars, permitting the shipment of one moose, or any part thereof. Not more than one general license and two special moose licenses shall be issued to any one person in one year: Provided, That before any trophy shall be shipped from Alaska under the provisions of this Act the person desiring to make such shipment shall first make and file with the customs office at the port where such shipment is to be made an affidavit to the effect that he has not violated any of the provisions of this Act; that the trophy which he desires to ship has not been bought or purchased and has not been sold and is not being shipped for the purpose of being sold, and that he is the owner of the trophy which he desires to ship, and if the trophy is that of moose, whether the animal from which it was taken was killed north or south of latitude sixty-two degrees: Provided further, That any resident of Alaska prior to September first, nineteen hundred and eight, may without permit or license ship any head or trophy of any of the game animals herein mentioned upon filing an affidavit with the customs office at the port where such shipment is to be made that the animal from which said head or trophy was taken was killed prior to the passage of this Act. Any affidavit required by the provisions of this Act may be subscribed and sworn to before any customs officer or before any officer competent to administer an oath.

The governor of Alaska is hereby authorized to issue licenses for hunting and shipping big game. On issuing a license he shall require the applicant to state whether the heads or trophies to be obtained or shipped under said license will pass through the ports of entry at Seattle, Washington, Portland, Oregon, or San Francisco, California, and he shall forthwith notify the collector of customs at the proper port of entry as to the name of the holder of the license and the name and address of the consignee. All proceeds from licenses, except one dollar from each fee, which shall be retained by the clerk issuing the license to cover the cost of printing and issue, shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts; the amount necessary for the enforcement of this Act shall be estimated for annually by the Agricultural Department and appropriated for including the employment and salaries to be paid to game wardens herein authorized. And the governor shall annually make a detailed and itemized report to the Secretary of Agriculture, in which he shall state the number and kind of licenses issued, the money received, which report shall also include a full statement of all trophies exported and all animals and birds exported for any purpose.

And the governor of Alaska is further authorized to employ game wardens, to make regulations for the registration and employment of guides, and fix the rates for licensing guides and rates of compensation for guiding. Every person applying for a guide license shall, at the time of making such application, make and file with the person issuing such license an affidavit to the effect that he will obey all the conditions of this Act and of the regulations thereunder, that he will not violate any of the game laws or regulations of Alaska, and that he will report all violations of such laws and regulations that come to his knowledge. Any American citizen or native of Alaska, of good character, upon compliance with the requirements of this Act, shall be entitled to a guide license. Any guide who shall fail or refuse to report any violation of this Act, or who shall himself violate any of the provisions of this Act, shall have his license revoked, and in addition shall be liable to the penalty provided in section seven of this Act, and shall be ineligible to act as guide for a period of five years from the date of conviction. [35 Stat. L. 103.]

SEC. 6. [Shipments of wild game.] That it shall be unlawful for any persons, firm, or corporation, or their officers or agents, to deliver to any common carrier, or for the owner, agent, or master of any vessel, or for any other person, to receive for shipment or have in possession with intent to ship out of Alaska, any wild birds, except eagles, or parts thereof, or any heads, hides, or carcasses of brown bear, caribou, deer, moose, mountain sheep, or mountain goats, or parts thereof, unless said heads, hides, or carcasses are accompanied by the required license or coupon and by a copy of the affidavit required by section five of this Act: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall be construed to prevent the collection of specimens for scientific purposes, the capture or shipment of live animals and birds for exhibition or propagation, or the export from Alaska of specimens under permit from the Secretary of Agriculture, and under such restrictions and limitations as he may prescribe and publish.

It shall be the duty of the collector of customs at Seattle, Portland, and San Francisco to keep strict account of all consignments of game animals received from Alaska, and no consignment of game shall be entered until due notice thereof has been received from the governor of Alaska or the Secretary of Agriculture, and found to agree with the name and address on the shipment. In case consignments arrive without licenses they shall be detained for sixty days, and if a license be not then produced said consignments shall be forfeited to the United States and shall be delivered by the collector of customs to the United States marshal of the district for such disposition as the court may direct. [35 Stat. L. 104.]

Every variety of the brown bear species within the district of Alaska is included in this section, whereas section 2 of the Act of June 7, 1902, protected only the large brown bear of Kodiak Island and the Kenai Peninsula. Mosses v. Willis, (1912) 4 Alaska 492.

SEC. 7. Penalties.— That any person violating any of the provisions of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall forfeit to the United States all game or birds in his possession, and all guns, traps, nets, or boats used in killing or capturing said game or birds, and shall be punished for each offense by a fine of not more than two hundred dollars or imprisonment not more than three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. Any person making any false or untrue statements in any affidavit required by this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall forfeit to the United States all trophies in his possession, and shall be punished by a fine in any sum not more than two hundred dollars or imprisonment not more than three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

ENFORCEMENT.— It is hereby made the duty of all marshals and deputy marshals, collectors or deputy collectors of customs, all officers of revenue cutters, and all game wardens to assist in the enforcement of this Act. Any marshal, deputy marshal, or warden in or out of Alaska may arrest without warrant any person found violating any of the provisions of this Act or any of the regulations herein provided, and may seize any game, birds, or hides, and any traps, nets, guns, boats, or other paraphernalia used in the capture of such game or birds and found in the possession of said person in or out of Alaska, and any collector or deputy collector of customs, or warden, or licensed guide, or any person authorized in writing by a marshal shall have the power above provided to arrest persons found violating this Act or said regulations and seize said property without warrant to keep and deliver the same to a marshal or a deputy marshal. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, upon request of the governor or Secretary of Agriculture, to aid in carrying out the provisions of this Act. [35 Stat. L. 105.]

SEC. 8. [Repeal.] That all Acts or parts of Acts in conflict with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed. [35 Stat. L. 105.]

I. ALIEN ENEMIES.

Sec. 4067. [Removal of alien enemies.] Whenever there is a declared war between the United States and any foreign nation or government, or any invasion or predatory incursion is perpetrated, attempted, or threatened against the territory of the United States, by any foreign nation or government, and the President makes public proclamation of the event, all natives, citizens, denizens, or subjects of the hostile nation or government, being males of the age of fourteen years and upward, who shall be within the United States, and not actually naturalized, shall be liable to be apprehended, restrained, secured, and removed, as alien enemies. The President is authorized, in any such event, by his proclamation thereof, or other public act, to direct the conduct to be observed, on the part of the United States, toward the aliens who become so liable; the manner and degree of the restraint to which they shall be subject, and in what cases, and upon what security their residence shall be permitted, and to provide for the removal of those who, not being permitted to reside within the United States, refuse or neglect to depart therefrom; and to establish any other regulations which are found necessary in the premises and for the public safety. [R. S.]

Act of July 6, 1798, ch. 66, 1 Stat. L. 577.

Authority of President.—This section gives the President unlimited authority. He alone is authorized to direct the conduct to be observed on the part of the United States toward such alien enemies, and to prescribe the manner and degree of restraint to which they should be subject. There is no law or usage which requires an order of the President to be under seal. Lockington v. Smith, (1817) 1 Pet. C. C. 466, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,448.

Legal status of aliens.—The legal status and obligations of aliens differ from those of citizens, in that aliens are liable, if the public peace calls for it, to internment and to executive surveillance under this section. (1857) 8 Op. Atty.-Gen. 499.

Sec. 4068. [Time for removal.] When an alien who becomes liable as an enemy, in the manner prescribed in the preceding section, is not chargeable with actual hostility, or other crime against the public safety, he shall be allowed, for the recovery, disposal, and removal of his goods and effects, and for his departure, the full time which is or shall be stipulated by any treaty then in force between the United States and the hostile nation or government of which he is a native citizen, denizen, or subject; and where no such treaty exists, or is in force, the President may ascertain and declare such reasonable time as may be consistent with the public safety, and according to the dictates of humanity and national hospitality. Sec. 4069. [Jurisdiction of United States courts over alien enemies.] After any such proclamation has been made, the several courts of the United States, having criminal jurisdiction, and the several justices and judges of the courts of the United States, are authorized, and it shall be their duty, upon complaint against any alien enemy resident and at large within such jurisdiction or district, to the danger of the public peace or safety, and contrary to the tenor or intent of such proclamation, or other regulations which the President may have established, to cause such alien to be duly apprehended and conveyed before such court, judge, or justice; and after a full examination and hearing on such complaint, and sufficient cause appearing, to order such alien to be removed out of the territory of the United States, or to give sureties for his good behavior, or to be otherwise restrained, conformably to the proclamation or regulations established as aforesaid, and to imprison, or otherwise secure such alien, until the order which may be so made shall be performed. [R. S.]

Act of July 6, 1798, 1 Stat. L. 577.

Sec. 4070. [Duties of marshal in removing alien enemies.] When an alien enemy is required by the President, or by order of any court, judge, or justice, to depart and to be removed, it shall be the duty of the marshal of the district in which he shall be apprehended to provide therefor, and to execute such order in person, or by his deputy, or other discreet person to be employed by him, by causing a removal of such alien out of the territory of the United States; and for such removal the marshal shall have the warrant of the President, or of the court, judge, or justice ordering the same, as the case may be.

II. HOLDING AND OWNING REAL ESTATE.

An Act To better define and regulate the rights of aliens to hold and own real estate in the Territories.

[Act of March 2, 1897, ch. 363, 29 Stat. L. 618.]

[SEC. 1.] [Alien ownership in Territories prohibited.] That no alien or person who is not a citizen of the United States, or who has not declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States in the manner provided by law, shall acquire title to or own any land in any of the Territories of the United States except as hereinafter provided: Provided, That the prohibition of this section shall not apply to cases in which the right to hold or dispose of lands in the United States is secured by existing treaties to citizens or subjects of foreign countries, which rights, so far as they may exist by force of any such treaty, shall continue to exist so long as such treaties are in force, and no longer. [29 Stat. L. 618.]

This is the first section of the "Aliens' Real Estate Ownership Act." Immediately preceding the provisions of the text was a provision: "That an Act entitled 'An Act to restrict the ownership of real estate in the Territories to American citizens, and so forth,' approved March third, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, except so far as it affects real estate in the District of Columbia, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows."

Section 1 in the original Act of March 3, 1887, read as follows: "That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons not citizens of the United States, or who have not lawfully declared their intention to become such citizens, or for any corporation not created by or under the laws of the United States or of some State or Territory of the United States, to hereafter acquire, hold, or own real estate so hereafter acquired, or any interest therein, in any of the Territories of the United States or in the District of Columbia, except such as may be acquired by inheritance or in good faith in the ordinary course of justice in the collection of debts heretofore created: Provided, That the prohibition of this section shall not apply to cases in which the right to hold or dispose of lands in the United States is secured by existing treaties to the citizens or subjects of foreign countries, which rights, so far as they may exist by force of any such treaty shall continue to exist so long as such treaties are in force, and no longer." [24 Stat. L. 476.]

This latter Act had previously been amended by the Act of March 9, 1888, ch. 30, 1 Supp. R. S. 582, by providing that it shall not apply to or operate in the District of Columbia, so far as it relates to the ownership of legations or residences by representatives of foreign governments or attachés thereof.

Effect of legislation.—The Act of 1887 prohibiting aliens who have not declared their intention to become citizens to thereafter acquire, hold or own real estate or any interest therein, in the District of Columbia or any of the territories, except by inheritance or for a debt previously contracted, unless such privilege is conferred by treaty, impliedly recognized an existing right in aliens to so acquire real estate. Geofroy v. Riggs, (1890) 133 U. S. 258, 10 S. Ct. 295, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 642.

Treaty in conflict with state statute.—The treaty power of the United States extends to the protection to be afforded aliens owning property in the United States and to the manner in which it may be transferred, devised or inherited, and where there is a conflict between a treaty made by this government with a foreign nation, providing for the right of an alien to hold property, and a statute of a state wherein the property is situated, in such case the state statute is suspended during the treaty or the period provided for therein. Geofroy v. Riggs, (1890) 133 U. S. 258, 10 S. Ct. 295, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 642, wherein the court, construing a reciprocal convention with France, said: "This article by its terms suspended during the existence of the treaty the provisions of the common law of Maryland and of the statutes of that state, so far as they prevented citizens of France from taking by inheritance from citizens of the United States property real or personal situated therein." See also Blythe v. Hinckley, 180 U. S. 333, 21 S. Ct. 390, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 557. On the question whether the United States has the power to regulate testamentary dispositions or laws of inheritance of aliens, in reference to property within the states, see Frederickson v. Louisiana, (1859) 23 How. 445, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 577.

Mining property.—The provisions of the Act of 1887 were held to apply to mines. (1887) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 26. But aliens were allowed to advance money to develop mining property or to contract with American owners to work mines by personal contracts for hire or by bona fide leases for a reasonable time. (1869) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 26.

Location of mining claim by alien.—The fact that a mining claim is located by an alien does not render the location illegal or void, but, at most, it is only voidable at the instance of the government; and a subsequent declaration of intention to become a citizen by a locator, or one having an interest in the claim, prior to the inception of any adverse rights, relates back to the date of the location or acquisition of the alien's interest and validates the transaction. Shea v. Nilima, (1904) 133 Fed. 209.

So likewise it has been held that a deed of a mining claim from an original locator to an alien operates as a transfer of the claim to such alien grantee, subject to question as to his incapacity to take by reason of his alienage, by the government only. Manuel v. Wulff, (1894) 152 U. S. 505, 14 S. Ct. 651, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 532. See also O'Reilly v. Campbell, (1886) 116 U. S. 418, 6 S. Ct. 421, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 669; Hammer v. Garfield Min., etc., Co., (1889) 130 U. S. 291, 9 S. Ct. 548, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 964.

Agreement to locate claims.—An agreement between two aliens to acquire or locate mining claims in Alaska for their joint benefit is not void; nor does the fact of their alienage prevent one who subsequently declared his intention to become a citizen from enforcing the contract by recovering his interest in a claim located in the name of the other pursuant to such agreement. Shea v. Nilima, (1904) 133 Fed. 209.

SEC. 2. [Exceptions.] That this Act shall not apply to land now owned in any of the Territories of the United States by aliens, which was acquired on or before March third, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, so long as it is held by the then owners, their heirs or legal representatives, nor to any alien who shall become a bona fide resident of the United States, and any alien who shall become a bona fide resident of the United States, or shall have declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States in the manner provided by law, shall have the right to acquire and hold lands in either of the Territories of the United States upon the same terms as citizens of the United States: Provided, That if any such resident alien shall cease to be a bona fide resident of the United States then such alien shall have ten years from the time he ceases to be such bona fide resident in which to alienate such lands. This Act shall not be construed to prevent any persons not citizens of the United States from acquiring or holding lots or parcels of lands in any incorporated or platted city, town, or village, or in any mine or mining claim, in any of the Territories of the United States. [29 Stat. L. 618.]

Section 2 of the original Act of March 3, 1887, read as follows: "SEC. 2. That no corporation or association more than twenty per centum of the stock of which is or may be owned by any person or persons, corporation or corporations, association or associations, not citizens of the United States, shall hereafter acquire or hold or own any real estate hereafter acquired in any of the Territories of the United States or of the District of Columbia." [24 Stat. L. 477.]

SEC. 3. [How aliens may acquire lands.] That this Act shall not prevent aliens from acquiring lands or any interests therein by inheritance or in the ordinary course of justice in the collection of debts, nor from acquiring liens on real estate or any interest therein, nor from lending money and securing the same upon real estate or any interest therein; nor from enforcing any such lien, nor from acquiring and holding title to such real estate, or any interest therein, upon which a lien may have heretofore or may hereafter be fixed, or upon which a loan of money may have been heretofore or hereafter made and secured: Provided, however, That all lands so acquired shall be sold within ten years after title shall be perfected in him under said sale or the same shall escheat to the United States and be forfeited as hereinafter provided. [29 Stat. L. 618.]

Section 3 of the original Act of March 3, 1887, read as follows: "SEC. 3. That no corporation other than those organized for the construction or operation of railways, canals, or turnpikes shall acquire, hold, or own more than five thousand acres of land in any of the Territories of the United States; And no railroad, canal, or turnpike corporation shall hereafter acquire, hold, or own lands in any Territory, other than as may be necessary for the proper operation of its railroad, canal, or turnpike, except such lands as may have been granted to it by act of Congress. But the prohibition of this section shall not affect the title to any lands now lawfully held by any such corporation." [24 Stat. L. 477.]

Title by inheritance.—There is a plain implication in the Act of 1887 that property in the District of Columbia and in the territories may be acquired by aliens by inheritance under existing laws. Geoffroy v. Riggs, (1890) 133 U. S. 258, 10 S. Ct. 295, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 642.

SEC. 4. [Alien may convey before suit.] That any alien who shall hereafter hold lands in any of the Territories of the United States in contravention of the provisions of this Act may nevertheless convey his title thereto at any time before the institution of escheat proceedings as hereinafter provided: Provided, however, That if any such conveyance shall be made by such alien, either to an alien or to a citizen of the United States, in trust and for the purpose and with the intention of evading the provisions of this Act, such conveyance shall be null and void, and any such lands so conveyed shall be forfeited and escheat to the United States. [29 Stat. L. 618.]

Section 4 of the original Act of March 3, 1887, read as follows: "SEC. 4. That all property acquired, held, or owned in violation of the provisions of this act shall be forfeited to the United States, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney-General to enforce every such forfeiture by bill in equity or other proper process. And in any suit or proceeding that may be commenced to enforce the provisions of this act, it shall be the duty of the court to determine the very right of the matter without regard to matters of form, joinder of parties, multifariousness, or other matters not affecting the substantial rights either of the United States or of the parties concerned in any such proceeding arising out of the matters in this act mentioned." [24 Stat. L. 477.]

The act permits an alien to sell any lands in the territory before escheat proceedings if the lands are held by him against the prohibition of the statute, and to receive the proceeds of such lands if sold in escheat proceedings. Tornanses v. Melsing, (C. C. A. 1901) 109 Fed. 710.

SEC. 5. [Forfeiture of lands unlawfully held — escheat suits.] That it shall be the duty of the Attorney-General of the United States, when he shall be informed or have reason to believe that land in any of the Territories of the United States are being held contrary to the provisions of this Act, to institute or cause to be instituted suit in behalf of the United States in the district court of the Territory in the district where such land or a part thereof may be situated, praying for the escheat of the same on behalf of the United States to the United States: Provided, That before any such suit is instituted the Attorney-General shall give or cause to be given ninety days' notice by registered letter of his intention to sue, or by personal notice directed to or delivered to the owner of said land, or the person who last rendered the same for taxation, or his agent, and to all other persons having an interest in such lands of which he may have actual or constructive notice.

In the event personal notice can not be obtained in some one of the modes above provided, then said notice shall be given by publication in some newspaper published in the county where the land is situate, and if no newspaper is published in said county then the said notice shall be published in some newspaper nearest said county. [29 Stat. L. 619.]

Statute not self-executing.— Under the Act of 1887 it was held that the statute is not self-executing and until the attorney-general has enforced a forfeiture the title of an alien is not subject to attack by others. Johnson v. Elkins, (1893) 1 App. Cas. (D. C.) 430.

SEC. 6. [Sale on judgment of escheat — dismissal of suit.] That if it shall be determined upon the trial of any such escheat proceedings that the lands are held contrary to the provisions of this Act, the court trying said cause shall render judgment condemning such lands and shall order the same to be sold as under execution; and the proceeds of such sale, after deducting costs of such suit, shall be paid to the clerk of such court so rendering judgment, and said fund shall remain in the hands of such clerk for one year from the date of such payment, subject to the order of the alien owner of such lands, or his heirs or legal representatives; and if not claimed within the period of one year, such clerk shall pay the same into the treasury of the Territory in which the lands may be situated, for the benefit of the available school fund of said Territory: Provided, That the defendant in any such escheat proceedings may, at any time before final judgment, suggest and show to the court that he has conformed with the law, either becoming a bona fide resident of the United States, or by declaring his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States, or by the doing or happening of any other act which, under the provisions of this Act, would entitle him to hold or own real estate, which being admitted or proved, such suit shall be dismissed on payment of costs and a reasonable attorney fee to be fixed by the court. [29 Stat. L. 619.]

SEC. 7. [District of Columbia excepted — public lands not affected.] That this Act shall not in any manner be construed to refer to the District of Columbia, nor to authorize aliens to acquire title from the United States to any of the public lands of the United States or to in any manner affect or change the laws regulating the disposal of the public lands of the United States. And the Act of which this Act is an amendment shall remain in force and unchanged by this Act so far as it refers to or affects real estate in the District of Columbia. [29 Stat. L. 619.]

Application in District of Columbia.—The Act of March 3, 1887, for which this Act is a substitute, was amended by the Act of March 9, 1888, 25 Stat. L. 45, ch. 30, by providing that "the same shall not apply to or operate in the District of Columbia, so far as relates to the ownership of legations, or the ownership of residences by representatives of foreign Governments, or attachés thereof."

The privilege of ownership of lands in the District of Columbia was extended to aliens by the Act of Feb. 23, 1905, ch. 733, § 1, infra, p. 369.

SEC. 8. [Repeal.] That all laws and parts of laws so far as they conflict with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed. [29 Stat. L. 619.]

An Act To amend the Act entitled "An Act to better define and regulate the rights of aliens to hold and own real estate in the Territories," approved March second, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven.

[SEC. 1.] [Alien ownership of lands in District of Columbia.] That the Act entitled "An Act to better define and regulate the rights of aliens to hold and own real estate in the Territories," approved March second, eighteen hundred and ninety-seven, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to extend to aliens the same rights and privileges concerning the acquisition, holding, owning, and disposition of real estate in the District of Columbia as by that Act are conferred upon them in respect of real estate in the Territories of the United States. [33 Stat. L. 733.]

The provisions here amended are set out supra, p. 365.

SEC. 2. [Repeal.] That all laws and parts of laws so far as they conflict with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed. [33 Stat. L. 733.]

I. IMPORTATION OF ANIMALS.

SEC. 6. [Importation of diseased animals prohibited — penalties.] That the importation of neat cattle, sheep, and other ruminants, and swine, which are diseased or infected with any disease, or which shall have been exposed to such infection within sixty days next before their exportation, is hereby prohibited; and any person who shall knowingly violate the foregoing provision shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction, be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding three years, and any vessel or vehicle used in such unlawful importation with the knowledge of the master or owner of said vessel or vehicle that such importation is diseased or has been exposed to infection as herein described, shall be forfeited to the United States. [26 Stat. L. 416.]

This and the following sections 7, 8, 9, and 10, are from an Act of Aug. 30, 1890, ch. 839, entitled "An Act for an inspection of meats for exportation, prohibiting the importation of adulterated articles of food or drink, and authorizing the President to make proclamation in certain cases, and for other purposes."

For sections 1 to 5 of this Act, which deal with adulterated food and drink, see the title IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

The admission of tick-infested cattle from Mexico was regulated by the Act of March 4, 1911, ch. 238, § 1, infra, p. 376.

SEC. 7. [Quarantine of imported animals.] That the Secretary of Agriculture be, and is hereby, authorized, at the expense of the owner, to place and retain in quarantine all neat cattle, sheep, and other ruminants, and all swine, imported into the United States, at such ports as he may designate for such purpose, and under such conditions as he may by regulation prescribe, respectively, for the several classes of animals above described; and for this purpose he may have and maintain possession of all lands, buildings, animals, tools, fixtures, and appurtenances now in use for the quarantine of neat cattle, and hereafter purchase, construct, or rent as may be necessary, and he may appoint veterinary surgeons, inspectors, officers, and employees by him deemed necessary to maintain such quarantine, and provide for the execution of the other provisions of this act. [26 Stat. L. 416.]

See the note to section 6 of this Act supra.

As to quarantine districts generally see subdivision III of this title, infra, p. 390.

Food and attendance for quarantined cattle.—Under this section the Secretary of Agriculture may adopt and enforce regulations requiring that food and attendance be provided to quarantined cattle by the owners. The secretary may hold such cattle until the expenses are repaid and sell them upon failure or refusal to repay within a reasonable time. (1895) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 193.

SEC. 8. [No importation except at quarantine ports — slaughter of infected animals.] That the importation of all animals described in this act into any port in the United States, except such as may be designated by the Secretary of Agriculture, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, as quarantine stations, is hereby prohibited; And the Secretary of Agriculture may cause to be slaughtered such of the animals named in this act as may be, under regulations prescribed by him, adjudged to be infected with any contagious disease, or to have been exposed to infection so as to be dangerous to other animals; And that the value of animals so slaughtered as being so exposed to infection but not infected may be ascertained by the agreement of the Secretary of Agriculture and owners thereof, if practicable; otherwise, by the appraisal by two persons familiar with the character and value of such property, to be appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture, whose decision, if they agree, shall be final; otherwise, the Secretary of Agriculture shall decide between them, and his decision shall be final; and the amount of the value thus ascertained shall be paid to the owner thereof out of money in the Treasury appropriated for the use of the Bureau of Animal Industry; but no payment shall be made for any animal imported in violation of the provisions of this act. If any animal subject to quarantine according to the provisions of this act are brought into any port of the United States where no quarantine station is established the collector of such port shall require the same to be conveyed by the vessel on which they are imported or are found to the nearest quarantine station, at the expense of the owner. [26 Stat. L. 416.]

See the notes to section 6 of this Act supra.

Slaughter of animals.—The above language authorizing the slaughter of infected animals is permissive and not mandatory. The secretary may slaughter sheep adjudged to be infected with a contagious disease or exposed to infection, and in making compensation he is limited to those which were exposed to infection but not then infected. (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 390.

Congress intended that the exposed animals imported in violation of the Act are to be slaughtered as well as the others. The authority of the department to seize and slaughter the animals without compensation is doubtful. The secretary is to adopt and enforce regulations for adjudging whether the animals are diseased or have been so exposed as to be dangerous and to slaughter if his judgment approves of such a course. (1897) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 460.

SEC. 9. [Importation of all animals suspended by proclamation.] That whenever, in the opinion of the President, it shall be necessary for the protection of animals in the United States against infectious or contagious diseases, he may, by proclamation, suspend the importation of all or any class of animals for a limited time, and may change, modify, revoke, or renew such proclamation, as the public good may require; and during the time of such suspension the importation of any such animals shall be unlawful. [26 Stat. L. 416.]

See the notes to section 6 of this Act supra.

SEC. 10. [Inspection of all imported animals—disposal of animals, etc.] That the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause careful inspection to be made by a suitable officer of all imported animals described in this act, to ascertain whether such animals are infected with contagious diseases or have been exposed to infection so as to be dangerous to other animals, which shall then either be placed in quarantine or dealt with according to the regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture; and all food, litter, manure, clothing, utensils, and other appliances that have been so related to such animals on board ship as to be judged liable to convey infection shall be dealt with according to the regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture; * * * [26 Stat. L. 417.]

See the notes to section 6 of this Act supra.

The latter part of this section relates to the inspection of animals intended for export, and the disinfection of vessels, and is given infra, p. 394.

[SEC. 1.] [Admission of tick-infested cattle.] * * * The Act of August thirtieth, eighteen hundred and ninety, is hereby amended so as to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture, within his discretion, and under such joint regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Treasury, to permit the admission of tick-infested cattle from Mexico into that part of Texas below the southern cattle quarantine line; [36 Stat. L. 1240.]

This is a provision of the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1911, ch. 238. The Act of August 30, 1890, referred to is given supra, p. 374.

H. Subsection 1. [Importation of neat cattle and hides.] That the importation of neat cattle and the hides of neat cattle from any foreign country into the United States is prohibited: Provided, That the operation of this section shall be suspended as to any foreign country or countries, or any parts of such country or countries, whenever the Secretary of the Treasury shall officially determine, and give public notice thereof, that such importation will not tend to the introduction or spread of contagious or infectious diseases among the cattle of the United States; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and empowered, and it shall be his duty, to make all necessary orders and regulations to carry this section into effect, or to suspend the same as herein provided, and to send copies thereof to the proper officers in the United States and to such officers or agents of the United States in foreign countries as he shall judge necessary. [38 Stat. L. 195.]

This and the following paragraph are from the Underwood Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, ch. 16, § IV, and supersede similar provisions in R. S. secs. 2493, 2494, 2495; the Act of Aug. 8, 1894, ch. 238, § 1, 28 Stat. L. 269, the Act of April 23, 1897, ch. 1, § 1, 30 Stat. L. 7, and the Act of July 24, 1897, ch. 11, 30 Stat. L. 210.

By the Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1913, ch. 16, § 1, par. 397, 38 Stat. L. 153, provision is made for the importation free of duty of pure-bred animals for breeding purposes. See the title CUSTOMS DUTIES.

H. Subsection 2. [Punishment for violations.] That any person convicted of a willful violation of any of the provisions of the preceding subsection shall be fined not exceeding $500, or imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court. [38 Stat. L. 195.]

See the notes to the preceding paragraph.

II. TRANSPORTATION OF ANIMALS.

An Act To provide for the safe transport and humane treatment of export cattle from the United States to foreign countries, and for other purposes.

[Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 521, 26 Stat. L. 833.]

[SEC. 1.] [Accommodations for export cattle.] That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized to examine all vessels which are to carry export cattle from the ports of the United States to foreign countries, and to prescribe by rules and regulations or orders the accommodations which said vessels shall provide for export cattle, as to space, ventilation, fittings, food and water supply and such other requirements as he may decide to be necessary for the safe and proper transportation and humane treatment of such animals. [26 Stat. L. 833.]

As to transportation of diseased live stock by railroads or vessels see section 6 of the Act of May 29, 1884, establishing a Bureau of Animal Industry, infra, p. 406.

As to transportation of animals on passenger vessels see CARRIERS.

As to transportation of game see PENAL LAWS.

SEC. 2. [Penalties for violations.] That whenever the owner, owners, or master of any vessel carrying export cattle shall wilfully violate or cause or permit to be violated any rule, regulation or order made pursuant to the foregoing section the vessel in respect of which such violation shall occur may be prohibited from again carrying cattle from any port of the United States for such length of time, not exceeding one year, as the Secretary of Agriculture may direct, and such vessel shall be refused clearance from any port of the United States accordingly. [26 Stat. L. 833.]

An Act To prevent cruelty to animals while in transit by railroad or other means of transportation from one State or Territory or the District of Columbia into or through another State or Territory or the District of Columbia, and repealing sections forty-three hundred and eighty-six, forty-three hundred and eighty-seven, forty-three hundred and eighty-eight, forty-three hundred and eighty-nine, and forty-three hundred and ninety of the United States Revised Statutes.

[SEC. 1.] [Transportation of animals — time limit for continuous confinement — extension of time — unloading sheep.] That no railroad, express company, car company, common carrier other than by water, or the receiver, trustee, or lessee of any of them, whose road forms any part of a line of road over which cattle, sheep, swine, or other animals shall be conveyed from one State or Territory or the District of Columbia into or through another State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or the owners or masters of steam, sailing, or other vessels carrying or transporting cattle, sheep, swine, or other animals from one State or Territory or the District of Columbia into or through another State or Territory or the District of Columbia, shall confine the same in cars, boats, or vessels of any description for a period longer than twenty-eight consecutive hours without unloading the same in a humane manner, into properly equipped pens for rest, water, and feeding, for a period of at least five consecutive hours, unless prevented by storm or by other accidental or unavoidable causes which can not be anticipated or avoided by the exercise of due diligence and foresight: Provided, That upon the written request of the owner or person in custody of that particular shipment, which written request shall be separate and apart from any printed bill of lading, or other railroad form, the time of confinement may be extended to thirty-six hours. In estimating such confinement, the time consumed in loading and unloading shall not be considered, but the time during which the animals have been confined without such rest or food or water on connecting roads shall be included, it being the intent of this Act to prohibit their continuous confinement beyond the period of twenty-eight hours, except upon the contingencies hereinbefore stated: Provided, That it shall not be required that sheep be unloaded in the nighttime, but where the time expires in the nighttime in case of sheep the same may continue in transit to a suitable place for unloading, subject to the aforesaid limitation of thirty-six hours. [34 Stat. L. 607.]

This is the first section of the "Live Stock Transportation Act."

Provisions similar to those of this section were contained in R. S. sec. 4386 repealed by section 5 of this Act, infra, p. 390.

Constitutionality.—This statute comes within the constitutional right of Congress. U. S. v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (1907) 156 Fed. 249.

The provision of this section authorizing the shipper of cattle or the person accompanying them to extend the time of their confinement to thirty-six hours, is not such a delegation of legislative powers as would render the law unconstitutional. Southern Pac. Co. v. U. S., (1909) 171 Fed. 360.

In U. S. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (1883) 15 Fed. 209, the court held that the provisions of sections 4386 to 4390 of the Revised Statutes, which were substantially similar to the present Act, were directly within the terms of the Constitution, which confers upon Congress the power to regulate commerce among the several states. The statute "imposes regulations upon a particular class of traffic between states, and declares in what manner and upon what conditions it shall be carried on. The statute cannot be any the less within the constitutional authority of Congress because its object is to require the humane treatment of live animals when in course of transportation as articles of commerce from one state to another."

Purpose of statute.—The primary purpose of the Act, as exhibited by its title, is to prevent cruelty to animals in transit, its declared intent being to prohibit their continuous confinement beyond the period of twenty-eight hours, except upon certain contingencies therein stated, and to make sure that cattle confined in cars shall not go without water, etc., for more than thirty-six hours. The duty of seeing to compliance with these requirements is placed upon the carrier. U. S. v. Oregon R., etc., Co., (1908) 163 Fed. 640; U. S. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. (E. D. Pa. 1915) 223 Fed. 206; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Hill, (Tex. 1914) 171 S. W. 1028.

Under the common law the carrier was free to exercise its own judgment as to when stock being transported by it should be fed and watered, subject only to the requirement that this should be done at reasonable intervals, and that the needs of the stock should not be unreasonably neglected. But when Congress enacted the federal twenty-eight hour law, this was a legislative direction that an interstate carrier could keep cattle on board cars without feed or water for twenty-eight hours, and if requested by the shipper, they could be kept for twelve hours longer than that. Kent v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1915) 189 Mo. App. 424, 176 S. W. 1105.

What law governs.—To the extent that this Act fixes the duties and liabilities of the shipper and carrier in interstate transportation, it is obviously controlling, and displaces any state law on the subject. Gilliland v. Southern R. Co., (1910) 85 S. C. 26, 67 S. E. 20, 137 A. S. R. 861, 27 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1106.

The statute does not abrogate the common-law liability for the negligent confinement of animals during their transportation. Durrett v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (N. M. 1915) 146 Pac. 962, wherein it appeared that on the trial below in an action to recover damages occasioned to cattle shipped over the defendant railroad, the court gave the following instruction to the jury: "The court instructs the jury that the law imposes upon a common carrier, such as the defendant, the duty to furnish reasonable facilities and opportunities to care for, feed, water, and tend to stock during transportation; and if you believe from the evidence in this case that, when the shipment in question arrived at Tucumcari, it was necessary for the safety of said cattle that they be unloaded and fed and watered, and that the defendant did not have at said place and at said time proper means and facilities for so doing, and that, by reason thereof, said stock was damaged, then you should allow the plaintiff such damages as he has sustained, unless you further find that the plaintiff, by his acts and conduct, waived such unloading, watering, feeding, etc." On appeal, the defendant urged that this instruction was erroneous because the shipment was an interstate shipment controlled by the federal statute which fixes the time cattle can be kept in transit by the railway company at twenty-eight hours. Holding that the instruction was proper the court said: "A brief excerpt from 4 R. C. L. § 451, disposes of this contention: 'The object of the federal statute being to prohibit the confinement of animals longer than the time specified, the statute is not a grant of privilege to the carrier authorizing it to confine the stock for the period of time therein mentioned, irrespective of the question of negligence in so doing. The question of negligence, as to such confinement, is still left as at common law, notwithstanding the statute."

Instructions.—In a common-law action for damages based on a negligent delay in the shipment of cattle an instruction based on a cause of action given by the federal twenty-eight hour law is erroneous, being wholly beyond the scope of the pleadings. McFall v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1914) 181 Mo. App. 142, 168 S. W. 341.

Interstate and intrastate.—It has been held that section 4386 of the Revised Statutes, superseded by the present substantially similar Act, related only to interstate carriers. Thus in U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1883) 18 Fed. 480, the court said: "It is intended by this law to affect only those companies whose roads form a part of a line of roads over which animals are conveyed, extending from one state to another. If the line lies wholly within the territorial limits of any state, then this would be a matter not given to Congress by the Constitution; this act of the national legislature would not apply, and we would have to look to state legislation for relief."

In U. S. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (1883) 15 Fed. 209, the court said: "A railroad company in this state, whose road forms part of a line of road over which live animals are conveyed from another state to points in this state, and which receives from its connecting roads to be transported in this state animals which have been brought from another state, is engaged in interstate commerce, and as such is within the terms of the Act of Congress."

A railroad company operating a line of railroad over which cattle, sheep, swine, and other animals are conveyed from one or more states to other states, has not violated the provisions of this section where the alleged violation consisted in the unlawful confinement of swine in a shipment from one point within the state to another within it, over a line entirely within the state. U. S. v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., (1882) 13 Fed. 642. See also Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Gray, (Tex. Civ. App. (1894) 24 S. W. 837, reversed in part (1894) 87 Tex. 312, 28 S. W. 280.

Extraterritorial operation.—This Act, though construed to apply to interstate shipments from one state to another through a foreign country, is not objectionable as extraterritorial in operation, since the offense is complete by continued confinement only after the statutory time has expired; it being immaterial that a part of the time has been consumed by transportation in a foreign country. U. S. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (1911) 184 Fed. 971; Grand Trunk Ry. Co. of Canada v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 191 Fed. 803.

Liability of receivers.—Receivers are specifically enumerated among the classes of persons who are liable under this enactment. The former statute, section 4386 Revised Statutes, did not enumerate receivers, and it was held under that section that as the statute was penal the courts could not, in this class of cases, attribute inadvertence or oversight to the legislature when enumerating the classes subjected to the penal enactment, nor depart from the settled meaning of words or phrases in order to bring persons not named within the supposed purpose of the statute and that consequently they were not within the letter of the statute and not necessarily within its purpose or spirit. It did not follow, however, under such construction of the statute, that it would be without operation where railroads were in the hands of receivers. The owners and custodians of the stock would still remain subject to the punishment prescribed. U. S. v. Harris, (1900) 177 U. S. 305, 20 S. Ct. 609, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 780.

Connecting carrier.—There has been some diversity in the decisions of the various districts as to whether or not the "twenty-eight hour law," respecting the interstate shipment of live stock, admits of the construction that the length of time consumed in the transportation by the antecedent carrier can be carried over and charged to the connecting carrier, who independently does not run over the twenty-eight or thirty-six hours' time without unloading, feeding and watering. In U. S. v. Stockyards Terminal Co., (1909) 172 Fed. 452, it was held that where the initial carrier of live stock has been subjected to the penalty imposed by this Act for confining live stock longer than permitted without unloading, rest, water, and feeding, in a second action against a connecting carrier to recover for the same confinement, the first twenty-eight hours or thirty-six hours which were necessarily included in the first action cannot be counted against the defendant or the connecting line.

In Northern Pac. Terminal Co. v. U. S., (1911) 184 Fed. 603, it appeared that the defendant, a terminal railroad company, received a car load of horses from a connecting railroad company, which had transported them in interstate commerce. Such carrier had kept them confined in the car for more than twenty-eight hours without unloading for rest, water, and feeding, in violation of the twenty-eight hour law, and was indicted and fined therefor. The defendant received them for transportation over its line for some 1,300 feet to stockyards, and moved them to such yards with all speed possible, and there unloaded them for rest, water, and feed. It was held that defendant was not chargeable with violation of the statute, but that, on the contrary, its action aided in giving effect to its object and purpose.

But in U. S. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (1911) 184 Fed. 971, it was held that where animals have been confined for the entire statutory period before being delivered to a connecting carrier, it is not necessary that a new period equal to the statutory time must again expire before the connecting carrier can be held guilty of violating the Act; the liability being complete on the connecting carrier's continuing the transportation toward the destination except to transport them to the yards at the junction point to unload them, under the provision that, in estimating the confinement, the time consumed in loading and unloading shall not be considered, but the time during which they have been confined on connecting roads is to be included.

So also in U. S. v. Northern Pac. Terminal Co., (1911) 186 Fed. 947, it was held that where a terminal company's railroad formed a part of a continuous line of interstate transportation over which live stock was transported, and the animals had been confined in the cars without being unloaded for food, water, and rest for a period longer than that prescribed by the twenty-eight hour law before being delivered to the terminal company for transportation to the stockyards for unloading, the terminal company could not relieve itself from liability for continuing such transportation on the ground that it found the cattle so confined at a place where they could not be unloaded except by being taken to the stockyards, nor, except in exceptional cases, because its violation of the law would subserve a humane purpose; the terminal company being under no obligation to accept the cattle from its connecting carrier under such circumstances.

Similarly, in United States v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 220 Fed. 944, it appeared that a car load of horses came to the defendant, after the horses had been confined without rest, food or water for eight and one-half hours in excess of the statutory period of thirty-six hours, to which provision of the law it was subject, and of this fact the defendant had knowledge. After the lapse of two and one-half hours it unloaded the horses at its nearest point for performing this service for rest, food and water. It was conceded that the actual running time of the car from the point at which it was received by the defendant to the nearest unloading point, exclusive of necessary switching movement, was one hour and five minutes. The court held that the defendant was guilty of a wilful though unintentional violation of the statute. And to the same effect see U. S. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1913) 206 Fed. 513. See also U. S. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 160 Fed. 526.

Likewise, under the former statute, section 4386, it was held that in computing the time of confinement, the period during which the animals were confined by the initial carrier prior to their delivery to the connecting carrier must be included. U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1883) 18 Fed. 480.

It has been held under the former statute, section 4386, that the refusal of the first connecting carrier to receive a shipment of cattle from the first carrier did not relieve the first carrier from liability for failure to comply with the provisions of the statute, when, by reason of such refusal, the cattle were kept on the cars, on its own road, more than twenty-eight hours without being unloaded, fed, and watered; and this was so notwithstanding the terms of the shipping contract relieving it of liability beyond the line of its own road. Its duty did not cease with a tender of the cars to the next carrier. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Berchfield, (1898) 19 Tex. Civ. App. 288, 46 S. W. 900.

Liability of connecting carrier for delay of terminal company.—The duty of a connecting carrier is not discharged until it has been imposed upon the carrier next in order, and where a terminal company employed by the connecting carrier to transfer a shipment to a succeeding carrier, fails to unload the stock within the time required by the statute, the connecting carrier is liable for such violation. In such a case the terminal company is a mere agency or instrumentality which the connecting carrier uses to perform its transportation duties. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1914) 213 Fed. 332.

Liability of terminal company for delay of connecting carrier.—In St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal R. Co. v. United States, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1913) 209 Fed. 600, it appeared that the plaintiff, a terminal railroad company whose line connected with the eastern terminus of a through line in the city of St. Louis, and made the only connection between such terminus and the nearest stockyards where live stock could be unloaded, accepted from such connecting carrier cars of cattle which had already been confined for a longer time than permitted by this act, and moved them with all reasonable dispatch to such yards where they were unloaded. The court held that such acceptance on the part of the terminal carrier did not make it a party to the violation of this Act by the connecting carrier and that its action was a recognition of the purpose of the statute, the alleviation of the condition of dumb animals in transit, rather than a violation.

Initial and connecting carrier both in fault.—A judgment against a connecting carrier for a violation of the statute is not a good defense to an action against the initial carrier who also was delinquent. Where the initial carrier violates the statute, and incurs the penalty thereunder, and the connecting carrier receives the shipment and continues its movement in interstate commerce toward its destination without unloading for rest, food and water, such connecting carrier commits an independent act of offense against the statute. In such case each carrier is liable to an action, not for the same offense, but each for a separate act constituting a violation of the statute, and a verdict and judgment against the one and payment thereof in no way exonerates the other from its liability for its independent act of violation. U. S. v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 221 Fed. 1000.

A judgment against an initial carrier for a violation of the statute is not a good defense to an action against the connecting carrier who was also delinquent. New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1913) 203 Fed. 953.

Knowledge of initial carrier imputed to connecting carrier.—In New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. v. United States, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1913) 203 Fed. 953, the court said: "Two cars loaded with horses were shipped from Girard, Kan., consigned to shippers' order at the defendant's stockyard in East Buffalo. The routing was via the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company to Kansas City, thence by the Wabash Railroad Company through Missouri, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, and Canada, to Black Rock, Buffalo, where the cars were received by the defendant to be transported to destination, a distance of seven miles. The Wabash Company did not unload the horses for food, water and rest between Peru, Ind., and Black Rock, a period of 38 hours and 55 minutes. The defendant occupied 3 hours and 35 minutes in transporting the cars to destination in East Buffalo.

"The United States instituted these two actions to recover of the defendant a penalty of $500 for each car for violation of Act of June 29, 1906, 34 Stat. 607.

"The complaint alleged that the defendant was not prevented from complying with the act by storm or other accidental and unavoidable causes which could not be anticipated or avoided by the exercise of due diligence and foresight, but knowingly and wilfully failed to unload the horses in transit as aforesaid.

"The defendant filed answers, which alleged that it received the cars at Black Rock from its connecting carrier, the Wabash Railroad Company, without knowing the time the horses had been confined, and transported them within the usual and reasonable time to destination in East Buffalo. . . .

"At the trial a jury was duly waived and the cause submitted to the court. The parties stipulated that the facts stated in the complaint were true; also that the time of confinement of the horses had been extended from 28 to 36 hours, the defendant reserving the right to show that when it received the cars it did not know that the horses had been confined longer than the law allowed; also to prove that, if it had refused to transport the cars, they would have had to go back to Michigan, a trip taking from 15 to 20 hours, before the horses could have been unloaded, because, being carried in bond, they could not be unloaded in Canada; also to prove that the usual time for transporting live stock from Black Rock to the stockyards was from 1½ hours to 5 hours, depending upon circumstances.

"The first question is: Did the defendant act knowingly in the transportation of the cars; that is, did it know when the horses had been last unloaded? Relying, no doubt, upon the proposition that the burden of proof lay upon the government, the defendant gave no evidence at all upon the subject. But we think it was bound to make reasonable inquiry as to this fact. The humane purpose of the law would be frequently frustrated if the government were compelled to prove facts directly and often exclusively within the knowledge of the carrier. When the government had proved that the time had long elapsed within which the horses should have been unloaded, knowledge of that fact was properly imputed by Judge Hazel to the defendant, in the absence of any evidence from it that it had made reasonable inquiry and could not ascertain the fact.

"The next question is: Did the defendant act wilfully in the premises; that is, unnecessarily disregard the provisions and purpose of the law? Obviously it did the best thing for the horses in taking them to the stockyard in East Buffalo. The time it could properly use in so doing would depend upon whether the period of confinement had or had not expired. Knowledge of the fact that it had expired being imputed to the defendant, it was bound to transport them as quickly as possible. Prima facie 3 hours and 35 minutes was an unreasonable time to move the cars seven miles. The only testimony the defendant offered upon the subject was the opinion of two freight conductors that, in view of the condition of the belt line in getting ready for grade crossing improvements, the time actually occupied was reasonable. This was entirely insufficient. The facts should have been stated, so that the court might determine whether the time was reasonable or not."

It is for the jury to say whether a delay in unloading was caused through accident or unavoidable cause, and whether the defendant exercised due diligence and foresight in an endeavor to prevent the delay. Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co. v. United States, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1913) 205 Fed. 337.

"Other animals"—horses and mules.—It was held, under section 4386, that the words "other animals" were sufficiently comprehensive to embrace horses and mules. "The statute was not intended to apply only to such animals as are intended for food, to secure the people from consuming diseased animal food, but its object was to prevent cruelty and injury to animals that were shipped long distances upon cars or boats, by requiring that they should be unloaded, watered, fed, and allowed to rest at stated intervals. It is a humane rather than a sanitary regulation." Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. American Exch. Bank, (1896) 92 Va. 495, 23 S. E. 935, 44 L. R. A. 449.

Carrier as an insurer.—If the pens provided by the carrier are properly equipped, so that the sheep may be properly fed, watered, and rested, he has discharged his full duty, unless it is made to appear that the surrounding conditions were such that the carrier should have anticipated that the sheep would probably be molested, and thus not afforded proper rest. If such is not the law, then the carrier is made an absolute insurer of the safety of the sheep while unloaded for food, rest, and water, regardless of the fact that by the exercise of reasonable diligence he did not know, and could not have discovered, the threatened danger to which the sheep might be exposed. Beckman v. Southern Pac. Co., (1911) 39 Utah 472, 118 Pac. 118.

Liability to shipper for injuries to stock.—In Gilliland v. Southern R. Co., (1910) 83 S. C. 26, 67 S. E. 20, 137 A. S. R. 861, 27 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1106, it was held that in the absence of federal decisions on the question, this Act, which is substantially the same as the state statute regulating shipments of stock within the state, must be given the same construction and effect, and the carrier of an interstate shipment be held liable for injuries resulting from its failure to supply proper shelter and protection when stock are unloaded to be fed and watered.

Equipment of stock pens.—This Act does not require a carrier to maintain any particular kind of equipment of its stock pens, permanent or otherwise, except in so far as to render them suitable for the humane purpose of properly feeding, watering, and resting the particular shipment of stock unloaded into them. U. S. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1910) 177 Fed. 205.

Under the former statute, section 4386, it was held to be the duty of a railroad company, in carrying on interstate shipment of animals, not only to unload the same within the periods mentioned in the statutes, but to provide facilities reasonably sufficient and suitable for watering and feeding the animals and for allowing them an opportunity for rest. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Piburn, (1911) 30 Okla. 262, 120 Pac. 923.

Negligence of employees no defense.—It is no defense to an action for "knowingly and wilfully" violating this statute that the defendant made rules requiring its employees to comply with the same, and that its failure to do so was through the negligence of an employee and in violation of its rules. U. S. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (1909) 173 Fed. 764.

Due diligence and foresight.—The measure of due diligence and foresight required by this section is that diligence and foresight which persons of ordinary prudence and care commonly exercise under similar circumstances. And the due diligence and foresight which condition the anticipation and avoidance of the other accidental or unavoidable causes described in this law is that degree of diligence and foresight which reasonably prudent and careful men ordinarily exercise under similar circumstances. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. United States, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 194 Fed. 342.

Authority to request extension of time.—There is a legal presumption that one to whom an owner of animals has intrusted their possession and control for delivery to a railroad company for shipment, and who actually delivers and ships them, is authorized by the owner to make the request specified in this law, and to do any other usual act relevant to such a transaction. A railroad company is justified in relying upon this presumption, and cannot be held to have violated the law knowingly and wilfully because it confines animals more than twenty-eight and less than thirty-six hours in reliance upon this presumption, without notice or knowledge of any defect in the authority of the agent. Wabash R. Co. v. U. S., (1910) 178 Fed. 5.

Sufficiency of request.—(a) A legal request under this Act may be made by the authorized agent of the owner, or by the person in custody of the particular shipment. (b) Such a request may be printed, engraved, or stamped and partly in handwriting. (c) A legal request may be made on or in a railroad form separate and apart from a printed bill of lading or other railroad form than one which contains the request alone. (d) Such a request may be made before the transportation of the shipment commences. (e) Such a request may be made although it is not induced by any unforeseen contingency that arises after the transportation commences. Wabash R. Co. v. U. S., (1910) 178 Fed. 5; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1910) 178 Fed. 12; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1910) 178 Fed. 15; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1913) 209 Fed. 603.

Request for each shipment.—To justify confinement for a longer term than twenty-eight hours the shipper must file a written request for each shipment, and may not file a single general request applicable to all future shipments of his cattle. U. S. v. Pere Marquette R. Co., (1909) 171 Fed. 586.

Under the former statute, section 4386, R. S., it was held that where a special contract between the shipper and the carrier relieves the carrier of the duty, in the first instance, of feeding and watering at such points as it furnished reasonable facilities to the shipper to do so, in the absence of such facilities at any point the carrier would be liable for any damage resulting from the failure to feed and water. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Daggett, (1894) 87 Tex. 322, 28 S. W. 525.

It was also held under this statute that it was the duty of the railroad company to unload and feed and water stock, without a request from the person in charge of it, if he failed to do it. Brockway v. American Exp. Co., (1897) 168 Mass. 257, 47 N. E. 87.

Waiver of statutory provisions by control or otherwise.—The statute imposes upon the carrier the primary duty of seeing that the stock is not confined in cars longer than the prescribed period, for the command of the statute is, "Thou shalt not" fail to do the thing required; and, while the carrier may arrange with the shipper or the person in charge for unloading, the company cannot thereby shift the burden, and the responsibility for unloading in time still rests with it. Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co. v. United States, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1913) 205 Fed. 337.

This law positively prohibits the confinement of animals for a period longer than twenty-eight consecutive hours, save only that by special agreement and written request of the owner the time of confinement may be extended to thirty-six hours. The extreme limit, therefore, to which the wishes of the owner become relevant, is thirty-six hours. An agreement, therefore, for a confinement beyond that time, is a contract to do that which the law says may not be done, and is void and nonenforceable as a defense to the action for damages to animals transported. Webster v. Union Pac. R. Co., (D. C. Colo. 1912) 200 Fed. 597.

The Twenty-eight Hour Act is for the prevention of cruelty to animals, and not primarily for the benefit of the owners but is restrictive of their rights, and cannot be waived, except in the manner and upon the contingencies provided in the act. U. S. v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 220 Fed. 944; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Hayes, (1913) 181 Ind. 87, 102 N. E. 34, 103 N. E. 839; (1914) 104 N. E. 581.

A carrier cannot by contract relieve itself of the statutory duty to care for animals in its possession. U. S. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 223 Fed. 206.

Estimating confinement.—"In estimating the confinement, so as to determine whether or not the statute has been violated, we always come backwards from the unloading in question, and ascertain when the cattle were last before unloaded for rest, food, and water, or shipped, and when reloaded. Commencing our reckoning of time at that point, we go forward to the time when next unloaded for rest, food, and water, and if we find that the cattle were confined for more than twenty-eight hours, or more than thirty-six hours in case of consent by the owner or person in charge, and also find that unloading was not prevented by storm, or by other accidental or unavoidable causes, we have a completed violation of the law." U. S. v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 221 Fed. 1000.

The time consumed in loading and unloading stock is not to be considered as a part of their confinement in the cars permitted by the Twenty-eight Hour Law. U. S. v. Northern Pac. Terminal Co., (1911) 186 Fed. 947.

Compliance with statute as defense to delay in delivery.—Where the person in charge refused to sign the thirty-six-hour release, and cattle were shipped from Arkansas through Missouri to East St. Louis, and upon arrival at a point in Arkansas it became apparent that the shipment could not be carried to destination within the prescribed twenty-eight hours, and it was unlawful to unload such cattle in Missouri, the carrier was not negligent in unloading the cattle at the Arkansas point reached, resulting in a delay in their delivery at destination, where the only train which they could have been shipped on, which passed through the place of feeding after a lapse of the five-hour period, was a slow train which reached destination at the same time as did the faster train upon which they were carried. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Davenport, (1910) 97 Ark. 82, 133 S. W. 186.

"Stopping a shipment of cattle to feed them in compliance with the Interstate Commerce Act excuses delay in delivery caused thereby; but, if negligent delay causes the unloading of the cattle to comply with said law, then it would not excuse." Lay v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1911) 157 Mo. App. 467, 138 S. W. 884.

A delay caused solely by defendant's compliance with the provisions of the Twenty-eight Hour Law cannot be actionable, since it should be regarded as the result of the performance of a duty imposed by law. Hickey v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1913) 174 Mo. App. 408, 160 S. W. 24.

In an action by a shipper against an interstate carrier for damages for delay in a shipment of cattle the defendant has the right to have the jury instructed that in determining the matter of delay complained of the period required by this section for the purpose of feeding and watering and resting the cattle in pens should not be included. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Moore, (Tex. 1912) 149 S. W. 302.

Violation of statute as negligence.—In an action for loss and shrinkage of live stock shipped over the defendant's railroad, evidence of a violation of this statute, and that it contributed to the injury complained of, constitutes evidence of negligence, and is sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to go to the jury on the question of negligence. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Simpson, (Wyo. 1915) 151 Pac. 902.

In an action by a shipper of animals against a carrier for damages for injuries to the animals during transit a showing that the defendant violated this section and that the injuries resulted therefrom amounts to a showing of negligence per se and makes the carrier liable. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Hill, (Tex. 1914) 171 S. W. 1028.

"Contingencies hereinbefore stated."—The phrase "contingencies hereinbefore stated" as used in this section includes both the case where the carrier was prevented from unloading by storm or other accidental or unavoidable causes and the contingency of the owner's having filed a written request extending the time of confinement to thirty-six hours. U. S. v. Pere Marquette R. Co., (1909) 171 Fed. 586.

Construction of second proviso.—The meaning of the second proviso of this section regarding sheep is that if the twenty-eight-hour limit expires at night, the transit may be continued to a suitable place for unloading, without the consent of the owner or custodian, except that in no case shall the thirty-six-hour limit be exceeded. Southern Pac. Co. v. U. S., (1909) 171 Fed. 360; U. S. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1911) 185 Fed. 105.

The words "in the nighttime," with reference to the unloading of sheep, mean the period between the termination of daytime on the evening of one day and the earliest dawn of the next morning. U. S. v. Southern Pac. Co., (1907) 157 Fed. 459.

The meaning of this express provision is that where the twenty-eight-hour period expires in the nighttime, the carrier is authorized to continue the confinement of sheep for thirty-six hours, even without the shipper's consent, but not longer than thirty-six hours as declared by the proviso. Where the thirty-six-hour period will expire in the nighttime, the carrier should unload during the preceding day. U. S. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1908) 166 Fed. 160.

Termination of liability.—The carrier's liability terminates on complete delivery of the animals being made to the consignee. But what constitutes a complete delivery depends on the particular facts in each case. For example, it has been held that a delivery of cars containing animals on the consignees' private siding was not a complete delivery where they were not placed opposite the consignees' runway, which afforded the only means for loading and unloading live stock to and from cars on the siding. U. S. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 223 Fed. 202.

"Storm or other accidental or unavoidable cause."—The statute renders the carrier excusable for confining the stock in cars more than the prescribed period of time, if prevented from unloading "by storm or other accidental or unavoidable causes which cannot be anticipated or avoided by the exercise of due diligence and foresight." Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co. v. United States, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1913) 205 Fed. 337.

An "accidental or unavoidable cause" which cannot be avoided by the exercise of due diligence and foresight within the meaning of this law is a cause which reasonably prudent and careful men, under like circumstances, do not and would not ordinarily anticipate, and the effects of which under similar circumstances they do not and would not ordinarily avoid. U. S. v. Southern Pac. Co., (1907) 157 Fed. 459; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. United States, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 194 Fed. 342.

In Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. United States, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 194 Fed. 342, it appeared that a train load of seventeen cars of sheep started at five o'clock in the morning to make a run which ordinarily requires eleven hours. The train and its drawbars were inspected and found in good condition that morning. In order to unload the sheep in time, it was necessary to make the run in twelve hours. The train was delayed about two hours by the breaking of a drawbar and chain of a train which met and passed it, by the slipping of a knuckle in the coupler which separated it into two parts, and by the pulling out of two drawbars in its cars, which made it necessary to draw the two parts of the train upon a side track and recouple them. Upon its arrival the company dragged the sheep out of two of the cars in the dark within the thirty-six hours, but left fifteen of the cars unloaded until the next morning after the expiration of the thirty-six hours. It was held there was no substantial evidence that the company wilfully violated the law, and there was substantial evidence that it was prevented from unloading the sheep within the thirty-six hours by accidental or unavoidable causes which could not be anticipated or avoided by the exercise of due diligence and foresight.

But conditions reasonably to be anticipated from past experience and breakdowns en route, resulting from negligent operation or omission to furnish properly equipped and inspected engines and cars, are not accidental or unavoidable causes which cannot be anticipated and avoided by due diligence and foresight. U. S. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1908) 166 Fed. 160.

Under the former statute, section 4386, R. S., it was held, in an action against a transportation company for keeping live stock confined on the cars for a longer period than twenty-eight consecutive hours, without unloading for rest, food, and water, that it was no defense that such confinement had been caused by an accident to the train, due to negligence. The court said: "This and the following sections must be construed together, and the carrier may be said to have 'knowingly and willingly' failed to comply with the requirements of the law, if the accident was one which might have been avoided by due care; the carrier must be taken to have contemplated the reasonable consequences of his own negligence. To avail himself of the excuses of 'storm or other accidental causes,' it must appear that the consequences could not have been avoided or mitigated by the exercise of diligence. If, notwithstanding the storm, he could by due care have complied with the law, then he is at fault, because 'his own negligence is the last link in the chain of cause and effect, and in law the proximate cause' of failure to comply with the law." Newport News, etc., Val. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1894) 61 Fed. 488; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. American Exch. Bank, (1896) 92 Va. 495, 23 S. E. 935, 44 L. R. A. 449.

So where horses were shipped from St. Louis to Augusta and had been on board the train about twenty-six hours when the train arrived at ashville, the fact that the stockyards of the company were on fire when the train reached Nashville was no excuse for attaching the cars to another train which proceeded through to Chattanooga, resulting in keeping the stock on board the cars for over forty hours without rest or food or water. It was the duty of the railroad company (under the contract with the shipper, that the shipper's employee in charge should unload, feed, and water the stock) to afford the person in charge, and having care of the animals, an opportunity to unload the same upon their arrival at Nashville, or at some other place, within the period of twenty-eight hours. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Heggie, (1890) 86 Ga. 210, 12 S. E. 363, 22 A. S. R. 453.

Owner's right of action.—Under the former statute it was held that the provisions of section 4386, R. S., and following sections, imposed a duty on the railroad company for the benefit of the owners, and that failure to perform such duty constituted actionable negligence at the suit of an owner who was injured thereby. The court said: "Nor does the fact that a penalty is imposed for breach of such duty take the place of a civil action based on the negligence, unless such penalty be given to the injured party in satisfaction for the injury." Burns v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1899) 104 Wis. 646, 80 N. W. 927; Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Heggie, (1890) 86 Ga. 210, 12 S. E. 363, 22 A. S. R. 453.

It is a well-settled principle of law that one state cannot enforce the penal laws of another state or country, but, in order to come within the scope of that principle, the action or suit must be in the nature of a proceeding in favor of the state whose laws have been violated. One of the objects of this section was to prevent loss to the owners of live stock which would result from its being carried long distances by common carriers without food, water, and rest; and an owner of live stock has the right to recover from the carrier the damages caused, if any, by its violation of the statute, and, having such right, he could bring his action in the state court. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. American Exch. Bank, (1896) 92 Va. 495, 23 S. E. 935, 44 L. R. A. 449.

Though in an action brought in the state court to recover damages for the death of two horses and injury to several others while being transported over defendant's railroad, the Supreme Court of the state, in reply to the contention of the plaintiff that by section 4386 R. S. a definite rule for the transportation of animals is created, said: "With this rule and its enforcement the courts of the state are no way concerned." Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Peterson, (1891) 68 Miss. 454, 10 So. 43, 14 L. R. A. 550.

In an action by the owner of stock for damages resulting from a failure of the carrier to comply with the provisions of this section, the petition, in order to state a liability of the defendant, should show that the case is not within the statutory exceptions (1) that the delay was caused by the storm or other accidental causes, or (2) that the cars were such as to allow proper feeding, watering, space, and opportunity to rest. Hale v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., (1893) 36 Neb. 266, 54 N. W. 517.

In an action brought to recover damages resulting from the delay in transportation of a carload of cattle, it appeared that the car was carried as part of a special train, and was taken out at an intermediate station in order that the cattle might be unloaded and rested for five hours, as required by this section. The special train proceeded on its way, and the car was forwarded by the first regular freight train about seven hours after the expiration of the five hours. This train left at the regular schedule time, and no delay is shown except such as thus occurred. The mere detention of the car while awaiting the arrival of the first train by which the cattle, after being rested, could be forwarded, was not unreasonable, as the company was not bound to hold the special train to await the expiration of the five hours and thus detain other freight contained in other cars, nor could the company be required to furnish special transportation of only one carload of cattle. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Warnken, (1896) 12 Tex. Civ. App. 645, 35 S. W. 72.

SEC. 2. [Feeding animals at expense of owner — lien on animals for costs — owner may furnish food.] That animals so unloaded shall be properly fed and watered during such rest either by the owner or person having the custody thereof, or in case of his default in so doing, then by the railroad, express company, car company, common carrier other than by water, or the receiver, trustee, or lessee of any of them, or by the owners or masters of boats or vessels transporting the same, at the reasonable expense of the owner or person in custody thereof, and such railroad, express company, car company, common carrier other than by water, receiver, trustee, or lessee of any of them, owners or masters, shall in such case have a lien upon such animals for food, care, and custody furnished, collectible at their destination in the same manner as the transportation charges are collected, and shall not be liable for any detention of such animals, when such detention is of reasonable duration, to enable compliance with section one of this Act; but nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the owner or shipper of animals from furnishing food therefor, if he so desires. [34 Stat. L. 608.]

R. S. sec. 4387 contained provisions similar to those of the text as to feeding and watering, and a lien on the animals for the supplies furnished them. R. S. sec. 4390 as amended by the Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 251, provided for the enforcement of the lien in certain District Courts. Both sections were repealed by section 5 of this Act infra, p. 390.

Contracts relieving carrier of statutory duty.— Under the statute, the carrier cannot, by any contract with the shipper, relieve itself of the prescribed duty of feeding and watering the animals, if their owner or custodian fails to do so. It cannot by contract with the shipper exempt itself from liability for its own negligence; and its failure to perform the duty imposed upon it by the statute is negligence per se. Southern R. Co. v. Proctor, (1911) 3 Ala. App. 413, 57 So. 513.

Effect of statute on contracts limiting liability of carrier.— A special contract of carriage, whereby the shipper is to load, unload, reload, feed, water, tend, and care for the stock at his own expense and risk during the entire transportation, does not contravene provisions of this Act, since the Act in terms provides that the owner of the animals shall primarily be charged with feeding and watering them. Webster v. Union Pac. R. Co., (D. C. Colo. 1912) 200 Fed. 597. In this case, which was an action to recover for damage to certain sheep shipped on the defendant's railroad wherein the defendant set up various defenses, the court had this to say of the fourth defense: "The fourth defense sets up a special reduced rate of freight and a special contract of carriage, whereby the plaintiff shipper was to load, unload, reload, feed, water, tend, and care for the sheep at his own expense and risk during the entire transportation, and further alleges that any injuries suffered by the sheep were due to the carelessness of the plaintiff in and about such matters, and notwithstanding that proper facilities were provided by the defendant. It is not perceived why such agreement would not be valid as between the shipper and the railroad company. Its terms do not contravene the provisions of Act June 29, 1906, ch. 3594, 34 Stat. 607, known as the 'Twenty-eight Hour Law,' since that act in terms provides that the owner of the animals shall primarily be charged with feeding and watering them. While such a provision would not afford any defense to a prosecution by the government for failure of the railroad company, upon the owner's default, it is, as between the owner and the railroad, a sufficient defense, since it is tantamount to an allegation that the railroad company was not itself negligent, but that the negligence was that of the owner of the animals in and about a matter as to which such owner had contracted to assume the sole responsibility."

Sec. 3. [Penalty for noncompliance — exception.] That any railroad, express company, car company, common carrier other than by water, or the receiver, trustee, or lessee of any of them, or the master or owner of any steam, sailing, or other vessel who knowingly and willfully fails to comply with the provisions of the two preceding sections shall for every such failure be liable for and forfeit and pay a penalty of not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars: Provided, That when animals are carried in cars, boats, or other vessels in which they can and do have proper food, water, space, and opportunity to rest the provisions in regard to their being unloaded shall not apply. [34 Stat. L. 608.]

Similar provisions were contained in R. S. sec. 4388, repealed by section 5 of this Act infra, p. 390.

Knowingly and wilfully.—The words “knowingly and wilfully,” as employed in the Act, have been many times construed and their meaning determined. “Knowingly” signifies “with a knowledge of the facts which, taken together, constitute the failure to comply with the statute”; and “wilfully” means “purposely or obstinately, and is designed to describe the attitude of a carrier who, having a free will or choice, either intentionally disregards the statute or is plainly indifferent to its requirements.” Oregon—Washington R., etc., Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1913) 205 Fed. 337. See also a companion case between the same parties in 205 Fed. 341, and Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 194 Fed. 342; (1912) 195 Fed. 241; U. S. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1913) 204 Fed. 705; U. S. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ill. 1913) 211 Fed. 770.

The terms “knowingly and wilfully” describe an essential element of the offense on account of which the penalties are prescribed, without proof of which they cannot be recovered. Thus where a stockyards company, which, without actual knowledge that cattle have been confined nearly twenty-eight hours, and without making any effort to find out whether they have been or not, receives them from a common carrier, and with diligence hauls them a few miles to its stockyards, and there unloads them for rest, food, and water, when these stockyards are nearer to the place of the receipt of the cattle than any other place where they could be unloaded, fed, and watered, it is not guilty of “knowingly and wilfully” confining the cattle in violation of the Twenty-eight Hour Law. St. Joseph Stockyards Co. v. U. S., (1911) 187 Fed. 105.

Where defendant, a terminal railroad company, received cattle from a connecting carrier for the sole purpose of transporting them to certain stockyards to feed, water, and rest them, and then to return them to the carrier from which they had been received, not knowing that such carrier had already confined them in the cars exceeding the time allowed by this Act, the terminal carrier, having used due diligence in carrying the cattle to the stockyards and unloading them, was not guilty of itself “knowingly and wilfully” violating such Act; such words being intended to mean either an intentional violation of the statute or an indifferent disregard of its requirements. U. S. v. Stockyards Terminal R. Co., (1910) 178 Fed. 19, affirming (1909) 172 Fed. 452.

A carrier that delivers a shipment of cattle to a connecting carrier in time, according to the usual course of transportation, for their carriage to and unloading within the twenty-eight hours at pens suitably equipped for unloading, feeding, watering, and resting them, either at their destination or on their way, without notice or knowledge that they must be or will be delayed on their arrival beyond that time, cannot be held to have violated this Act of Congress knowingly and wilfully. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1910) 178 Fed. 15.

“Wilfully” as here used means purposely or obstinately and is designed to describe the attitude of a carrier, who having a free will or choice, either intentionally disregards the statute or is plainly indifferent to its requirements. St. Louis Merchants’ Bridge Terminal R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1913) 209 Fed. 600; U. S. v. Chicago Junction R. Co., (N. D. Ill. 1913) 211 Fed. 724.

“The act of Congress requires the railroad to perform a duty which primarily is imposed on the owner to feed his own stock. Properly, therefore, failure to obey is not made punitive unless the failure is with knowledge and wilful. In a word, it must reach the grade of disobedience. Carriers are, of course, bound to know the law. Knowing it, they know the time of confinement on the connecting line must be computed. Means of knowledge within reach must be resorted to. A refusal to avail themselves of such means would be evidence of that attitude of mind which is conveyed by the word wilful. Mere negligence is clearly, however, at least not necessarily inclusive of wilfulness. There is in common speech the phrase ‘wilful negligence.’ Whether wilfulness or mere negligence is a question of fact.” U. S.

v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 223 Fed. 213. See also U. S. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 223 Fed. 211.

"The obligation which is imposed upon them [a railroad company] by the act of Congress is imposed upon them as a carrier, and only as long as the animals are in the course of transmission over the railroad. Moreover, what the railroad is required to do is required of it because of the default of the owner of the animals from whom by law the railroad can recoup the expenses to which it has been subjected. All of which the railroad company is called upon to do is therefore done during the carriage, and cannot be done after the carriage has ended. The motive behind this legislation is in one of its phases at least what may be characterized as humanitarian. The element of cruelty enters into the act of omission for which the penalty is imposed. The act of the carrier must have been 'knowing and wilful.'" U. S. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 223 Fed. 207.

No outrage or evil intent is imported by the terms "knowingly and wilfully." The words mean that the acts were done intentionally and purposely. U. S. v. Sioux City Stock Yards Co., (1908) 162 Fed. 556; New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1908) 165 Fed. 833; U. S. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1908) 166 Fed. 160; U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 1909) 169 Fed. 65; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1909) 169 Fed. 69.

Knowledge of agents.—The knowledge of a railroad company's agents and servants that animals are being transported in violation of the provisions of this Act is knowledge of the company, and renders the company liable to the penalty provided by this section. Montana Cent. R. Co. v. U. S., (1908) 164 Fed. 400.

Single offense—number of cattle.—In an action against a railroad company to recover penalties incurred under the former statute, sections 4386 to 4390, the confinement of the entire number of animals for a longer period than twenty-eight consecutive hours, without unloading for rest, water, and feeding, was held to be a single offense, for which the defendants were liable to the penalty. The unlawful confinement of each animal could not be held to constitute a separate offense, and the penalty be multiplied by the whole number of animals carried. The statute fixed the penalty at "not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars." Within these limits the amount of the penalty was to be determined by the court, after verdict for the plaintiff. U. S. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., (1883) 15 Fed. 209.

Number of cars.—And where the cattle were shipped in a number of cars, but the cars constituted one train, and it appeared that all the cattle were shipped by the same consignor to the same consignee at the same time, it was manifest that the shipment of cattle was one shipment, and a failure of the carrier to comply with the provisions of section 4386 was a single offense. The unlawful confinement of each carload of animals could not be held to constitute a separate offense, and thus the penalty be multiplied by the whole number of carloads shipped. The construction of a statute so highly penal, the court held, must be strict, and nothing can be imported by construction which is not within its spirit and its letter. U. S. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1901) 107 Fed. 870.

Failure to furnish water in patent cars.—Where cattle were transported in patent cattle cars, equipped with troughs affording an opportunity to water them without unloading, but the cattle were kept in the cars for a period longer than that authorized by statute, without water being introduced in the troughs, for at least a part of the cattle, the carrier was held to be liable for the penalty provided by the Twenty-eight Hour Law. U. S. v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (1911) 186 Fed. 541.

Sufficiency of evidence.—The greater weight of the evidence is sufficient to sustain an action by the United States for a violation of the Twenty-eight Hour Law, and it is not required to establish its case by proof beyond a reasonable doubt. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1910) 178 Fed. 12; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1910) 178 Fed. 15.

Penalty.—The number of the penalties recoverable under this Act is not measured by the number of shipments on the same train, nor is the train the unit of offense; but where the same train contains live stock loaded at different periods, one penalty accrues when the period of lawful confinement for the cattle first loaded expires, and other separate and distinct penalties accrue as the time for the lawful confinement of the cattle loaded at later periods successively expires. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1911) 220 U. S. 94, 31 S. Ct. 368, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 384, modifying and affirming (1908) 159 Fed. 33, 86 C. C. A. 223; U. S. v. Southern Pac. Co., (1907) 157 Fed. 459; New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1908) 165 Fed. 833; U. S. v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 1909) 168 Fed. 699; U. S. v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (1908) 166 Fed. 160; U. S. v. Oregon R., etc., Co., (1908) 163 Fed. 642; Southern Pac. Co. v. U. S., (1909) 171 Fed. 360.

But one penalty may be recovered against a carrier violating the provisions of the Act where the time for the required unloading of two shipments loaded at different times coincides, because one shipment was forwarded under the thirty-six-hour rule, and the other was made eight hours later, under the twenty-eight hour rule, from a different station. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1911) 220 U. S. 94, 31 S. Ct. 368, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 384.

So also there is but one violation of the penalty where cattle cars, though loaded at different points, are consolidated into one train and are subsequently delivered to the connecting carrier at the same time, the consignors and consignees being the same, and the destination of the animals the same. U. S. v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1911) 191 Fed. 938.

Fixing amount of penalty.—Where there has been a verdict in favor of the government the duty of fixing the amount of the penalty devolves upon the court. U. S. v. Southern Pac. Co., (1908) 162 Fed. 412; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1910) 178 Fed. 12; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1910) 178 Fed. 15.

Jurisdictional amount of penalties.—The aggregate sum of the possible penalties sued for in several actions brought by the United States against a carrier under this Act, and consolidated, is the amount in dispute for the purpose of sustaining the appellate jurisdiction of the federal Supreme Court. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1911) 220 U. S. 94, 31 S. Ct. 368, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 384.

Effect of proviso.—The statute provides that cattle shall not be confined continuously for more than thirty-six hours unless they are carried in cars in which they can and do have proper food and water and opportunity for rest. It will be noticed that it is optional with the carrier either to unload the cattle for rest, food, and water, or to give them proper food, water, and rest or opportunity for rest while in transit without unloading. Congress primarily intended that cattle should be unloaded every twenty-eight or thirty-six hours; but if the cars are properly equipped and suitable for food and rest, then unloading is not required. When, therefore, the cars are not unloaded, all the animals contained therein must have sufficient space for lying down at the same time. The probabilities are that they will not all lie at the same time, but nevertheless opportunity must be given them to do so. U. S. v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1911) 191 Fed. 938, followed in U. S. v. Erie R. Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1911) 191 Fed. 941.

In Erie R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1912) 200 Fed. 406, the question in issue was whether the circumstance that all the cattle in a car could not obtain rest by lying down at the same time would prevent the railroad from availing itself of the proviso in this section, when the car was so large that if the movements of the cattle were regulated in some way, all of them might secure proper opportunity to rest at one time or another. The court said: "It seems to us that it is the object of the statute to secure to every animal in the shipment proper space and opportunity to rest. Not only is cruelty to a single one 'cruelty to animals,' but the landing of a single one in a condition bad for slaughtering exposes the persons who may eat the meat from that one carcass to a risk which might not exist if this statute were strictly conformed to. Every animal in this shipment might have proper opportunity to rest if they all agreed to take turns in occupying space. But such agreement could not be brought about, and, for aught that any one can tell, two or three or four cattle of this shipment may have been deprived of the opportunity to rest, even for the eight hours out of every twenty-four which is the lowest period of rest contended for by the defendant."

Where, in the shipment of cattle from Chicago to New York, one of the cars, thirty-six feet long, contained twenty-one bulls, and in a number of other cars from eighteen to nineteen large cattle were carried, it was held that the cars were too heavily loaded, it appearing by uncontradicted proof that cattle under transportation should have at least two and one-half feet of space for each animal. U. S. v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (1911) 186 Fed. 541.

Burden of bringing case within proviso.—It is not indispensable to a recovery of a penalty under this statute that the government should negative the excuse embodied in the proviso of this section. That excuse is a separate topic, a defense, and the burden is on the defendant to establish it. It is that the animals can and do have proper food, water, space, and opportunity to rest in the cars which transport them. The facts that their owner or caretaker, who accompanied them, agreed to care for, feed, and water them on their way, and that food and water with which he might have performed his agreement were easily accessible to him, are not sufficient to establish this excuse, where the animals are knowingly and wilfully confined more than twenty-eight hours and they do not actually receive proper food, or water, or space and opportunity to rest. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 195 Fed. 241.

Under the former statute, section 4388, R. S., it was held that the provisions of this section, that the requirements as to the unloading of stock shall not apply when animals are carried in cars in which they can have proper food, water, space, and opportunity to rest, did not operate as immunity to the common carrier in failing to unload animals which should be unloaded for illness or other sufficient cause. Regan v. Adams Exp. Co., (1897) 49 La. Ann. 1579, 22 So. 835.

SEC. 4. [Prosecutions.] That the penalty created by the preceding sections shall be recovered by civil action in the name of the United States in the circuit or district court holden within the district where the violation may have been committed or the person or corporation resides or carries on business; and it shall be the duty of United States attorneys to prosecute all violations of this Act reported by the Secretary of Agriculture, or which come to their notice or knowledge by other means. [34 Stat. L. 608.]

Similar provisions were contained in R. S. sec. 4389 repealed by section 5 of this Act given below.

Nature of proceeding.—So far as the ordinary rules of pleading and proof are concerned a suit under this statute is to be regarded as a civil proceeding. U. S. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (1907) 157 Fed. 459; U. S. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., (1908) 162 Fed. 412, affirmed (1909) 171 Fed. 364; Montana Cent. R. Co. v. U. S., (1908) 164 Fed. 400; New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1908) 165 Fed. 837; U. S. v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (1909) 173 Fed. 787. Contra, U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1907) 157 Fed. 979.

The proceeding for a violation of the Act being of a civil nature, the government is bound to support its case by only a preponderance of evidence. U. S. v. Southern Pac. Co., (1907) 157 Fed. 459; New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1908) 165 Fed. 837. And for the same reason writ of error lies at the instance of the government. U. S. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (1908) 159 Fed. 33, 86 C. C. A. 223; Montana Cent. R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1908) 164 Fed. 400; U. S. v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 1909) 168 Fed. 699.

Venue.—Neither section 2 of article 3 of the Constitution nor the Sixth Amendment thereto operates to require that an action to recover a penalty incurred out of the limits of a state under this Act be brought or tried in the district wherein the violation occurs; and such an action lawfully may be brought and tried in the district wherein the defendant resides or carries on business, as is provided in the above section. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1909) 169 Fed. 69; Southern Pac. Co. v. U. S., (1909) 171 Fed. 364.

Allegations of declaration or complaint and proof thereof.—An objection that the declaration in an action to recover the penalty prescribed by the statute does not discriminate clearly as to whether the defendant was "lessee" of the road upon which the violation of the statute took place is unavailing after verdict, where the declaration follows the language of the Act. New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1908) 165 Fed. 836.

The substitution for the word "confine" named in the statute, of other words having the same effect is no ground of objection, especially after verdict. New York, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1908) 165 Fed. 836.

SEC. 5. [Repeals.] That sections forty-three hundred and eighty-six, forty-three hundred and eighty-seven, forty-three hundred and eighty-eight, forty-three hundred and eighty-nine, and forty-three hundred and ninety of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same are hereby, repealed. [34 Stat. L. 608.]

III. QUARANTINE DISTRICTS.

An Act To enable the Secretary of Agriculture to establish and maintain quarantine districts, to permit and regulate the movement of cattle and other live stock therefrom, and for other purposes.

[Act of March 3, 1905, ch. 1496, 33 Stat. L. 1264.]

[SEC. 1.] [Cattle quarantine — establishment of districts.] That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to quarantine any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or any portion of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, when he shall determine the fact that cattle or other live stock in such State or Territory or District of Columbia are affected with any contagious, infectious, or communicable disease; and the Secretary of Agriculture is directed to give written or printed notice of the establishment of quarantine to the proper officers of railroad, steamboat, or other transportation companies doing business in or through any quarantined State or Territory or the District of Columbia, and to publish in such newspapers in the quarantined State or Territory or the District of Columbia, as the Secretary of Agriculture may select, notice of the establishment of quarantine. [33 Stat. L. 1264.]

This is the first section of the "Live Stock Contagious Diseases Act."

SEC. 2. [Transportation by carriers or driving out of district prohibited.] That no railroad company or the owners or masters of any steam or sailing or other vessel or boat shall receive for transportation or transport from any quarantined State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or from the quarantined portion of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, into any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, any cattle or other live stock, except as hereinafter provided; nor shall any person, company, or corporation deliver for such transportation to any railroad company, or to the master or owner of any boat or vessel, any cattle or other live stock, except as hereinafter provided; nor shall any person, company, or corporation drive on foot, or cause to be driven on foot, or transport in private conveyance or cause to be transported in private conveyance, from a quarantined State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or from the quarantined portion of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, into any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, any cattle or other live stock, except as hereinafter provided. [33 Stat. L. 1264.]

As to the carriers to which the provisions of this Act are applicable see the Act of June 30, 1914, ch. 131, § 1, infra, p. 394.

Strict construction.—This statute is penal and must be strictly construed. U. S. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (1911) 222 U. S. 8, 32 S. Ct. 6, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 68.

Connecting carriers outside quarantine district.—The receipt outside of a quarantine district and subsequent transportation by a railroad company of live stock that was received for transportation, and was transported by a previous carrier from a quarantine district in one state into another state, is not an offense under this Act. U. S. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (1911) 222 U. S. 8, 32 S. Ct. 6, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 68; St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal R. Co. v. U. S., (1911) 188 Fed. 191; U. S. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1910) 181 Fed. 882; U. S. v. El Paso, etc., R. Co., (1910) 178 Fed. 846.

A contrary ruling was made in a case arising in the Circuit Court in the district of South Carolina, wherein it was held that a connecting carrier which received stock outside of the limits of the quarantined state was liable. U. S. v. Southern R. Co., (1911) 187 Fed. 209.

Knowledge an essential element of offense.—As the statute is penal and a prosecution thereunder criminal in its nature, the guilty knowledge of the carrier is an indispensable element of the offense, and the burden of proof rests upon the government to establish that fact beyond a reasonable doubt in the mind of the trier of the facts. U. S. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1910) 181 Fed. 882.

But in St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, (1915) 116 Ark. 119, 172 S. W. 823, which was a civil suit for damages for loss of cattle, alleged to have been caused by the negligence of the carrier in transporting infected cattle from below the quarantine line, across it, and unloading them at a point above the line, from which the plaintiffs' cattle became infected with fever and died, the court held that it was not necessary to allege or prove that the carrier had notice of such facts as would make it chargeable with knowledge that the cattle were infected.

Duty imposed on both carrier and shipper.—In Wakefield v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. (Ky. 1907) 104 S. W. 779, it was held that under this section and a rule of the Secretary of Agriculture forbidding shipment of sheep from a state quarantine for scabies, unless inspected by a government inspector, and requiring a certificate of health to accompany the sheep, the same duty was imposed on the shipper and the carrier as to obtaining a certificate, and if the shipper moved his sheep without a sufficient certificate and the alleged certificate was not signed by an inspector, he violated the Act as well as the carrier, and could not maintain an action for damages suffered by the loss of such paper by the carrier.

Delegation of legislative power.—Section 1 of this Act authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to establish quarantine limits for the transportation of live stock, and section 2 prohibits transportation companies from receiving for transportation or transporting from any quarantined territory in one state to another state "any cattle or other live stock except as hereinafter provided," and section 6 makes a violation of section 2 a misdemeanor. The exception referred to in section 2 is that, in the event the secretary shall deem that public safety permits, he shall establish rules and regulations under which live stock may be lawfully moved from quarantined territory in one state to another state. It was held that the exception was not to be construed to be as broad as the prohibition, and equivalent to a general prohibition against all shipments accompanied by a general permission of all shipments on compliance with departmental rules, but rather as containing a general prohibition, together with a limited and conditional exception, applicable only to such epidemics determined by the secretary to be of such a character as to justify shipments under particular safeguards; and hence that section 2 was not invalid as attempting to create an offense for violation of the departmental rule. U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1910) 176 Fed. 942.

Receivers of railroads.—Receivers of railroads are not affected by this section, but the amendment of March 4, 1913 (see infra, p. 24), extending this Act so as to make it apply to any common carrier, is broad enough to include receivers. U. S. v. Nixon, (1914) 235 U. S. 231, 35 S. Ct. 49, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 207.

SEC. 3. [Regulations for inspections, etc.] That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of Agriculture, and he is hereby authorized and directed, when the public safety will permit, to make and promulgate rules and regulations which shall permit and govern the inspection, disinfection, certification, treatment, handling, and method and manner of delivery and shipment of cattle or other live stock from a quarantined State or Territory or the District of Columbia, and from the quarantined portion of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, into any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia; and the Secretary of Agriculture shall give notice of such rules and regulations in the manner provided in section two of this Act for notice of establishment of quarantine. [33 Stat. L. 1265.]

Regulations.—Regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture under this section are ineffective to add to the class of railroad companies or to the acts denounced by that statute, and railroad companies that in violation of such regulations receive and transport outside a quarantined district live stock which has been received for transportation, and has been transported by a previous carrier from the quarantined district in one state into another state, are not punishable therefor. St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal R. Co. v. U. S., (1911) 188 Fed. 191.

Amendment No. 2 of order No. 143 of the regulations of the Agricultural Department, covering shipments of cattle from quarantined territory, only modified, and did not revoke, order No. 143, by revoking regulations 13 and 14 and substituting two new regulations therefor. U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1910) 176 Fed. 942.

Must show due publication of notice.—

An indictment charging a railroad company with having transported live stock from a quarantined district into another state, in violation of this Act, which avers that the Secretary of Agriculture gave notice of the establishment of such quarantine to the "proper officers" of defendant, is insufficient, as alleging a mere legal conclusion; nor is the establishment of such quarantine sufficiently alleged by stating that the secretary "duly and legally established" it, but it must further show that he published the notice required by section 1 of the Act, which is prerequisite to a criminal conviction. U. S. v. El Paso, etc., R. Co., (1910) 178 Fed. 846.

Prospective operation.—In U. S. v. Hoover, (1904) 133 Fed. 950, it was held that this provision affected only rules and regulations made thereafter, and did not have the retroactive effect of giving validity to a prior void order.

"Make and promulgate."—The words "make" and "promulgate" as used in this section are not synonymous; the duty to "make" rules and regulations is sufficiently accomplished by writing them and signing them officially, but to "promulgate" them requires the giving notice thereof to the officers of transportation companies, etc., and their publication in the selected newspapers within the affected district. U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1908) 165 Fed. 936.

SEC. 4. [Moving cattle from quarantined district — regulations.] That cattle or other live stock may be moved from a quarantined State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or from the quarantined portion of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, into any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, under and in compliance with the rules and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, made and promulgated in pursuance of the provisions of section three of this Act; but it shall be unlawful to move, or to allow to be moved, any cattle or other live stock from any quarantined State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or from the quarantined portion of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, into any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, in manner or method or under conditions other than those prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture. [33 Stat. L. 1265.]

Delegation of legislative power.—The offense denounced by this section is defined merely by rules and regulations thereafter to be established by the Department of Agriculture, and hence no offense was created by such section, because of the rule that Congress has no right to intrust to the executive the power to declare by a departmental rule or regulation that to be unlawful and to constitute a crime which otherwise would not be so, nor itself to declare a violation of rules or regulations, thereafter to be promulgated by the executive, a criminal offense. U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1910) 176 Fed. 942.

Indictment.—An indictment against a carrier for moving cattle from a quarantined district, contrary to and in violation of the secretary's rules and regulations, failing directly to allege facts showing the promulgation of such rules, or otherwise than that the rules and regulations were "duly and legally made and promulgated," was insufficient. U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1908) 165 Fed. 936.

SEC. 5. [Punishment for interfering, etc., with employees.] That every person who forcibly assaults, resists, opposes, prevents, impedes, or interferes with any officer or employee of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture in the execution of his duties, or on account of the execution of his duties, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or be imprisoned not less than one month nor more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment; and every person who discharges any deadly weapon at any officer or employee of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture, or uses any dangerous or deadly weapon in resisting him in the execution of his duties, with intent to commit a bodily injury upon him or to deter or prevent him from discharging his duties, or on account of the performance of his duties, shall, upon conviction, be imprisoned at hard labor for a term not more than five years or fined not to exceed one thousand dollars. [33 Stat. L. 1265.]

This section is in effect superseded by the incorporation of its provisions in the Penal Laws of March 4, 1909, ch. 321, ch. 4, § 62, 35 Stat. L. 1100. See the title PENAL LAWS.

SEC. 6. [Punishment for violations of Act.] That any person, company, or corporation violating the provisions of sections two or four of this Act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [33 Stat. L. 1265.]

[SEC. 1.] [To what carriers Act of March 3, 1905, is applicable.]

* * * That hereafter all the provisions of the said Act approved March third, nineteen hundred and five, shall apply to any railroad company or other common carrier, whose road or line forms any part of a route over which cattle or other live stock are transported in the course of shipment from any quarantined State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or from the quarantined portion of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, into any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia. [38 Stat. L. 419.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 30, 1914, ch. 131. A similar provision was contained in the Appropriation Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 145, 37 Stat. L. 831.

For the Act of March 3, 1905, see supra, p. 390.

Effect of amendment.—The statute, as thus amended, applies to transportation of live stock over short lines belonging to private individuals or to lumber companies hauling freight for hire; to roads operated by trustees under power contained in a mortgage; and also to the more common case where a railroad is being operated by a receiver acting under judicial appointment. For in so far as he transports passengers and property he is a common carrier with rights and civil responsibility as such. And there is no reason suggested why a receiver, operating a railroad, should not also be subject to the penal provisions of a statute prohibiting any common carrier from transporting live stock by rail from a quarantine district into another state. U. S. v. Nixon, (1914) 235 U. S. 231, 35 S. Ct. 49, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 207.

IV. INSPECTION OF ANIMALS, CARCASSES, ETC., INTENDED FOR EXPORT OR SUBJECTS OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

SEC. 10. [Inspection of animals intended for export—disinfection of vessels.] * * * And the Secretary of Agriculture may cause inspection to be made of all animals described in this act intended for exportation, and provide for the disinfection of all vessels engaged in the transportation thereof, and of all barges or other vessels used in the conveyance of such animals intended for export to the ocean steamer or other vessels, and of all attendants and their clothing, and of all head-ropes and other appliances used in such exportation, by such orders and regulations as he may prescribe; and if, upon such inspection, any such animals shall be adjudged, under the regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, to be infected or to have been exposed to infection so as to be dangerous to other animals, they shall not be allowed to be placed upon any vessel for exportation: the expense of all the inspection and disinfection provided for in this section to be borne by the owners of the vessels on which such animals are exported. [26 Stat. L. 417.]

This is the latter part of section 10 of the Act of Aug. 30, 1890, ch. 839. The first part of this section relating to the inspection of all imported animals is given supra, p. 375.

The provisions of the text are to some extent superseded by those of the Act of March 4, 1907, ch. 2907, § 1, infra, p. 397.

An Act to provide for the inspection of live cattle, hogs, and the carcasses and products thereof which are the subjects of interstate commerce, and for other purposes.

[Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 555, 26 Stat. L. 1089.]

SEC. 2. [Cattle whose meat is to be exported — clearance of vessels.] That the Secretary of Agriculture shall also cause to be made a careful inspection of all live cattle, the meat of which, fresh, salted, canned, corned, packed, cured, or otherwise prepared, is intended for exportation to any foreign country, at such times and places, and in such manner as he may think proper, with a view to ascertain whether said cattle are free from disease, and their meat sound and wholesome, and may appoint inspectors who shall be authorized to give an official certificate clearly stating the condition in which such cattle and meat are found, and no clearance shall be given to any vessel having on board any fresh, salted, canned, corned, or packed beef being the meat of cattle killed after the passage of this Act for exportation to and sale in a foreign country from any port in the United States until the owner or shipper shall obtain from an inspector appointed under the provisions of this Act a certificate that said cattle were free from disease and that their meat is sound and wholesome. [28 Stat. L. 732.]

Section 1 of this Act, providing for the inspection of cattle intended for export, was superseded by the provisions of the Act of March 4, 1907, ch. 2907, § 1, infra, p. 397.

The foregoing section 2 was amended to read as above given by an Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 169. In its original form this section read as follows:

"SEC. 2. That the Secretary of Agriculture shall also cause to be made a careful inspection of all live cattle the meat of which is intended for exportation to any foreign country, at such times and places, and in such manner, as he may think proper, with a view to ascertain whether said cattle are free from disease and their meat sound and wholesome, and may appoint inspectors, who shall be authorized to give an official certificate clearly stating the condition in which such cattle and meat are found, and no clearance shall be given to any vessel having on board any fresh beef for exportation to and sale in a foreign country from any port of the United States until the owner or shipper shall obtain from an inspector appointed under the provisions of this act such certificate." [26 Stat. L. 1090.]

The provisions of this Act were extended to apply to dairy products by the Act of May 23, 1908, ch. 192, infra, p. 406.

SEC. 3. [Inspection of animals intended for interstate commerce.] The Secretary of Agriculture shall cause to be inspected prior to their slaughter, all cattle, sheep, and hogs which are subjects of interstate commerce and which are about to be slaughtered at slaughter-houses, canning, salting, packing or rendering establishments in any State or Territory, the carcasses or products of which are to be transported and sold for human consumption in any other State or Territory, or the District of Columbia, and in addition to the aforesaid inspection, there may be made in all cases where the Secretary of Agriculture may deem necessary or expedient, under rules and regulations to be by him prescribed, a post mortem examination of the carcasses of all cattle, sheep, and hogs about to be prepared for human consumption at any slaughter-house, canning, salting, packing or rendering establishment in any State or Territory, or the District of Columbia which are the subjects of interstate commerce. [26 Stat. L. 1090.]

Purpose of inspection.—The inspection of cattle and meats at packing houses by the government under the federal statutes is for the purpose of preventing traffic in diseased and unwholesome meats, and does not relieve a corporation engaged in slaughtering cattle from the duty of exercising reasonable care to see that its employees engaged in handling its meats are not exposed to infectious diseases. If it relies on the government inspection, it is responsible to its servants in that regard for the efficiency of such inspection. O'Connor v. Armour Packing Co., (1908) 158 Fed. 241.

SEC. 4. [Examinations — official stamp, etc.—penalty for forgery.] That said examination shall be made in the manner provided by rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, and after said examination the carcasses and products of all cattle, sheep, and swine found to be free of disease and wholesome, sound, and fit for human food shall be marked, stamped, or labeled for identification as may be provided by said rules and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture. Any person who shall forge, counterfeit, simulate, imitate, falsely represent, or use without authority, or knowingly and wrongfully alter, deface, or destroy any of the marks, stamps, or other devices provided for in the regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, of any such carcasses or their products, or who shall forge, counterfeit, simulate, imitate, falsely represent, or use without authority, or knowingly and wrongfully alter, deface, or destroy any certificate or stamp provided in said regulations, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court. [28 Stat. L. 732.]

This section was amended to read as above given by the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 169. In its original form section 4 read as follows:

"SEC. 4. That said examination shall be made in the manner provided by rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, and after said examination the carcasses and products of all cattle, sheep, and swine found to be free of disease, and wholesome, sound, and fit for human food, shall be marked, stamped, or labeled for identification as may be provided by said rules and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture. Any person who shall forge, counterfeit, or knowingly and wrongfully alter, deface, or destroy any of the marks, stamps, or other devices provided for in the regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, of any such carcasses or their products, or who shall forge, counterfeit, or knowingly and wrongfully alter, deface, or destroy any certificate provided for in said regulations, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments in the discretion of the court." [26 Stat. L. 1090.]

SEC. 5. [Transporting of unsound carcasses — penalty.] That it shall be unlawful for any person to transport from one State or Territory or the District of Columbia into any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or for any person to deliver to another for transportation from one State or Territory or the District of Columbia into another State or Territory or the District of Columbia the carcasses of any cattle, sheep, or swine, or the food products thereof, which have been examined in accordance with the provisions of sections three and four of this act, and which on said examination have been declared by the inspector making the same to be unsound or diseased. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and punished for each offense as provided in section four of this act. [26 Stat. L. 1090.]

See the Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 169, § 1, infra, p. 397, authorizing regulations to be made to carry out the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 6. [Certificates for sound cattle and meats.] That the inspectors provided for in sections one and two of this act shall be authorized to give official certificates of the sound and wholesome condition of the cattle, sheep, and swine, their carcasses and products described in sections three and four of this act, and one copy of every certificate granted under the provisions of this act shall be filed in the Department of Agriculture, another copy shall be delivered to the owner or shipper, and when the cattle, sheep, and swine, or their carcasses and products are sent abroad, a third copy shall be delivered to the chief officer of the vessel on which the shipment shall be made. [26 Stat. L. 1090.]

A waiver of certificates was permitted by the Act of March 4, 1907, ch. 2907, § 1, infra, p. 402.

SEC. 7. [Application of act to farmers.] That none of the provisions of this act shall be so construed as to apply to any cattle, sheep, or swine slaughtered by any farmer upon his farm, which may be transported from one State or Territory or the District of Columbia into another State or Territory or the District of Columbia: Provided, however, That if the carcasses of such cattle, sheep, or swine go to any packing or canning establishment and are intended for transportation to any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia as hereinbefore provided, they shall there be subject to the post mortem examination provided for in sections three and four of this act. [26 Stat. L. 1091.]

See next to the last paragraph of section 1 of the Act of March 4, 1907, ch. 2907, infra, p. 405.

[SEC. 1.] [Rules to prevent carrying condemned meat — punishment for violations.] * * * The Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized to make such rules and regulations as he may decide to be necessary to prevent the transportation from one State or Territory or the District of Columbia into any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or to any foreign country, of the condemned carcasses or parts of carcasses of cattle, sheep, and swine, which have been inspected in accordance with the provisions of this Act. Any person, company, or corporation owning or operating any such slaughter-house, abattoir, or meat curing, packing, or canning establishment, or any employee of the same, that shall willfully violate any provision of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished for each offense by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court. [28 Stat. L. 732.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 169. It followed provisions amending the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 555, § 2, supra, p. 395, and § 4, supra, p. 396, and the reference to "the provisions of this Act" is evidently to the last cited Act as so amended.

[SEC. 1.] [Meat and meat animal inspection — examination of animals before killing — diseased animals to be set apart, etc.] * * * FOR MEAT INSPECTION: That hereafter, for the purpose of preventing the use in interstate or foreign commerce, as hereinafter provided, of meat and meat food products which are unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or otherwise unfit for human food, the Secretary of Agriculture, at his discretion, may cause to be made, by inspectors appointed for that purpose, an examination and inspection of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats before they shall be allowed to enter into any slaughtering, packing, meat-canning, rendering, or similar establishment, in which they are to be slaughtered and the meat and meat food products thereof are to be used in interstate or foreign commerce; and all cattle, swine, sheep, and goats found on such inspection to show symptoms of disease shall be set apart and slaughtered separately from all other cattle, sheep, swine, or goats, and when so slaughtered the carcasses of said cattle, sheep, swine, or goats shall be subject to a careful examination and inspection, all as provided by the rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, as herein provided for. [34 Stat. L. 1260.]

This and the following twenty paragraphs of this section constitute the Meat Inspection Act of 1907 and are from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1907, ch. 2907. Similar provisions occur also in the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 30, 1906, ch. 3913, 34 Stat. L. 674. See the notes to the various paragraphs of this section set out infra.

The provisions of the Meat Inspection Law were extended to the inspection of reindeer by a provision of the Act of June 30, 1914, ch. 131, infra, p. 406.

The Agricultural Appropriation Act of May 23, 1908, ch. 192, § 1, 35 Stat. L. 254, contained a provision, "That live horses be entitled to the same inspection as other animals herein named." Similar provisions occurred in prior Appropriation Acts of the same character, but these may be regarded as superseded by the provisions of the Act here given providing for the inspection of all "cattle, sheep, swine, and goats."

Meat food product.—The determination of the meaning of the term "meat food product" is a question of fact. Congress having vested in the Secretary of Agriculture the power to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the efficient execution of the provisions of the meat inspection law, the power to determine what manufactures are "meat products" rests in the Secretary of Agriculture, subject to the restriction that the definition of the term adopted be not clearly and unquestionably outside the intent of the Act. (1910) 28 Op. Atty.-Gen. 369.

[Post-mortem examination at packing, etc., houses — labeling — destruction of condemned meats — reinspection, etc.] That for the purposes hereinbefore set forth the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause to be made by inspectors appointed for that purpose, as hereinafter provided, a post-mortem examination and inspection of the carcasses and parts thereof of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats to be prepared for human consumption at any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment in any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia for transportation or sale as articles of interstate or foreign commerce; and the carcasses and parts thereof of all such animals found to be sound, healthful, wholesome, and fit for human food shall be marked, stamped, tagged, or labeled as "Inspected and passed;" and said inspectors shall label, mark, stamp, or tag as "Inspected and condemned" all carcasses and parts thereof of animals found to be unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or otherwise unfit for human food; and all carcasses and parts thereof thus inspected and condemned shall be destroyed for food purposes by the said establishment in the presence of an inspector, and the Secretary of Agriculture may remove inspectors from any such establishment which fails to so destroy any such condemned carcass or part thereof, and said inspectors, after said first inspection, shall, when they deem it necessary, reinspect said carcasses or parts thereof to determine whether since the first inspection the same have become unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or in any way unfit for human food, and if any carcass or any part thereof shall, upon examination and inspection subsequent to the first examination and inspection, be found to be unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or otherwise unfit for human food, it shall be destroyed for food purposes by the said establishment in the presence of an inspector, and the Secretary of Agriculture may remove inspectors from any establishment which fails to so destroy any such condemned carcass or part thereof. [34 Stat. L. 1260.]

Force of prescribed regulations.—Regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture under the authority of this Act and which are not inconsistent with its provisions have the force of law. State v. Peet, (1908) 80 Vt. 449, 68 Atl. 661, 130 A. S. R. 998, 14 L. R. A. (N. S.) 877.

[Examination before use for food products — re-examination on return of goods.] The foregoing provisions shall apply to all carcasses or parts of carcasses of cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, or the meat or meat products thereof which may be brought into any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment, and such examination and inspection shall be had before the said carcasses or parts thereof shall be allowed to enter into any department wherein the same are to be treated and prepared for meat food products; and the foregoing provisions shall also apply to all such products which, after having been issued from any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment, shall be returned to the same or to any similar establishment where such inspection is maintained. [34 Stat. L. 1261.]

[Inspectors to be appointed at canning, etc., establishments — marks of inspection — destruction if unfit for food — application to export trade — domestic use.] That for the purposes hereinbefore set forth the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause to be made, by inspectors appointed for that purpose, an examination and inspection of all meat food product prepared for interstate or foreign commerce in any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment, and for the purposes of any examination and inspection said inspectors shall have access at all times, by day or night, whether the establishment be operated or not, to every part of said establishment; and said inspectors shall mark, stamp, tag, or label as "Inspected and passed" all such products found to be sound, healthful, and wholesome, and which contain no dyes, chemicals, preservatives, or ingredients which render such meat, or meat food products unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or unfit for human food; and said inspectors shall label, mark, stamp, or tag as "Inspected and condemned" all such products found unsound, unhealthful, and unwholesome, or which contain dyes, chemicals, preservatives, or ingredients which render such meat or meat food products unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or unfit for human food, and all such condemned meat food products shall be destroyed for food purposes, as hereinbefore provided, and the Secretary of Agriculture may remove inspectors from any establishment which fails to so destroy such condemned meat food products: Provided, That subject to the rules and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture the provisions hereof in regard to preservatives shall not apply to meat food products for export to any foreign country and which are prepared or packed according to the specifications or directions of the foreign purchaser, when no substance is used in the preparation or packing thereof in conflict with the laws of the foreign country to which said article is to be exported; but if said article shall be in fact sold or offered for sale for domestic use or consumption then this proviso shall not exempt said article from the operation of all the other provisions of this Act. [34 Stat. I. 1261.]

Imported meats and meat food products.—Imported meats and meat food products are entitled to admission into this country and to interstate commerce subject only to the provisions of the Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906 (see FOOD AND DRUGS), even though they should be further manufactured in this country, provided they are not mixed with domestic meat and meat products, but they can in no instance bear the federal mark of approval provided for by this section. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 355.

Mark of inspection when post-mortem impossible.—This act requires as a condition to the placing of the stamp "Inspected and passed" that the inspectors should by inspection and examination have found all such products to be sound. If as a matter of fact such soundness cannot be ascertained and found except by the inspection provided for in the second and third paragraphs, it must be that Congress did not intend the provisions of the Act to apply where such inspection is impossible. The proper construction therefore is to read the fourth paragraph in connection with the other portions of the Act and to restrict its application to the cases where inspection can be had in conformity with the requirements of the statute. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 355.

The federal mark of inspection cannot be lawfully placed upon any meat food product unless the animal from which it was derived received a post-mortem examination by the inspectors of the Bureau of Animal Industry. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 355.

Establishments subject to inspection.—The inspection authorized under the meat inspection provisions of this Act does not apply alone to establishments in which both the slaughtering of the animals and the preparation of the meat food products are carried on, but to all establishments in which any of the processes required, from the slaughtering to the finishing of the meat food product, is conducted, regardless of where the meat may have come from. (1910) 28 Op. Atty.-Gen. 369; (1911) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 227.

"Similar establishments."—The term "similar establishments," as used in the meat inspection law, was intended to include all establishments which are not specifically mentioned, in which the animal is slaughtered, or the carcass or meat is prepared, or in which the meat food product is manufactured. (1910) 28 Op. Atty.-Gen. 369.

[Marking receptacles — supervision by inspectors — sales under false names prohibited — trade names allowed.] That when any meat or meat food product prepared for interstate or foreign commerce which has been inspected as hereinbefore provided and marked "Inspected and passed" shall be placed or packed in any can, pot, tin, canvas, or other receptacle or covering in any establishment where inspection under the provisions of this Act is maintained, the person, firm, or corporation preparing said product shall cause a label to be attached to said can, pot, tin, canvas, or other receptacle or covering, under the supervision of an inspector, which label shall state that the contents thereof have been "inspected and passed" under the provisions of this Act; and no inspection and examination of meat or meat food products deposited or inclosed in cans, tins, pots, canvas, or other receptacle or covering in any establishment where inspection under the provisions of this Act is maintained shall be deemed to be complete until such meat or meat food products have been sealed or inclosed in said can, tin, pot, canvas, or other receptacle or covering under the supervision of an inspector, and no such meat or meat food products shall be sold or offered for sale by any person, firm, or corporation in interstate or foreign commerce under any false or deceptive name; but established trade name or names which are usual to such products and which are not false and deceptive and which shall be approved by the Secretary of Agriculture are permitted. [34 Stat. L. 1262.]

[Sanitary inspection of establishments — rejection of products if conditions insanitary.] The Secretary of Agriculture shall cause to be made, by experts in sanitation or by other competent inspectors, such inspection of all slaughtering, meat canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishments in which cattle, sheep, swine, and goats are slaughtered and the meat and meat food products thereof are prepared for interstate or foreign commerce as may be necessary to inform himself concerning the sanitary conditions of the same, and to prescribe the rules and regulations of sanitation under which such establishments shall be maintained; and where the sanitary conditions of any such establishment are such that the meat or meat food products are rendered unclean, unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or otherwise unfit for human food, he shall refuse to allow said meat or meat food products to be labeled, marked, stamped, or tagged as “inspected and passed.” [34 Stat. L. 1262.]

[Inspection at night.] That the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause an examination and inspection of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, and the food products thereof, slaughtered and prepared in the establishments hereinbefore described for the purposes of interstate or foreign commerce to be made during the nighttime as well as during the daytime when the slaughtering of said cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, or the preparation of said food products is conducted during the nighttime. [34 Stat. L. 1262.]

[Interstate transportation of meats, etc., not inspected, prohibited — exceptions.] That on and after October first, nineteen hundred and six, no person, firm, or corporation shall transport or offer for transportation, and no carrier of interstate or foreign commerce shall transport or receive for transportation from one State or Territory or the District of Columbia to any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or to any place under the jurisdiction of the United States, or to any foreign country, any carcasses or parts thereof, meat, or meat food products thereof which have not been inspected, examined, and marked as “Inspected and passed,” in accordance with the terms of this Act and with the rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture: Provided, That all meat and meat food products on hand on October first, nineteen hundred and six, at establishments where inspection has not been maintained, or which have been inspected under existing law, shall be examined and labeled under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture shall prescribe, and then shall be allowed to be sold in interstate or foreign commerce. [34 Stat. L. 1262.]

[Penalty for illegal acts, counterfeiting, etc.] That no person, firm, or corporation, or officer, agent, or employee thereof, shall forge, counterfeit, simulate, or falsely represent, or shall without proper authority use, fail to use, or detach, or shall knowingly or wrongfully alter, deface, or destroy, or fail to deface or destroy, any of the marks, stamps, tags, labels, or other identification devices provided for in this Act, or in and as directed by the rules and regulations prescribed hereunder by the Secretary of Agriculture, on any carcasses, parts of carcasses, or the food product, or containers thereof, subject to the provisions of this Act, or any certificate in relation thereto, authorized or required by this Act or by the said rules and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture. [34 Stat. L. 1263.]

The plain object of this clause is to safeguard the food products in question against alteration or substitution, and thus enable the officials of the government to systematize and render effective the process of inspection; an object that is interfered with if the tags or other identification devices are destroyed, whether they be destroyed by those engaged in the business or by others. U. S. v. Lewis, (1914) 235 U. S. 282, 35 S. Ct. 44, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 229.

Unlawful use of label.—In Armour v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 222 Fed. 233, the court, in sustaining a conviction of the offense denounced by this clause, said: "In our opinion the letter has been violated, and we recognize the government's right to insist on exact compliance with a statute whose beneficent object is to safeguard the wholesomeness of food. The act impliedly promises the public that government stamps and labels may be relied on to tell the truth, and therefore special care must be taken to maintain the scrupulous accuracy of their statements. Even innocent mistakes may have dangers; carelessness is usually likely to lead to mischief. These marks and labels must therefore be protected, and no one must be allowed to use them, except in accordance with the Act and the regulations; otherwise, their value will be immediately impaired or lost and a chief purpose of the act will be frustrated."

[Inspection of cattle, etc., for export.] That the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause to be made a careful inspection of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats intended and offered for export to foreign countries at such times and places, and in such manner as he may deem proper, to ascertain whether such cattle, sheep, swine, and goats are free from disease. [34 Stat. L. 1263.]

Provisions similar to those contained in this and the following two paragraphs were contained in the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 555, § 1, 26 Stat. L. 1089, and were superseded by these paragraphs. The other sections of the last cited Act are given supra, p. 395.

Other provisions for the inspection of animals intended for exportation were made by the latter part of section 10 of the Act of Aug. 30, 1890, ch. 839, supra, p. 394.

[Certificates.] And for this purpose he may appoint inspectors who shall be authorized to give an official certificate clearly stating the condition in which such cattle, sheep, swine, and goats are found. [34 Stat. L. 1263.]

See the notes to the preceding paragraph.

[Clearances refused unless certificate obtained — waiver of certificate.] And no clearance shall be given to any vessel having on board cattle, sheep, swine, or goats for export to a foreign country until the owner or shipper of such cattle, sheep, swine, or goats has a certificate from the inspector herein authorized to be appointed, stating that the said cattle, sheep, swine, or goats are sound and healthy, or unless the Secretary of Agriculture shall have waived the requirement of such certificate for export to the particular country to which such cattle, sheep, swine, or goats are to be exported. [34 Stat. L. 1263.]

See the notes to paragraph Inspection of Cattle, etc., supra, this page.

The Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 3, 1905, ch. 1405, 33 Stat. L. 865, contained, as did similar prior Appropriation Acts, a provision "That the Secretary of Agriculture may, in his discretion, waive the requirement of a certificate with beef or other products which are exported to countries that do not require such inspection." This may be regarded as superseded by the more general provisions of the text.

[Inspection of meats, etc., for export.] That the Secretary of Agriculture shall also cause to be made a careful inspection of the carcasses and parts thereof of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, the meat of which, fresh, salted, canned, corned, packed, cured, or otherwise prepared, is intended and offered for export to any foreign country, at such times and places and in such manner as he may deem proper. [34 Stat. L. 1263.]

[Clearances refused unless certificate obtained.] And no clearance shall be given to any vessel having on board any fresh, salted, canned, corned, or packed beef, mutton, pork, or goat meat, being the meat of animals killed after the passage of this Act, or except as hereinbefore provided for export to and sale in a foreign country from any port in the United States, until the owner or shipper thereof shall obtain from an inspector appointed under the provisions of this Act a certificate that the said cattle, sheep, swine, and goats were sound and healthy at the time of inspection, and that their meat is sound and wholesome, unless the Secretary of Agriculture shall have waived the requirements of such certificate for the country to which said cattle, sheep, swine, and goats or meats are to be exported. [34 Stat. L. 1263.]

[Products of establishments violating law, not to be sold, transported, etc.] That no person, firm, or corporation engaged in the interstate commerce of meat or meat food products shall transport or offer for transportation, sell or offer to sell any such meat or meat food products in any State or Territory or in the District of Columbia or any place under the jurisdiction of the United States, other than in the State or Territory or in the District of Columbia or any place under the jurisdiction of the United States in which the slaughtering, packing, canning, rendering, or other similar establishment owned, leased, or operated by said firm, person, or corporation is located unless and until said person, firm, or corporation shall have complied with all of the provisions of this Act. [34 Stat. L. 1264.]

[Penalty for violations.] That any person, firm, or corporation, or any officer or agent of any such person, firm, or corporation, who shall violate any of the provisions of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished on conviction thereof by a fine of not exceeding ten thousand dollars or imprisonment for a period of not more than two years, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. [34 Stat. L. 1264.]

[Appointment of inspectors — duties — rules and regulations.] That the Secretary of Agriculture shall appoint from time to time inspectors to make examination and inspection of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, the inspection of which is hereby provided for, and of all carcasses and parts thereof, and of all meats and meat food products thereof, and of the sanitary conditions of all establishments in which such meat and meat food products hereinbefore described are prepared; and said inspectors shall refuse to stamp, mark, tag, or label any carcass or any part thereof, or meat food product therefrom, prepared in any establishment hereinbefore mentioned, until the same shall have actually been inspected and found to be sound, healthful, wholesome, and fit for human food, and to contain no dyes, chemicals, preservatives, or ingredients which render such meat food product unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or unfit for human food; and to have been prepared under proper sanitary conditions, hereinbefore provided for; and shall perform such other duties as are provided by this Act and by the rules and regulations to be prescribed by said Secretary of Agriculture; and said Secretary of Agriculture shall, from time to time, make such rules and regulations as are necessary for the efficient execution of the provisions of this Act, and all inspections and examinations made under this Act shall be such and made in such manner as described in the rules and regulations prescribed by said Secretary of Agriculture not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act. [34 Stat. L. 1264.]

Judicial notice.—In a prosecution for a violation of the Meat Inspection Act the court will take judicial notice of the rules and regulations made by the Secretary of Agriculture, but cannot take such notice of regulations made by the Bureau of Animal Industry. United States v. Rohe, (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 218 Fed. 182.

[Punishment for bribing, etc., officials — accepting gifts, etc., by officials.] That any person, firm, or corporation, or any agent or employee of any person, firm, or corporation who shall give, pay, or offer, directly or indirectly, to any inspector, deputy inspector, chief inspector, or any other officer or employee of the United States authorized to perform any of the duties prescribed by this Act or by the rules and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture any money or other thing of value, with intent to influence said inspector, deputy inspector, chief inspector, or other officer or employee of the United States in the discharge of any duty herein provided for, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not less than five thousand dollars nor more than ten thousand dollars and by imprisonment not less than one year nor more than three years; and any inspector, deputy inspector, chief inspector, or other officer or employee of the United States authorized to perform any of the duties prescribed by this Act who shall accept any money, gift, or other thing of value from any person, firm, or corporation, or officers, agents, or employees thereof, given with intent to influence his official action, or who shall receive or accept from any person, firm, or corporation engaged in interstate or foreign commerce any gift, money, or other thing of value given with any purpose or intent whatsoever, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and shall, upon conviction thereof, be summarily discharged from office and shall be punished by a fine not less than one thousand dollars nor more than ten thousand dollars and by imprisonment not less than one year nor more than three years. [34 Stat. L. 1264.]

[Exceptions to farmers, retailers, etc. — punishment for sale, etc., of unwholesome products — maintenance of inspection authorized.] That the provisions of this Act requiring inspection to be made by the Secretary of Agriculture shall not apply to animals slaughtered by any farmer on the farm and sold and transported as interstate or foreign commerce, nor to retail butchers and retail dealers in meat and meat food products, supplying their customers: Provided, That if any person shall sell or offer for sale or transportation for interstate or foreign commerce any meat or meat food products which are diseased, unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or otherwise unfit for human food, knowing that such meat food products are intended for human consumption, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment for a period of not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment: Provided also, That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to maintain the inspection in this Act provided for at any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment notwithstanding this exception, and that the persons operating the same may be retail butchers and retail dealers or farmers; and where the Secretary of Agriculture shall establish such inspection then the provisions of this Act shall apply notwithstanding this exception. [34 Stat. L. 1265.]

See the notes to the first paragraph of this section.

See the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 555, § 7, supra, p. 397.

Effect of Act on right of state to regulate slaughtering of animals by farmers.— In Commonwealth v. Moore, (1913) 214 Mass. 19, 100 N. E. 1071, it was held that the effect of this section making the provisions of the Act inapplicable to animals slaughtered by any farmer was to permit a state under its police powers to regulate the slaughtering of animals by farmers.

Sufficiency of indictment.— In U. S. v. Rohe, (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 218 Fed. 182, the court ruled that a count in an indictment which charged that the defendants offered for transportation in interstate commerce from New York city to Charleston, S. C., certain hams which were, and which defendants knew to be, unfit for human food and which they knew were intended for human consumption, did not charge an offense under the Meat Inspection Act, on the ground that it was not a crime for an inspected establishment to ship unwholesome meat products in interstate commerce, the proviso of this section being restricted to those whose establishments were not inspected, viz., farmers and retailers.

[Detailed report of estimates.] And the Secretary of Agriculture shall, in his annual estimates made to Congress, submit a statement in detail, showing the number of persons employed in such inspections and the salary or per diem paid to each, together with the contingent expenses of such inspectors and where they have been and are employed. [34 Stat. L. 1265.]

The above provisions occur also in the Agricultural Appropriation Act of June 30, 1906, ch. 3913, closing on page 679 of 34 Stat. at L. In that Act, however, is the following permanent appropriation:

"That there is permanently appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of three million dollars, for the expenses of the inspection of cattle, sheep, swine, and goats and the meat and meat food products thereof which enter into interstate or foreign commerce and for all expenses necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this Act relating to meat inspection, including rent and the employment of labor in Washington and elsewhere, for each year." [34 Stat. L. 674.]

[SEC. 1.] [Inspection of dairy products for export.] * * * That the Act of March third, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, as amended March second, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, for the inspection of live cattle and products thereof, shall be deemed to include dairy products intended for exportation to any foreign country, and the Secretary of Agriculture may apply, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by him, the provisions of said Act for inspection and certification appropriate for ascertaining the purity and quality of such products, and may cause the same to be so marked, stamped, or labeled as to secure their identity and make known in the markets of foreign countries to which they may be sent from the United States their purity, quality, and grade; and all the provisions of said Act relating to live cattle and products thereof for export shall apply to dairy products so inspected and certified: [35 Stat. L. 254.]

V. BUREAU OF ANIMAL INDUSTRY.

An Act for the establishment of a Bureau of Animal Industry, to prevent the exportation of diseased cattle, and to provide means for the suppression and extirpation of pleuro-pneumonia and other contagious diseases among domestic animals.

[Act of May 29, 1884, ch. 60, 23 Stat. L. 31.]

[SEC. 1.] [Bureau of Animal Industry — officers — appointment and salary.] That the Commissioner of Agriculture shall organize in his Department a Bureau of Animal Industry, and shall appoint a Chief thereof, who shall be a competent veterinary surgeon, and whose duty it shall be to investigate and report upon the condition of the domestic animals of the United States, their protection and use, and also inquire into and report the causes of contagious, infectious, and communicable diseases among them, and the means for the prevention and cure of the same, and to collect such information on these subjects as shall be valuable to the agricultural and commercial interests of the country; And the Commissioner of Agriculture is hereby authorized to employ a force sufficient for this purpose, not to exceed twenty persons at any one time. The salary of the Chief of said Bureau shall be three thousand dollars per annum; And the Commissioner shall appoint a clerk for said Bureau, with a salary of one thousand five hundred dollars per annum. [23 Stat. L. 31.]

This is the first section of the "Animal Industry Act." The Department of Agriculture was made an executive department under the control of the Secretary of Agriculture by an Act of Feb. 9, 1889, ch. 122, 25 Stat. L. 659, and the authority granted to the Commissioner of Agriculture by the Act given in the text was vested in the Secretary of Agriculture by the Act of July 14, 1890, ch. 707, 26 Stat. L. 288. See the title AGRICULTURE.

As to the sale of animals or animal products purchased or produced under the Bureau of Animal Industry, see the provisions of the Act of Aug. 10, 1912, ch. 284, given under the title AGRICULTURE.

The provisions of this section relating to the number and salaries of employees have been superseded by the various subsequent Appropriation Acts. The Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 144, § 1, 38 Stat. L. 1089, provides for numerous employees at increased rates of compensation.

Conflict with state statutes.—This Act creating a Bureau of Animal Industry was held not to override the statute of Kansas (Act of 1891, ch. 201, as amended) providing for the protection of the cattle of that state from contagious diseases. This Act makes no provision as to liability for damages sustained by transporting cattle into the state of Kansas in violation of the above mentioned statute of that state. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Haber, (1898) 169 U. S. 613, 18 S. Ct. 488, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 878, affirming (1896) 56 Kan. 694, 44 Pac. 632. For an explanation of this case see Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Ohio, (1898) 173 U. S. 285, 19 S. Ct. 466, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 702. See also Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co., (1897) 82 Fed. 839; In re Debs, (1894) 158 U. S. 564, 15 S. Ct. 900, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 1092; Smith v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1900) 181

U. S. 248, 21 S. Ct. 603, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 847.

In Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co., (1897) 79 Fed. 679; (1897) 82 Fed. 839, the Kansas Act of March 12, 1896, regulating public stockyards, was held not to be in conflict with this Act.

The Colorado statute (Laws 1888, p. 335, § 2) "to prevent the introduction of any infectious or contagious diseases among cattle," etc., was held not to conflict with this Act. Congress has not assumed to itself exclusive jurisdiction over the subjects of quarantine and inspection of animals. On the contrary it has invited the aid and co-operation of the states. Regulations prescribed both by Congress and the states may be enforced, at least so far as they harmonize. Reid v. Colorado, (1902) 187 U. S. 137, 23 S. Ct. 92, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 108, affirming (1902) 29 Colo. 333, 68 Pac. 228, 93 A. S. R. 69.

Sec. 2. [Agents — duties and compensation.] That the Commissioner of Agriculture is authorized to appoint two competent agents, who shall be practical stock-raisers or experienced business men familiar with questions pertaining to commercial transactions in live stock, whose duty it shall be, under the instructions of the Commissioner of Agriculture, to examine and report upon the best methods of treating, transporting, and caring for animals, and the means to be adopted for the suppression and extirpation of contagious pleuro-pneumonia, and to provide against the spread of other dangerous contagious, infectious, and communicable diseases. The compensation of said agents shall be at the rate of ten dollars per diem, with all necessary expenses, while engaged in the actual performance of their duties under this act, when absent from their usual place of business or residence as such agent. [23 Stat. L. 31.]

As to the Commissioner of Agriculture, and the number and compensation of agents, see the notes to section 1 of this Act, supra. Under this Act the general government established inspectors at the Kansas City stockyards, assuming that such stock came within the purview of the Act. U. S. v. Hopkins, (1897) 82 Fed. 529, reversed on other grounds (1878) 171 U. S. 578, 19 S. Ct. 40, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 290.

SEC. 3. [Rules and regulations—co-operation of States and Territories.] That it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Agriculture to prepare such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary for the speedy and effectual suppression and extirpation of said diseases, and to certify such rules and regulations to the executive authority of each State and Territory, and invite said authorities to co-operate in the execution and enforcement of this act. Whenever the plans and methods of the Commissioner of Agriculture shall be accepted by any State or Territory in which pleuro-pneumonia or other contagious, infectious, or communicable disease is declared to exist, or such State or Territory shall have adopted plans and methods for the suppression and extirpation of said diseases, and such plans and methods shall be accepted by the Commissioner of Agriculture, and whenever the governor of a State or other properly constituted authorities signify their readiness to co-operate for the extinction of any contagious, infectious, or communicable disease in conformity with the provisions of this act, the Commissioner of Agriculture is hereby authorized to expend so much of the money appropriated by this act as may be necessary in such investigations, and in such disinfection and quarantine measures as may be necessary to prevent the spread of the disease from one State or Territory into another. [23 Stat. L. 32.]

As to the Commissioner of Agriculture, see the notes to section 1 of this Act, supra.

Effect in states.—Rules of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture, organized by this Act for the suppression of contagious diseases among domestic animals, have not, apart from the action of a state, any binding force upon the state. Eshleman v. Union Stockyards Co., (1908) 222 Pa. St. 20, 70 Atl. 899, 15 Ann. Cas. 998.

State laws.—The Arkansas statute (Act May 28, 1907) to prevent the introduction and spread of contagious and infectious diseases of animals in that state is not in conflict with this Act, which does not attempt to assume exclusive control over the quarantine of diseased animals, nor cover the transportation of live stock from state to state, so as to preclude state action, but merely authorizes the Commissioner of Agriculture to co-operate with state authorities, and to prescribe rules and regulations in that regard, nor does it conflict with rules and regulations so prescribed. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. State, (1909) 90 Ark. 343, 119 S. W. 288. See also Mullen v. Western Union Beef Co., (1897) 96 Colo. App. 497, 49 Pac. 425.

In Reid v. Colorado, (1902) 187 U. S. 137, 23 S. Ct. 92, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 108, affirming (1902) 29 Colo. 333, 68 Pac. 228, 93 A. S. R. 69, it was held that the subject of transportation of cattle from one state to another was not so far covered by the provisions of this Act, or those relating to the exportation of diseased cattle to ports in foreign countries, and the transportation between the states of live stock known to be diseased, as to preclude the enactment of a statute (Colo. Sess. Laws 1885, p. 335) prohibiting the importation of cattle from south of the 36th parallel of north latitude between April 1 and Nov. 1, unless first kept for ninety days at some place north of that parallel, or unless a certificate of freedom from contagious or infectious disease has been obtained from the state veterinary sanitary board.

Rules and regulations.—This Act being limited to cases where the animal in question was affected with an infectious or contagious disease, the Secretary of Agriculture has no authority to extend the same by a rule prohibiting the taking of any horse outside of a quarantine district without first having it inspected by the Bureau of Animal Industry, etc., regardless of whether it is diseased or has been exposed to disease. U. S. v. Hoover, (1904) 133 Fed. 950.

Judicial notice of regulations.—The courts will take judicial notice of regulations adopted by the Commissioner of Agriculture under this Act locating a quarantine line for cattle. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. State, (1909) 90 Ark. 343, 119 S. W. 288.

Delegation of power by Congress, see Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. State, (1909) 90 Ark. 343, 119 S. W. 288.

Purchase of infected animals for slaughter.—This section does not authorize the Commissioner (or Secretary) of Agriculture to purchase infected animals for the purpose of slaughter. (1895) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 154.

Employment of counsel.—The Commissioner (or Secretary) of Agriculture is not authorized to employ counsel for the defense of employees of the Bureau of Animal Industry, for acts done by them in carrying out the provisions of the statute. Such counsel, it would seem, shall be furnished, upon call, by the Department of Justice. (1889) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 328.

SEC. 4. [Investigation as to pleuro-pneumonia, etc.] That in order to promote the exportation of live stock from the United States the Commissioner of Agriculture shall make special investigation as to the existence of pleuro-pneumonia, or any contagious, infectious, or communicable disease, along the dividing-lines between the United States and foreign countries, and along the lines of transportation from all parts of the United States to ports from which live stock are exported, and make report of the results of such investigation to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall, from time to time, establish such regulations concerning the exportation and transportation of live stock as the results of said investigations may require. [23 Stat. L. 32.]

As to the Commissioner of Agriculture, see the notes to section 1 of this Act supra, p. 407.

The powers conferred on the Secretary of the Treasury by this and the following section were transferred to the Secretary of Agriculture by the Act of Feb. 2, 1903, ch. 349, § 1, infra, p. 411.

Exportation and transportation of live stock.—See enactments under II. Transportation of animals, supra, p. 376. IV. Inspection of animals, carcasses, etc., intended for export or subjects of interstate commerce, supra, p. 394.

Shipments between points in same state.—This Act does not relate to, nor was it intended in any manner to regulate or interfere with, shipments of cattle from point to point wholly within any state or territory. Davis v. Texas, etc., R. Co., (1896) 12 Tex. Civ. App. 427, 34 S. W. 144.

SEC. 5. [Measures to prevent exportation of diseased live stock.] That to prevent the exportation from any port of the United States to any port in a foreign country of live stock affected with any contagious, infectious, or communicable disease, and especially pleuro-pneumonia, the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to take such steps and adopt such measures, not inconsistent with the provisions of this act, as he may deem necessary. [23 Stat. L. 32.]

See the notes to the preceding section 4 of this Act.

SEC. 6. [Transportation by railroads, vessels, etc., of diseased live stock.] That no railroad company within the United States, or the owners or masters of any steam or sailing vessel or other vessel or boat, shall receive for transportation or transport, from one State or Territory to another, or from any State into the District of Columbia, or from the District into any State, any live stock affected with any contagious, infectious, or communicable disease, and especially the disease known as pleuro-pneumonia; nor shall any person, company, or corporation deliver for such transportation to any railroad company, or master or owner of any boat or vessel, any live stock, knowing them to be affected with any contagious, infectious, or communicable disease; Nor shall any person, company, or corporation drive on foot or transport in private conveyance from one State or Territory to another, or from any State into the District of Columbia, or from the District into any State, any live stock, knowing them to be affected with any contagious, infectious, or communicable disease, and especially the disease known as pleuro-pneumonia: Provided, That the so-called splenetic or Texas fever shall not be considered a contagious, infectious, or communicable disease within the meaning of sections four, five, six and seven of this act, as to cattle being transported by rail to market for slaughter, when the same are unloaded only to be fed and watered in lots on the way thereto. [23 Stat. L. 32.]

Validity of Act.—This Act making it a misdemeanor for one to drive live stock on foot from one state to another knowing them to have a contagious disease, is within the power given to Congress to regulate interstate commerce. U. S. v. Slater, (1903) 123 Fed. 115.

Rules and regulations.—An order of the Department of Agriculture giving notice that scabies exists among sheep in the United States, and that it is a violation of law to receive for transportation, to transport or to deliver for transportation from one state to another, any stock affected with such disease, or to drive from one state to another any sheep knowing them to be affected with such disease, is proper, though not specifying any particular district within which a quarantine has been established. U. S. v. Slater, (1903) 123 Fed. 115.

Driving diseased cattle from district not quarantined.—This Act makes it a misdemeanor to transport or drive on foot from one state to another any live stock known to be affected with any of the diseases specified in the Act, irrespective of the question whether the Secretary of Agriculture has established as an "infected district" the district from which the live stock are driven. U. S. v. Slater, (1903) 123 Fed. 115.

Knowledge as element of offense.—Where the defendants delivered over to a railway company for transportation from Texas to New Mexico certain cattle, it was held that if they had knowledge of the fact that their cattle were infected with Texas fever, they were guilty of a violation of the statute in delivering the cattle to the railway company for transportation to New Mexico, and the duty devolved upon them of using all necessary care to prevent their communicating the disease to healthy cattle. What degree of care it is necessary to take depends upon circumstances and is a proper question for the court. Grayson v. Lynch, (1896) 163 U. S. 468, 16 S. Ct. 1064, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 230.

SEC. 7. [Notice to agents of railroads, etc., through infected districts.] That it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Agriculture to notify, in writing, the proper officials or agents of any railroad, steamboat, or other transportation company doing business in or through any infected locality, and by publication in such newspapers as he may select, of the existence of said contagion; And any person or persons operating any such railroad, or master or owner of any boat or vessel, or owner or custodian of or person having control over such cattle or other live stock within such infected district, who shall knowingly violate the provisions of section six of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [23 Stat. L. 32.]

As to the Commissioner of Agriculture, see the notes to section 1 of this Act, supra, p. 407.

Regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture under this Act for the suppression of diseases among cattle, are ineffective unless a state or territory interested in their application should determine to co-operate with him in their enforcement. After cattle have become domiciled in a state, their management is to be regulated by state laws and not by Act of Congress. Mullen v. Western Union Beef Co., (1897) 9 Colo. App. 497, 49 Pac. 425, writ of error in this case dismissed (1899) 173 U. S. 116, 19 S. Ct. 404, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 635.

SEC. 8. [Pleuro-pneumonia in District of Columbia.] That whenever any contagious, infectious, or communicable disease affecting domestic animals, and especially the disease known as pleuro-pneumonia, shall be brought into or shall break out in the District of Columbia, it shall be the duty of the Commissioners of said District to take measures to suppress the same promptly and to prevent the same from spreading; And for this purpose the said Commissioners are hereby empowered to order and require that any premises, farm, or farms where such disease exists, or has existed, be put in quarantine; to order all or any animals coming into the District to be detained at any place or places for the purpose of inspection and examination; to prescribe regulations for and to require the destruction of animals affected with contagious, infectious, or communicable disease, and for the proper disposition of their hides and carcasses; to prescribe regulations for disinfection, and such other regulations as they may deem necessary to prevent infection or contagion being communicated, and shall report to the Commissioner of Agriculture whatever they may do in pursuance of the provisions of this section. [23 Stat. L. 33.]

As to the Commissioner of Agriculture, see the notes to section 1 of this Act, supra, p. 407.

This section would seem to be superseded by the more general provisions of the Act of Feb. 2, 1903, ch. 349, § 2, infra, p. 413.

SEC. 9. [District attorneys to prosecute.] That it shall be the duty of the several United States district attorneys to prosecute all violations of this act which shall be brought to their notice or knowledge by any person making the complaint under oath; and the same shall be heard before any district or circuit court of the United State[s] or Territorial court holden within the district in which the violation of this act has been committed. [23 Stat. L. 33.]

Section 10 of this Act made an appropriation for the purpose of carrying it into effect. Appropriations to this end are made annually. See the note to section 1 of this Act, supra, p. 407.

SEC. 11. [Annual reports.] That the Commissioner of Agriculture shall report annually to Congress, at the commencement of each session, a list of the names of all persons employed, an itemized statement of all expenditures under this act, and full particulars of the means adopted and carried into effect for the suppression of contagious, infectious, or communicable diseases among domestic animals. [23 Stat. L. 33.]

As to the Commissioner of Agriculture, see the notes to section 1 of this Act, supra, p. 407.

An Act To enable the Secretary of Agriculture to more effectually suppress and prevent the spread of contagious and infectious diseases of live stock, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Contagious diseases of live stock — power to suppress — regulations — shipments.] That in order to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to effectually suppress and extirpate contagious pleuropneumonia, foot and mouth disease, and other dangerous contagious, infectious, and communicable diseases in cattle and other live stock, and to prevent the spread of such diseases, the powers conferred on the Secretary of the Treasury by sections four and five of an Act entitled "An Act for the establishment of a Bureau of Animal Industry, to prevent the exportation of diseased cattle, and to provide means for the suppression and extirpation of pleuropneumonia and other contagious diseases among domestic animals," approved May twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and eighty-four (twenty-third United States Statutes, thirty-one), are hereby conferred on the Secretary of Agriculture, to be exercised exclusively by him. He is hereby authorized and directed, from time to time, to establish such rules and regulations concerning the exportation and transportation of live stock from any place within the United States where he may have reason to believe such diseases may exist into and through any State or Territory, including the Indian Territory, and into and through the District of Columbia and to foreign countries, as he may deem necessary, and all such rules and regulations shall have the force of law. Whenever any inspector or assistant inspector of the Bureau of Animal Industry shall issue a certificate showing that such officer had inspected any cattle or other live stock which were about to be shipped, driven, or transported from such locality to another, as above stated, and had found them free from Texas or splenic fever infection, pleuropneumonia, foot and mouth disease, or any other infectious, contagious, or communicable disease, such animals, so inspected and certified, may be shipped, driven, or transported from such place into and through any State or Territory, including the Indian Territory, and into and through the District of Columbia, or they may be exported from the United States without further inspection or the exaction of fees of any kind, except such as may at any time be ordered or exacted by the Secretary of Agriculture; and all such animals shall at all times be under the control and supervision of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Agricultural Department for the purposes of such inspection. [32 Stat. L. 791.]

Sections 4 and 5 of the Act of May 29, 1884, ch. 60, mentioned in the text, are given supra, p. 409.

Validity of regulations.—Quarantine regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture acting under cover of this section are void as in excess of the powers conferred by this Act, where, on their face, they apply as well to intrastate as to interstate commerce. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. McKendree, (1906) 203 U. S. 514, 27 S. Ct. 153, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 298.

Shipment of animals free from disease.—This section does not prohibit the shipment of animals free from disease, and the Secretary of Agriculture has no power thereunder to make rules and regulations with reference to such animals, the violation of which alone would constitute a crime. U. S. v. Hoover, (1904) 133 Fed. 950.

State laws.—In Asbell v. Kansas, (1908) 209 U. S. 251, 28 S. Ct. 485, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 778, it was held that nothing in the provision of this Act, that when an inspector of the Bureau of Animal Industry has issued a certificate that he has inspected animals and found them free from disease such animals may be introduced into any state without further inspection or exaction of fees of any kind except such as may be ordered or exacted by the Secretary of Agriculture, precluded the enactment of Kansas Laws 1905, ch. 495, § 27, making it a misdemeanor for any person to transport into that state cattle from any point south, except for immediate slaughter, without having first caused them to be inspected and passed as healthy by the proper state officials, or by the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Interior Department of the United States.

But in Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Frye-Bruhn Co., (1910) 184 Fed. 15, it was held that the provisions of orders Nos. 106 and 107 of the Secretary of Agriculture, promulgated March 10 and 13, 1903, respectively, under authority of this Act, establishing quarantine districts for cattle and regulations to be observed by carriers in the shipment of cattle from such districts, and which provided (order No. 107, § 4) that "cattle from said area may be transported by rail or boat for immediate slaughter" subject to such regulations, had the force of law and were paramount with respect to interstate shipments; and that the Washington statute (Code Wash. 1896, §§ 3216, 6431), which absolutely prohibits the introduction of Texas cattle into the state, without regard to their condition, so far as it conflicts with such federal regulations was void.

Effect of departmental regulations on state laws.—A regulation promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture under the authority of this Act, which is directed to the transportation of cattle from quar-antined states, and which in terms recognizes restrictions imposed by the state of destination, does not invalidate—at least, where no quarantined areas are involved—the provision of Kansas Laws 1905, ch. 495, § 27, making it a misdemeanor for any person to transport into the state cattle from any point south, except for immediate slaughter, without having first caused them to be inspected and passed as healthy by the proper state officials, or by the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Interior Department of the United States. Asbell v. Kansas, (1908) 209 U. S. 251, 28 S. Ct. 485, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 778.

SEC. 2. [Regulations to prevent contagious diseases, etc.] That the Secretary of Agriculture shall have authority to make such regulations and take such measures as he may deem proper to prevent the introduction or dissemination of the contagion of any contagious, infectious, or communicable disease of animals from a foreign country into the United States or from one State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia to another, and to seize, quarantine, and dispose of any hay, straw, forage, or similar material, or any meats, hides, or other animal products coming from an infected foreign country to the United States, or from one State or Territory or the District of Columbia in transit to another State or Territory or the District of Columbia whenever in his judgment such action is advisable in order to guard against the introduction or spread of such contagion. [32 Stat. L. 792.]

SEC. 3. [Penalty.] That any person, company, or corporation knowingly violating the provisions of this Act or the orders or regulations made in pursuance thereof shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [32 Stat. L. 792.]

[SEC. 1.] [Leaves of absence to outside employees.] * * * The employees of the Bureau of Animal Industry outside of the city of Washington may hereafter, in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, without additional expense to the Government, be granted leaves of absence not to exceed fifteen days in any one year: [33 Stat. L. 865.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of March 3, 1905, ch. 1405. Similar provisions are contained in the Appropriation Acts for previous years.

[SEC. 1.] [Serums, etc., for treatment of diseases of animals.] * * * That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to purchase in the open market samples of all tuberculin serums, antitoxins, or analogous products, of foreign or domestic manufacture, which are sold in the United States for the detection, prevention, treatment, or cure of diseases of domestic animals, to test the same and to publish the results of said tests in such manner as he may deem best. [35 Stat. L. 254.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of May 23, 1908, ch. 192.

[SEC. 1.] [Diseased cattle—fences on international boundary, to keep out.] * * * Hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture may permit the erection of fences along international boundary lines, but entirely within the territory of the United States, for the purpose of keeping out diseased animals. [36 Stat. L. 440.]

This is from the Agricultural Appropriation Act of May 26, 1910, ch. 256.

An Act Appropriating funds for the purpose of the investigation, treatment, and eradication of hog cholera and dourine.

[Hog cholera and dourine—investigation and eradication—viruses, serums, toxins, etc.—trade in—inspections.] That there is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriate the sum of $600,000 or so much thereof as in the opinion of the Secretary of Agriculture may be necessary, to be expended, by and under his direction, for the purpose of the investigation, treatment, and eradication of hog cholera and dourine, including the employment of assistants, clerks, and other persons, and the payment of all other necessary expenses, in the city of Washington and elsewhere: Provided, That not less than $50,000 of said sum shall be available for expenditure in carrying on examinations and inspections authorized by the Act approved March fourth, nineteen hundred and thirteen (Thirty-seventh Statutes at Large, pages eight hundred and thirty-two and eight hundred and thirty-three), regulating the preparation, sale, barter, exchange, shipment, and importation of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products for use in the treatment of domestic animals, and for the enforcement of the provisions, including detection of violations, of said Act and the regulations made thereunder: And provided further, That not more than $100,000 of the sum hereinbefore provided shall be used for the investigation, treatment, and eradication of the disease known as dourine. [38 Stat. L. 290.]

For the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 145, mentioned in the text, see the title FOOD AND DRUGS.

Sec. 1624. [Articles established.] The Navy of the United States shall be governed by the following articles: [R. S.]

The articles for the government of the navy were formulated by the Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 600. They have been amended and added to from time to time.

The constitutional authority of Congress "to make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces" includes the power to provide for trial and punishment by military courts without a jury. In re Bogart, (1873) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 396.

The words "when in actual service in time of war or public danger," in the fifth article of amendment of the Constitution of the United States, refer only to the militia, and not to the army or navy of the United States. Johnson v. Sayre, (1895) 158 U. S. 109, 15 S. Ct. 773, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 914; In re Bogart, (1873) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 396.

It is improper for civil officers to arrest a naval officer in order to his trial before court-martial while adequate power resides in the Secretary of the Navy to cause his arrest. (1897) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 504.

Abolition of death penalty.—The Act of Jan. 15, 1897 (29 Stat. L. 487), abolishing the death penalty, excepts offenses specified under this section. Motes v. U. S., (1900) 178 U. S. 458, 20 S. Ct. 993, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1150.

The written record of the proceedings before a naval court-martial becomes the record of an adjudicated case, and any limitation of the right to an exemplified copy of such a record, when properly applied for by any person having an interest in it, would be contrary to law. The Secretary of the Navy, and any of his subordinates, are bound in law to testify in regard to the contents of such a record when required to give it by a commission of a state court. (1865) 11 Op. Atty.-Gen. 137.

Navy regulations when directly approved by Congress have the absolute force of law when founded on the President's constitutional powers as commander-in-chief, or are consistent with or supplementary to the Acts of Congress in reference to the navy. Smith v. Whitney, (1886) 116 U. S. 167, 6 S. Ct. 670, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 601; Ex p. Reed, (1879) 100 U. S. 13, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 538.

Who are in the naval service and subject to court-martial.—Rank, title, pay, and retirement are the indicia of military, not civil, office. Though chief of a bureau in the navy department, the paymaster-general of the navy is a person in the naval service and subject to court-martial jurisdiction. Smith v. U. S., (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 143.

A paymaster's clerk, having been appointed in accordance with the navy regulations, by the Secretary of the Navy, with the approval of the President, is a person in the naval service and subject to court-martial jurisdiction. Johnson v. Sayre, (1895) 158 U. S. 109, 15 S. Ct. 773, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 914; Ex p. Reed, (1879) 100 U. S. 13, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 538; In re Bogart, (1873) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 396; In re Thomas, (1869) 3 Am. L. Rev. 779, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,888. And so is a paymaster. Smith v. Whitney, (1886) 116 U. S. 167, 6 S. Ct. 570, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 601.

Clerks of naval officers (in this case, of a paymaster) doing duty on land in time of peace, appointed from civil life for periods terminable at the will of such officers, and liable to return to civil life whenever such employment ceases, are civilians, and not subject to court-martial jurisdiction. Ex p. Van Vranken, (1891) 47 Fed. 888.

Acts regulating the pay and emoluments of "officers" of the navy apply to a paymaster's clerk. Hendee v. U. S., (1887) 22 Ct. Cl. 134.

Civil engineers in the navy are subject to the jurisdiction of naval courts-martial as being persons "belonging to the navy." (1876) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 597.

Students at the naval academy constitute in some capacity a part of the navy. See R. S. sec. 1556, and Act of June 23, 1874 (18 Stat. L. 203). Baker v. U. S., (1888) 23 Ct. Cl. 181, affirmed 125 U. S. 646, 8 S. Ct. 1022, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 824.

The marine corps is part of the military service, primarily belonging to the navy, with liability to be ordered to service in connection with the army, and in that case under the command of army officers. U. S. v. Dunn, (1887) 120 U. S. 249, 7 S. Ct. 507, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 667; (1890) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 616; (1861) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 116, 129. But, except in the matter of discipline, it is a distinct and independent organization, with its own rules as to pay, rations, etc. (see R. S.

secs. 1596-1623). Reid v. U. S., (1893) 18 Ct. Cl. 625.

Seamen employed on vessels in the coast and geodetic survey are governed by these articles. (1888) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 182.

For an offense committed by one while in the naval service, the jurisdiction of the naval court-martial may be exercised after the connection of the accused with the service has been severed and he has become a private citizen. In re Bogart, (1873) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 396.

A court-martial has no jurisdiction over a person not in the military service, and a decision of such a tribunal, in a case clearly without its jurisdiction, cannot protect the officer who executes it. The court and the officer are all trespassers. Wise v. Withers, (1806) 3 Cranch 331, 2 U. S. (L. ed.) 457. See Dynes v. Hoover, (1857) 20 How. 65, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 838.

Review of courts-martial by civil courts. — There must be jurisdiction in the court-martial to give the judgment rendered as well as to hear and determine the cause. Ex p. Reed, (1879) 100 U. S. 13, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 538; Dynes v. Hoover, (1857) 20 How. 65, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 838.

When a court-martial has jurisdiction of the person accused and of the offense charged, and has acted within the scope of its lawful powers, its decision and sentence cannot be reviewed or set aside by the civil courts by writ of habeas corpus or otherwise. Johnson v. Sayre, (1895) 158 U. S. 109, 15 S. Ct. 773, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 914; In re Crain, (1897) '84 Fed. 788; In re Bogart, (1873) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 396.

A writ of prohibition will not issue from a civil court to a court-martial unless it clearly appears that the court is about to exceed its jurisdiction. Smith v. Whitney, (1886) 116 U. S. 167, 6 S. Ct. 570, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 601.

Pleas of former conviction and the bar of the statute of limitations are matters of defense and are questions for the determination of the court-martial, and cannot be reviewed by the civil courts. In re Bogart, (1873) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 396.

ARTICLE 1. [Commander's duties of supervision and correction.] The commanders of all fleets, squadrons, naval stations, and vessels belonging to the Navy, are required to show in themselves a good example of virtue, honor, patriotism, and subordination; to be vigilant in inspecting the conduct of all persons who are placed under their command; to guard against and suppress all dissolute and immoral practices, and to correct, according to the laws and regulations of the Navy, all persons who are guilty of them; and any such commander who offends against this article shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 600.

ART. 2. [Divine service.] The commanders of vessels and naval stations to which chaplains are attached shall cause divine service to be performed on Sunday, whenever the weather and other circumstances allow it to be done; and it is earnestly recommended to all officers, seamen, and others in the naval service diligently to attend at every performance of the worship of Almighty God. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 600.

ART. 3. [Irreverent behavior.] Any irreverent or unbecoming behavior during divine service shall be punished as a general or summary court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 600.

ART. 4. [Offenses punishable by death.] The punishment of death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may adjudge, may be inflicted on any person in the naval service —

First. [Mutiny.] Who makes, or attempts to make, or unites with any mutiny or mutinous assembly, or, being witness to or present at any mutiny, does not do his utmost to suppress it; or, knowing of any mutinous assembly or of any intended mutiny, does not immediately communicate his knowledge to his superior or commanding officer;

Second. [Disobedience of orders.] Or disobeys the lawful orders of his superior officer;

Third. [Striking superior officer.] Or strikes or assaults, or attempts or threatens to strike or assault, his superior officer while in the execution of the duties of his office;

Fourth. [Intercourse with an enemy.] Or gives any intelligence to, or holds or entertains any intercourse with, an enemy or rebel, without leave from the President, the Secretary of the Navy, the commander-in-chief of the fleet, the commander of the squadron, or, in case of a vessel acting singly, from his commanding officer;

Fifth. [Messages from an enemy.] Or receives any message or letter from an enemy or rebel, or, being aware of the unlawful reception of such message or letter, fails to take the earliest opportunity to inform his superior or commanding officer thereof;

Sixth. [Desertion in time of war.] Or, in time of war, deserts or entices others to desert;

Seventh. [Deserting trust.] Or, in time of war, deserts or betrays his trust, or entices or aids others to desert or betray their trust;

Eighth. [Sleeping on watch.] Or sleeps upon his watch;

Ninth. [Leaving station.] Or leaves his station before being regularly relieved;

Tenth. [Willful stranding or injury of vessel.] Or intentionally or willfully suffers any vessel of the Navy to be stranded, or run upon rocks or shoals, or improperly hazarded; or maliciously or willfully injures any vessel of the Navy, or any part of her tackle, armament, or equipment, whereby the safety of the vessel is hazarded or the lives of the crew exposed to danger;

Eleventh. [Unlawful destruction of public property.] Or unlawfully sets on fire, or otherwise unlawfully destroys, any public property not at the time in possession of an enemy, pirate, or rebel;

Twelfth. [Striking flag or treacherously yielding.] Or strikes or attempts to strike the flag to an enemy or rebel, without proper authority, or, when engaged in battle, treacherously yields or pusillanimously cries for quarters;

Thirteenth. [Cowardice in battle.] Or, in time of battle, displays cowardice, negligence, or disaffection, or withdraws from or keeps out of danger to which he should expose himself;

Fourteenth. [Deserting duty in battle.] Or, in time of battle, deserts his duty or station, or entices others to do so;

Fifteenth. [Neglecting orders to prepare for battle.] Or does not properly observe the orders of his commanding officer, and use his utmost exertions to carry them into execution, when ordered to prepare for or join in, or when actually engaged in, battle, or while in sight of an enemy;

Sixteenth. [Neglecting to clear for action.] Or, being in command of a fleet, squadron, or vessel acting singly, neglects, when an engagement is probable, or when an armed vessel of an enemy or rebel is in sight, to prepare and clear his ship or ships for action;

Seventeenth. [Neglecting to join on signal for battle.] Or does not, upon signal for battle, use his utmost exertions to join in battle;

Eighteenth. [Failing to encourage the men to fight.] Or fails to encourage, in his own person, his inferior officers and men to fight courageously;

Nineteenth. [Failing to seek encounter.] Or does not do his utmost to overtake and capture or destroy any vessel which it is his duty to encounter;

Twentieth. [Failing to afford relief in battle.] Or does not afford all practicable relief and assistance to vessels belonging to the United States or their allies when engaged in battle. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 600; Act of April 23, 1800, ch. 33, 2 Stat. L. 47.

ART. 5. [Spies.] All persons who, in time of war, or of rebellion against the supreme authority of the United States, come or are found in the capacity of spies, or who bring or deliver any seducing letter or message from an enemy or rebel, or endeavor to corrupt any person in the Navy to betray his trust, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may adjudge. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 602; Act of Feb. 13, 1862, ch. 25, 12 Stat. L. 340; Act of March 3, 1863, ch. 75, 12 Stat. L. 737.

Punishment under article 5.—For an offense under this article the prisoner may be sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary of the District of Columbia, at hard labor for a term of years. Toombs's Case, (1861) 10 Op. Atty-Gen. 158.

ART. 6. [Murder.] If any person belonging to any public vessel of the United States commits the crime of murder without the territorial jurisdiction thereof, he may be tried by court-martial and punished with death. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 602.

ART. 7. [Imprisonment in penitentiary.] A naval court-martial may adjudge the punishment of imprisonment for life, or for a stated term, at hard labor, in any case where it is authorized to adjudge the punishment of death; and such sentences of imprisonment and hard labor may be carried into execution in any prison or penitentiary under the control of the United States, or which the United States may be allowed, by the legislature of any State, to use; and persons so imprisoned in the prison or penitentiary of any State or Territory shall be subject, in all respects, to the same discipline and treatment as convicts sentenced by the courts of the State or Territory in which the same may be situated. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 602.

The authority to sentence to confinement in a public penitentiary is confined to crimes punishable with death, Ex p. Van Vranken, (1891) 47 Fed. 888; though the Attorney-General, J. S. Black (Crowell's Case, (1857) 9 Op. Atty.-Gen. 80), said that there was nothing illegal in sentencing a seaman to three years' confinement, at hard labor, in the penitentiary, in the District of Columbia, to be deprived of his pay, and to be marked with the letter D on his right hip, for striking, disobeying, and treating with contempt his superior officer. See Toombs's case, (1861) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 158; Lendeneg's Case, (1868) 12 Op. Atty.-Gen. 510.

ART. 8. [Offenses punishable at discretion of court-martial.] Such punishment as a court-martial may adjudge may be inflicted on any person in the Navy —

First. [Profanity, falsehood, &c.] Who is guilty of profane swearing, falsehood, drunkenness, gambling, fraud, theft, or any other scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals;

Second. [Cruelty.] Or is guilty of cruelty toward, or oppression or maltreatment of, any person subject to his orders;

Third. [Quarreling.] Or quarrels with, strikes, or assaults, or uses provoking or reproachful words, gestures, or menaces toward, any person in the Navy;

Fourth. [Fomenting quarrels.] Or endeavors to foment quarrels between other persons in the Navy;

Fifth. [Duels.] Or sends or accepts a challenge to fight a duel or acts as a second in a duel;

Sixth. [Contempt of superior officer.] Or treats his superior officer with contempt, or is disrespectful to him in language or deportment, while in the execution of his office;

Seventh. [Combinations against superior officer.] Or joins in or abets any combination to weaken the lawful authority of, or lessen the respect due to, his commanding officer;

Eighth. [Mutinous words.] Or utters any seditious or mutinous words;

Ninth. [Neglect of orders.] Or is negligent or careless in obeying orders, or culpably inefficient in the performance of duty.

Tenth. [Preventing destruction of public property.] Or does not use his best exertions to prevent the unlawful destruction of public property by others;

Eleventh. [Negligent stranding.] Or, through inattention or negligence, suffers any vessel of the Navy to be stranded, or run upon a rock or shoal, or hazarded;

Twelfth. [Negligence in convoy service.] Or, when attached to any vessel appointed as convoy to any merchant or other vessels, fails diligently to perform his duty, or demands or exacts any compensation for his services, or maltreats the officers or crews of such merchant or other vessels;

Thirteenth. [Receiving articles for freight.] Or takes, receives, or permits to be received, on board the vessel to which he is attached, any goods or merchandise, for freight, sale, or traffic, except gold, silver, or jewels, for freight or safe-keeping; or demands or receives any compensation for the receipt or transportation of any other article than gold, silver, or jewels, without authority from the President or Secretary of the Navy;

Fourteenth. [False muster.] Or knowingly makes or signs, or aids, abets, directs, or procures the making or signing of, any false muster;

Fifteenth. [Waste of public property, &c.] Or wastes any ammunition, provisions, or other public property, or, having power to prevent it, knowingly permits such waste;

Sixteenth. [Plundering on shore.] Or, when on shore, plunders, abuses, or maltreats any inhabitant, or injures his property in any way;

Seventeenth. [Refusing to apprehend offenders.] Or refuses, or fails to use, his utmost exertions to detect, apprehend, and bring to punishment all offenders, or to aid all persons appointed for that purpose;

Eighteenth. [Refusing to receive prisoners.] Or, when rated or acting as master-at-arms, refuses to receive such prisoners as may be committed to his charge, or, having received them, suffers them to escape, or dismisses them without orders from the proper authority;

Nineteenth. [Absence from duty without leave.] Or is absent from his station or duty without leave, or after his leave has expired;

Twentieth. [Violating general orders or regulations.] Or violates or refuses obedience to any lawful general order or regulation issued by the Secretary of the Navy;

Twenty-first. [Desertion in time of peace.] Or, in time of peace, deserts or attempts to desert, or aids and entices others to desert;

Twenty-second. [Harboring deserters.] Or receives or entertains any deserter from any other vessel of the Navy, knowing him to be such, and does not, with all convenient speed, give notice of such deserter to the commander of the vessel to which he belongs, or to the commander-in-chief, or to the commander of the squadron. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 602; Act of April 23, 1800, ch. 33, 2 Stat. L. 47.

Inclusion of fine and imprisonment in article 14 does not by implication operate as a limitation on the punishment in this article, and the court may impose a sentence of forfeiture of pay and imprisonment. Williams v. U. S., (1889) 24 Ct. Cl. 306.

When the punishment is left to the discretion of the court-martial, the punishment of dismissal from the squadron must be considered legitimate. (1829) 2 Op. Atty.-Gen. 297.

A court-martial may render a partial verdict, as when there is an acquittal on one count and a verdict of guilty on another, or when the charge is of a higher degree, including one of a lesser; where one is charged with desertion he may be found guilty of attempting to desert. Dynes v. Hoover, (1857) 20 How. 65, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 838.

When the sentence declares a forfeiture of pay and allowances except certain specially named amounts, if the amount forfeited is not stated on the face of the sentence, but is capable of being exactly ascertained, the sentence is not void for uncertainty. Williams v. U. S., (1889) 24 Ct. Cl. 306.

For desertion, the court may adjudge forfeiture of bounty in addition to other penalties. Engagement at Manila Bay, (1901) 36 Ct. Cl. 206.

Sufficiency of charge for false swearing. — In Ex p. Dickey, (D. C. Me. 1913) 204 Fed. 322, the petitioner sought a writ of habeas corpus to review the validity of his imprisonment under a judgment of a naval court-martial on a charge of "scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals." The writ was denied. The court said: "The petition of William W. Dickey shows that on the 2d day of October, 1912, he was an enlisted man in the United States navy, occupying the position of chief commissary steward on board the United States battleship Kansas; that he continued to be in such service of the United States up to December 2, 1912, when a court-martial was held on board the United States ship Louisiana; that he was tried before such court-martial for scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals; that the specification under this charge set out at length a statement sworn to by the petitioner on the 13th day of November, 1912, before Commander Frederick B. Bassett, Jr., acting as commanding officer of the United States ship Utah, in which statement the petitioner swore that he had at several times, detailed therein, practiced frauds on the United States in conjunction with representatives of certain government contractors named therein, from whom supplies for the navy were purchased, and that such frauds had netted him money, amounting to about $2,000 in certain cases named in said sworn statement; that thereafterwards, on November 19, 1912, while a witness under oath before a duly constituted court of inquiry, the petitioner gave certain testimony, set out in the specification, in which he denied the truth of his previous statement, and testified that he had never at any time received any money from contractors, and that his former statement was untrue. The specification then concludes: 'And that the said William W. Dickey, chief commissary steward United States navy, did by submitting the said written statement or confession, and by testifying as above shown, make statements inconsistent the one with the other, and one of which must have been, and was, known by him to be false and misleading, and intended to deceive and defeat the ends of justice.' Upon this charge and specification the court-martial found the petitioner guilty, and sentenced him to five years at hard labor, deprivation of his pay for that time, and dishonorable discharge at the end of the five years, the same being under the provisions of article 1797 of the Navy Regulations, as changed by order of the Secretary of the Navy, November 9, 1911. . . . Upon examination of the charge on which the petitioner was tried, it will be found that it did not attempt to charge the petitioner in the court-martial with 'perjury,' which offense is defined under article 14 of the articles for the government of the navy as a distinct offense, namely, the making of an oath to any fact or writing, knowing such oath to be false, for the purpose of obtaining, or aiding others to obtain, the approval or allowance of any claim against the United States, or officer thereof. It is clear that the pleadings upon which the accused was tried in the court-martial alleged a lesser offense than 'perjury.' The offense set up was 'scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals.' Under this charge the specification made a substantial charge of false swearing, although it did not set forth the charge with the clearness and definiteness required in a civil court. This general charge is well known in courts-martial, and authorized by article 8 of the articles for the government of the navy."

Desertion by minor.—The civil courts should not interfere by habeas corpus to discharge a minor under eighteen years of age who has been enlisted in either the military or naval service without the consent of his parents or guardian, if at the time of the presentation of the petition for the writ the minor is under arrest and held for trial by court-martial on a charge of desertion or fraudulent enlistment or other charge cognizable by a military or naval court. U. S. v. Reaves, (1903) 126 Fed. 127; Dillingham v. Booker, (1908) 163 Fed. 696, 16 Ann. Cas. 127.

ART. 9. [Officers absent without leave may be reduced.] Any officer who absents himself from his command without leave, may, by the sentence of a court-martial, be reduced to the rating of an ordinary seaman. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of May 16, 1864, ch. 86, 13 Stat. L. 75.

ART. 10. [Desertion by resignation.] Any commissioned officer of the Navy or Marine Corps who, having tendered his resignation, quits his post or proper duties without leave, and with intent to remain permanently absent therefrom, prior to due notice of the acceptance of such resignation, shall be deemed and punished as a deserter. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of Aug. 5, 1861, ch. 54, 12 Stat. L. 316.

ART. 11. [Dealing in supplies on private account.] No person in the naval service shall procure stores or other articles or supplies for, and dispose thereof to, the officers or enlisted men on vessels of the Navy, or at navy-yards or naval stations, for his own account or benefit. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of Aug. 26, 1842, ch. 206, 5 Stat. L. 535.

ART. 12. [Importing dutiable goods in public vessels.] No person connected with the Navy shall, under any pretense, import in a public vessel any article which is liable to the payment of duty. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 30, 1846, ch. 74, 9 Stat. L. 44.

ART. 13. [Distilled spirits only as medical stores.] Distilled spirits shall be admitted on board of vessels of war only upon the order and under the control of the medical officers of such vessels, and to be used only for medical purposes. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 14, 1862, ch. 164, 12 Stat. L. 565.

ART. 14. [Certain crimes of fraud against the United States.] Fine and imprisonment, or such other punishment as a court-martial may adjudge, shall be inflicted upon any person in the naval service of the United States —

[Presenting false claims.] Who presents or causes to be presented to any person in the civil, military, or naval service thereof, for approval or payment, any claim against the United States or any officer thereof, knowing such claim to be false or fraudulent; or

[Agreement to obtain payment of false claim.] Who enters into any agreement or conspiracy to defraud the United States by obtaining, or aiding others to obtain, the allowance or payment of any false or fraudulent claim; or

[False papers.] Who, for the purpose of obtaining, or aiding others to obtain, the approval, allowance, or payment of any claim against the United States or against any officer thereof, makes or uses, or procures or advises the making or use of, any writing, or other paper, knowing the same to contain any false or fraudulent statement; or

[Perjury.] Who, for the purpose of obtaining, or aiding others to obtain, the approval, allowance, or payment of any claim against the United States or any officer thereof, makes, or procures or advises the making of, any oath to any fact or to any writing or other paper, knowing such oath to be false; or

[Forgery.] Who, for the purpose of obtaining, or aiding others to obtain, the approval, allowance, or payment of any claim against the United States or any officer thereof, forges or counterfeits, or procures or advises the forging or counterfeiting of, any signature upon any writing or other paper, or uses, or procures or advises the use of, any such signature, knowing the same to be forged or counterfeited; or

[Delivering less property than receipt calls for.] Who, having charge, possession, custody, or control of any money or other property of the United States, furnished or intended for the naval service thereof, knowingly delivers, or causes to be delivered, to any person having authority to receive the same, any amount thereof less than that for which he receives a certificate or receipt; or

[Giving receipts without knowing truth of.] Who, being authorized to make or deliver any paper certifying the receipt of any money or other property of the United States, furnished or intended for the naval service thereof, makes, or delivers to any person, such writing, without having full knowledge of the truth of the statements therein contained, and with intent to defraud the United States; or

[Stealing, wrongfully selling, &c.] Who steals, embezzles, knowingly and willfully misappropriates, applies to his own use or benefit, or wrongfully and knowingly sells or disposes of any ordnance, arms, equipments, ammunition, clothing, subsistence stores, money or other property of the United States, furnished or intended for the military or naval service thereof; or

[Buying public military property.] Who knowingly purchases, or receives in pledge for any obligation or indebtedness, from any other person who is a part of or employed in said service, any ordnance, arms, equipments, ammunition, clothing, subsistence stores, or other property of the United States, such other person not having lawful right to sell or pledge the same; or

[Other fraud.] Who executes, attempts, or countenances any other fraud against the United States.

[Liability after leaving service.] And if any person, being guilty of any of the offenses described in this article while in the naval service, receives his discharge, or is dismissed from the service, he shall continue to be liable to be arrested and held for trial and sentence by a court-martial, in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had not received such discharge nor been dismissed. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of March 2, 1863, ch. 67, 12 Stat. L. 696, 697; Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 602.

Confinement in penitentiary.—One convicted of an offense made punishable by this article cannot be sentenced to confinement in a public penitentiary; the provisions of article 7 only apply to cases in which the court has the authority to impose a sentence of death. Ex p. Van Vranken, (1891) 47 Fed. 888.

Embezzlement.—The wilful use of government funds by a pay officer of the navy for the purpose of cashing a certificate of deposit as an accommodation to a personal friend constitutes embezzlement under this article. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 563. So also the wilful withdrawing of public funds by a pay officer of the navy for his personal use while absent from his station of duty, even though there be no intention on his part to defraud the United States, and the funds withdrawn are subsequently replaced, is a violation of this article. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 563. Similarly, the overpayment by a pay officer of the navy to himself from public funds, where the officer is guilty of such negligence or indifference as to indicate a wilful disregard of the duties imposed upon him by law with respect to safe-keeping of the moneys in his charge, is in violation of this article. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 563.

ART. 15. The commanding officer of every vessel in the Navy entitled to or claiming an award of prize-money shall, as soon as it may be practicable after the capture, transmit to the Navy Department a complete list of the officers and men of his vessel entitled to share, stating therein the quality of each person rating; and every commanding officer who offends against this article shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 607.

This article was superseded by section 13 of an Act of March 3, 1899, ch. 413, 30 Stat. L. 1007, entitled "An Act to reorganize and increase the efficiency of the per sonnel of the Navy and Marine Corps of the United States," which expressly repealed all provisions of law authorizing the distribution or payment of prize-money or bounties.

ART. 16. [Removing property from a prize.] No person in the Navy shall take out of a prize, or vessel seized as a prize, any money, plate, goods, or any part of her equipment, unless it be for the better preservation thereof, or unless such articles are absolutely needed for the use of any of the vessels or armed forces of the United States, before the same are adjudged lawful prize by a competent court; but the whole, without fraud, concealment, or embezzlement, shall be brought in, in order that judgment may be passed thereon; and every person who offends against this article shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 607.

Allowing officer to go home in command of prize.—Whether the necessities of the public service will allow the commander, in a time of war, upon a remote station, to spare one of his officers to go home in command of a prize, is a matter depending on his discretion, provided he exercises reasonable discretion and acts in good faith. Jecker v. Montgomery, (1855) 18 How. 110, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 311.

ART. 17. [Maltreating persons taken on a prize.] If any person in the Navy strips off the clothes of, or pillages, or in any manner maltreats, any person taken on board a prize, he shall suffer such punishment as a court-martial may adjudge. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 607.

Recovery of damages.—As well as the punishment here prescribed, the persons suffering indignities at the hands of the captors may recover damages, provided that there was no mutual recrimination to provoke the improper conduct. The Schooner Lively, (1812) 1 Gall. (U. S.) 315.

ART. 18. [Returning fugitives from service.] If any officer or person in the naval service employs any of the forces under his command for the purpose of returning any fugitive from service or labor, he shall be dismissed from the service. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

ART. 19. [Enlisting deserters, minors, &c.] Any officer who knowingly enlists into the naval service any person who has deserted in time of war from the naval or military service of the United States, or any insane or intoxicated person, or any minor between the ages of fourteen and eighteen years, without the consent of his parents or guardian, or any minor under the age of fourteen years, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1624. 37 Stat. L. 356.]

This article was amended to read as above by the latter part of section 2 of the Act of Aug. 22, 1912, ch. 336. The original provision was as follows: "ART. 19. Any officer who knowingly enlists into the naval service any deserter from the naval or military service of the United States, or any insane or intoxicated person, or any minor between the ages of fifteen and eighteen years, without the consent of his parents or guardian, or any minor under the age of fifteen years, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct." [R. S. sec. 1624.] Act of March 3, 1835, ch. 79, 13 Stat. L. 490; amended by the Act of May 12, 1879, ch. 5, 21 Stat. L. 3. The minimum age of enlistment was formerly sixteen, and the punishment was dishonorable dismissal from the service of the United States.

Enlistment of minors.—A minor who at the age of nineteen, with the consent of his father, enlisted in the navy, has no right to demand his discharge on coming of age, under the rule which applies to ordinary civil contracts. (1896) 21 Op. Atty-Gen. 327.

This article, and sections 1418 and 1419, R. S., show that the consent of his parent or guardian is not essential to the valid enlistment of a minor over the age of eighteen years. In re Norton, (1899) 98 Fed. 606.

By the express provision of section 1621, R. S., the marine corps is a part of the naval service, and the enlistment of minors over the age of eighteen is valid without the consent of parents or guardians. In re Doyle, (1883) 18 Fed. 369.

ART. 20. [Duties of commanding officers.] Every commanding officer of a vessel in the Navy shall obey the following rules:

First. [Men received on board.] Whenever a man enters on board, the commanding officer shall cause an accurate entry to be made in the ship's books, showing his name, the date, place, and term of his enlistment, the place or vessel from which he was received on board, his rating, his descriptive list, his age, place of birth, and citizenship, with such remarks as may be necessary.

Second. [List of officers, men, and passengers.] He shall, before sailing, transmit to the Secretary of the Navy a complete list of the rated men under his command, showing the particulars set forth in rule one, and a list of officers and passengers, showing the date of their entering. And he shall cause similar lists to be made out on the first day of every third month and transmitted to the Secretary of the Navy as opportunities occur, accounting therein for any casualty which may have happened since the last list.

Third. [Deaths and desertions.] He shall cause to be accurately minuted on the ship's books the names of any persons dying or deserting, and the times at which such death or desertion occurs.

Fourth. [Property of deceased persons.] In case of the death of any officer, man, or passenger on said vessel, he shall take care that the paymaster secures all the property of the deceased, for the benefit of his legal representatives.

Fifth. [Accounts of men received.] He shall not receive on board any man transferred from any other vessel or station to him, unless such man is furnished with an account, signed by the captain and paymaster of the vessel or station from which he came, specifying the date of his entry on said vessel or at said station, the period and term of his service, the sums paid him, the balance due him, the quality in which he was rated, and his descriptive list.

Sixth. [Accounts of men sent from the ship.] He shall, whenever officers or men are sent from his ship, for whatever cause, take care that each man is furnished with a complete statement of his account, specifying the date of his enlistment, the period and term of his service, and his descriptive list. Said account shall be signed by the commanding officer and paymaster.

Seventh. [Inspection of provisions.] He shall cause frequent inspections to be made into the condition of the provisions on his ship, and use every precaution for their preservation.

Eighth. [Health of the crew.] He shall frequently consult with the surgeon in regard to the sanitary condition of his crew, and shall use all proper means to preserve their health. And he shall cause a convenient place to be set apart for sick or disabled men, to which he shall have them removed, with their hammocks and bedding, when the surgeon so advises, and shall direct that some of the crew attend them and keep the place clean.

Ninth. [Attendance at final payment of crew.] He shall attend in person, or appoint a proper officer to attend, when his crew is finally paid off, to see that justice is done to the men and to the United States in the settlement of the accounts.

Tenth. [Articles for the government of the Navy.] He shall cause the articles for the government of the Navy to be hung up in some public part of the ship and read once a month to his ship's company.

[Punishment for offending against this article.] Every commanding officer who offends against the provisions of this article shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 609.

ART. 21. [Authority of officers after loss of vessel.] When the crew of any vessel of the United States are separated from their vessel by means of her wreck, loss, or destruction, all the command and authority given to the officers of such vessel shall remain in full force until such ship's company shall be regularly discharged from or ordered again into service, or until a court-martial or court of inquiry shall be held to inquire into the loss of said vessel. And if any officer or man, after such wreck, loss, or destruction, acts contrary to the discipline of the Navy, he shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 608.

ART. 22. [Offenses not specified.] All offenses committed by persons belonging to the Navy which are not specified in the foregoing articles shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 603.

Punishment for fraudulent enlistment, see infra, p. 440.

Criminal jurisdiction — court-martial.—Article 22 is not intended to confer upon a court-martial general criminal jurisdiction, but only jurisdiction over those offenses (not specified in the preceding articles) which are injurious to the order and discipline of the navy. When a coal-heaver committed an assault upon a second-class fireman on board a vessel in the Thames river, opposite the city of New London, Conn., when the vessel was under way, and the injuries resulted in death, a court-martial might take jurisdiction. (1880) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 579.

The jurisdiction of courts-martial extends to the trial and punishment of acts of officers which tend to bring disgrace and reproach upon the service, whether those acts are done in the performance of military duties, or in a civil position, or in a social relation, or in private business. Smith v. Whitney, (1886) 116 U. S. 167, 6 S. Ct. 570, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 601.

ART. 23. [Offenses committed on shore.] All offenses committed by persons belonging to the Navy while on shore shall be punished in the same manner as if they had been committed at sea. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 603.

ART. 24. [Punishments by order of commander.] No commander of a vessel shall inflict upon a commissioned or warrant officer any other punishment than private reprimand, suspension from duty, arrest, or confinement, and such suspension, arrest, or confinement shall not continue longer than ten days, unless a further period is necessary to bring the offender to trial by a court-martial; nor shall he inflict, or cause to be inflicted, upon any petty officer, or person of inferior rating, or marine, for a single offense, or at any one time, any other than one of the following punishments, namely:

First. Reduction of any rating established by himself.

Second. Confinement, with or without irons, single or double, not exceeding ten days, unless further confinement be necessary, in the case of a prisoner to be tried by court-martial.

By section 8 of an Act of Feb. 16, 1909, ch. 131, 35 Stat. L. 621, the use of irons, single or double, was abolished, except for the purpose of safe custody, or when part of a sentence imposed by a general court-martial. To the same effect was a provision in the Naval Appropriation Act of May 13, 1908, ch. 166, 35 Stat. L. 132.

Third. Solitary confinement, on bread and water, not exceeding five days.

Fourth. Solitary confinement not exceeding seven days.

Fifth. Deprivation of liberty on shore.

Sixth. Extra duties.

No other punishment shall be permitted on board of vessels belonging to the Navy, except by sentence of a general or summary court-martial. All punishments inflicted by the commander, or by his order, except reprimands, shall be fully entered upon the ship's log. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 204, 12 Stat. L. 603.

The provisions of article 26 do not interfere with the power of the commander to reduce seamen to inferior rate for incompetency. Hough's Case, (1862) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 168.

Every act of continued disobedience constitutes a further offense, and authorizes the commander to inflict an additional punishment; where an act of disobedience is persisted in, and endangers the due subordination of others, the commander is justified not only in punishing personally, but in resorting to any reasonable measures necessary to produce submission and safety, and imprisoning a seaman on shore in solitary confinement is justifiable unless accompanied by malice. Wilkes v. Dinsman, (1840) 7 How. 89, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 618; Dinsman v. Wilkes, (1851) 12 How. 390, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 1036.

Construing articles 24, 43, and 44 together, there may be two arrests: first, an arrest in an emergency, or with a view to a preliminary examination; and second, "an arrest for trial." (1890) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 472.

ART. 25. [Punishment by officer temporarily commanding.] No officer who may command by accident, or in the absence of the commanding officer, except when such commanding officer is absent for a time by leave, shall inflict any other punishment than confinement. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of April 23, 1800, ch. 33, 2 Stat. L. 49.

ART. 26. [Summary courts-martial.] Summary courts-martial may be ordered upon petty officers and persons of inferior ratings, by the commander of any vessel, or by the commandant of any navy-yard, naval station, or marine barracks to which they belong, for the trial of offenses which such officer may deem deserving of greater punishment than such commander or commandant is authorized to inflict, but not sufficient to require trial by a general court-martial. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of March 2, 1855, ch. 136, 10 Stat. L. 627.
"Deck courts," see the title NAVY.

ART. 27. [Constitution of summary courts-martial.] A summary court-martial shall consist of three officers not below the rank of ensign, as members, and of a recorder. The commander of a ship may order any officer under his command to act as such recorder. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of March 2, 1855, ch. 136, 10 Stat. L. 628.

ART. 28. [Oath of members and recorder.] Before proceeding to trial the members of a summary court-martial shall take the following oath or affirmation, which shall be administered by the recorder: "I, A B, do swear (or affirm) that I will well and truly try, without prejudice or partiality, the case now depending, according to the evidence which shall be adduced, the laws for the government of the Navy, and my own conscience." After which the recorder of the court shall take the following oath or affirmation, which shall be administered by the senior member of the court: "I, A B, do swear (or affirm) that I will keep a true record of the evidence which shall be given before this court and of the proceedings thereof." [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of March 2, 1855, ch. 136, 10 Stat. L. 628.

ART. 29. [Testimony.] All testimony before a summary court-martial shall be given orally, upon oath or affirmation, administered by the senior member of the court. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of March 2, 1855.

ART. 30. [Punishments by summary courts.] Summary courts-martial may sentence petty officers and persons of inferior ratings to any one of the following punishments, namely:

First. Discharge from the service with bad conduct discharge; but the sentence shall not be carried into effect in a foreign country.

Second. Solitary confinement, not exceeding thirty days, in irons, single or double, on bread and water, or on diminished rations.

Third. Solitary confinement in irons, single or double, not exceeding thirty days.

See the note to clause 2, article 24, supra, p. 430.

Fourth. Solitary confinement not exceeding thirty days.

Fifth. Confinement not exceeding two months.

Sixth. Reduction to next inferior rating.

Seventh. Deprivation of liberty on shore on foreign station.

Eighth. Extra police duties, and loss of pay, not to exceed three months, may be added to any of the above-mentioned punishments. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of March 2, 1855.

ART. 31. [Disrating for incompetency.] A summary court-martial may disrate any rated person for incompetency. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

ART. 32. [Execution of sentence of summary court.] No sentence of a summary court-martial shall be carried into execution until the proceedings and sentence have been approved by the officer ordering the court and by the commander-in-chief, or, in his absence, by the senior officer present. And no sentence of such court which involves loss of pay shall be carried into execution until the proceedings and sentence have been approved by the Secretary of the Navy. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of March 2, 1855; Act of March 2, 1867, ch. 174, 14 Stat. L. 516.

This section was in part superseded by section 17 of an Act of Feb. 16, 1909, ch. 131, entitled "An Act to promote the administration of justice in the Navy," and which is as follows: "That all sentences of summary courts-martial may be carried into effect upon the approval of the senior officer present, and all sentences of deck courts may be carried into effect upon approval of the convening authority or his successor in office." [35 Stat. L. 623.]

ART. 33. [Remission of sentence.] The officer ordering a summary court-martial shall have power to remit, in part or altogether, but not to commute, the sentence of the court. And it shall be his duty either to remit any part or the whole of any sentence, the execution of which would, in the opinion of the surgeon or senior medical officer on board, given in writing, produce serious injury to the health of the person sentenced, or to submit the case again, without delay, to the same or to another summary court-martial, which shall have power, upon the testimony already taken, to remit the former punishment and to assign some other of the authorized punishments in the place thereof. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

By section 9 of an Act of Feb. 16, 1909, ch. 131, 35 Stat. L. 621, entitled "An Act to promote the administration of justice in the Navy," provisions are made for the setting aside of the proceedings or the remission of sentence by the Secretary of the Navy. See the title NAVY.

ART. 34. [Manner of conducting proceedings.] The proceedings of summary courts-martial shall be conducted with as much conciseness and precision as may be consistent with the ends of justice, and under such forms and rules as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy, with the approval of the President, and all such proceedings shall be transmitted in the usual mode to the Navy Department, where they shall be kept on file for a period of two years from date of trial, after which time they may be destroyed in the discretion of the Secretary of the Navy. [35 Stat. L. 622.]

This article was amended to read as above by section 14 of an Act of Feb. 16, 1909, ch. 131, entitled "An Act to promote the administration of justice in the Navy." The original section was as follows: "ART. 34. The proceedings of summary courts-martial shall be conducted with as much conciseness and precision as may be consistent with the ends of justice, and under such forms and rules as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy, with the approval of the President; and all such proceedings shall be transmitted, in the usual mode, to the Navy Department." [R. S. sec. 1624.] Act of March 2, 1855.

ART. 35. [Same punishments by general court-martial.] Any punishment which a summary court-martial is authorized to inflict may be inflicted by a general court-martial. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of March 2, 1855.

ART. 36. [Dismissal of officers.] No officer shall be dismissed from the naval service except by the order of the President or by sentence of a general court-martial; and in time of peace no officer shall be dismissed except in pursuance of the sentence of a general court-martial or in mitigation thereof. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 13, 1866, ch. 176, 14 Stat. L. 92.

Power of President.—This article does not restrict the power of the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to displace officers by the appointment of others in their places. Before the Act of July 13, 1866, the President alone had the right summarily to dismiss officers of the army or navy. Mullan v. U. S., (1891) 140 U. S. 240, 11 S. Ct. 788, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 489; Blake v. U. S., (1880) 103 U. S. 227, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 462.

It only operates to withdraw from the President the power previously existing in him of removing officers at will, and without the concurrence of the Senate. An officer has not a vested interest in his office of which Congress cannot deprive him. An act of Congress providing for the honorable discharge of naval cadets is not in conflict with the contract clause of the Constitution. Crenshaw v. U. S., (1890) 134 U. S. 99, 10 S. Ct. 431, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 825; Harmon v. U. S., (1888) 23 Ct. Cl. 132.

If an order of the executive dismissing an officer of the marine corps had not itself been efficient, the appointment of a successor by the President, by and with the advice of the Senate, would have effected the removal. McElrath's Case, (1876) 12 Ct. Cl. 201.

Dismissal by secretary.—When the Secretary of the Navy, in 1869, wrote to a paymaster that "in consequence of the facts appearing upon the record of the naval general court-martial . . . you are dismissed the naval service," it cannot be deemed an approval and execution of the sentence, but a dismissal from the service by reason of the disclosures made by the record, and this the executive had not the power to order after the passage of the Act of July 13, 1866. Belloc's Case, (1879) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 312.

Civil engineers appointed under section 1413, R. S., are officers of the navy. (1876) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 165.

Cadets at the naval academy are not officers in the naval service, nor in general liable to court-martial, and are consequently entitled to the privilege given by this article to those who are; they may be dismissed for misconduct without trial. (1877) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 634; (1882) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 329.

Acting gunner.—As one appointed an acting gunner on temporary service by the Secretary of the Navy is not an officer, this article does not apply to him, and he may be dismissed at the will of the secretary. (1876) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 564.

Acting master.—One appointed by the Secretary of the Navy "an acting master in the navy, on temporary service," may be dismissed by the secretary, as, in the absence of legislation, the secretary had the power of determining the time at which an appointment expressly temporary should come to an end. (1876) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 560.

ART. 37. [Officer dismissed by the President may demand trial.] When any officer, dismissed by order of the President since 3d March, 1865, makes, in writing, an application for trial, setting forth, under oath that he has been wrongfully dismissed, the President shall, as soon as the necessities of the service may permit, convene a court-martial to try such officer on the charges on which he shall have been dismissed. And if such court-martial shall not be convened within six months from the presentation of such application for trial, or if such court, being convened, shall not award dismissal or death as the punishment of such officer, the order of dismissal by the President shall be void. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of March 3, 1865.

Civil engineers appointed under section 1413, R. S., are officers of the navy. (1876) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 165.

Restoration to service—pay.—Where an officer more than ten years after his dismissal is restored to the service by the finding of a court-martial declaring him innocent of every charge, under the Act of June 22, 1874, ch. 392, § 2, he is not entitled to more than "pay as on leave for six months" from date of dismissal. (1876) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 569.

ART. 38. General courts-martial may be convened by the President, the Secretary of the Navy, or the commander-in-chief of a fleet or squadron; but no commander of a fleet or squadron in the waters of the United States shall convene such court without express authority from the President. [R. S. sec. 1624.] Act of July 17, 1862.

This article was superseded by an Act of Feb. 16, 1909, ch. 131, § 10, infra, p. 440, making other regulations as to the convening of courts-martial.

One designated in the proceedings as "commander in chief" must be presumed, in view of the Regulations for the Government of the Navy, 1896, article 243, to have been in command of a fleet or squadron. A recital in the precept that the court-martial was convened by the admiral by "express authority vested in me by the President of the United States," is sufficient without attaching to the record a copy of the commission, no objection to his authority having been raised during the trial. In re Crain, (1897) 84 Fed. 788.

"Waters of the United States."—The prohibition against the convocation of a general court-martial by the commander of a fleet or squadron without the previous authorization of the President, which is made by article 38, when such fleet or squadron is "in the waters of the United States," applies only to those waters which are within what is termed by the Act of March 3, 1901, ch. 852, 31 Stat. L. 1108 (see the title NAVY), the continental limits of the United States. In other words, the provision in question does not take into view the dominion or sovereignty of the United States over territory beyond the seas and far removed from the seat of government, but contemplates waters within the United States in the stricter and popular sense of the term. The prohibition against the convocation by the commander of a fleet or squadron of a general court-martial, without the previous authorization of the President, was intended to be operative only when the fleet or squadron is in a home port. U. S. v. Smith, (1905) 197 U. S. 386, 25 S. Ct. 489, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 801.

ART. 39. [Constitution of.] A general court-martial shall consist of not more than thirteen nor less than five commissioned officers as members; and as many officers, not exceeding thirteen, as can be convened without injury to the service, shall be summoned on every such court. But in no case, where it can be avoided without injury to the service, shall more than one-half, exclusive of the president, be junior to the officer to be tried. The senior officer shall always preside and the others shall take place according to their rank. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

The provisions of this article are merely directory.—The courts must assume, nothing to the contrary appearing upon the face of the order, that the discretion conferred upon the officer convening the court was properly exercised, and his decision as to the number and rank of the members of a court-martial who could be called together "without injury to the service" cannot be collaterally attacked. Mullan v. U. S., (1891) 140 U. S. 240, 11 S. Ct. 788, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 489; (1888) 23 Ct. Cl. 34.

The order of the officer ordering the court-martial to the captain, designating the members of the court, was a summons within the meaning of this article; and the fact that subsequently in a letter to the captain he substituted another in the place of one of the members of the court is immaterial. In re Crain, (1897) 84 Fed. 788.

Volunteer naval officers, though their appointments may be temporary, are officers of the navy, and competent to serve on general courts-martial. (1863) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 522.

When one of the thirteen members of a court-martial was absent two days, from sickness, and took no part in the judgment and sentence, it was a mere irregularity which was waived by the accused failing to take advantage of it before the approval of the sentence by the President. (1855) 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 98. See art. 47.

ART. 40. [Oaths of members and judge-advocate.] The president of the general court-martial shall administer the following oath or affirmation to the judge-advocate or person officiating as such:

"I, A B, do swear (or affirm) that I will keep a true record of the evidence given to and the proceedings of this court; that I will not divulge or by any means disclose the sentence of the court until it shall have been approved by the proper authority; and that I will not at any time divulge or disclose the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court, unless required so to do before a court of justice in due course of law."

This oath or affirmation being duly administered, each member of the court, before proceeding to trial, shall take the following oath or affirmation, which shall be administered by the judge-advocate or person officiating as such:

"I, A B, do swear (or affirm) that I will truly try without prejudice or partiality, the case now depending, according to the evidence which shall come before the court, the rules for the government of the Navy, and my own conscience; that I will not by any means divulge or disclose the sentence of the court until it shall have been approved by the proper authority; and that I will not at any time divulge or disclose the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court, unless required so to do before a court of justice in due course of law." [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

What naval officers may administer oath.—See Act of Jan. 25, 1895, ch. 45, as amended by Act of March 3, 1901, ch. 834, 31 Stat. L. 1086, under the title NAVY.

Where the warrant convening a court-martial was general, accompanied with a specification of certain persons who were to be tried, a renewed administration of the oath in each case was not necessary. (1829) 2 Op. Atty-Gen. 297.

Swearing in.—When the members and judge-advocate were not respectively sworn in the order prescribed by law, it was a mere irregularity, and an objection came too late after trial. (1871) 13 Op. Atty-Gen. 374.

ART. 41. [Oath of witness.] An oath or affirmation in the following form, shall be administered to all witnesses, before any court-martial, by the president thereof:

"You do solemnly swear (or affirm) that the evidence you shall give in the case now before this court shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and that you will state everything within your knowledge in relation to the charges. So help you God; (or 'this you do under the pains and penalties of perjury.')

" [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

ART. 42. [Contempts of court.] Whenever any person refuses to give his evidence or to give it in the manner provided by these articles, or prevaricates, or behaves with contempt to the court, it shall be lawful for the court to imprison him for any time not exceeding two months. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

Further provisions with respect to witnesses at court-martial proceedings were made by section 12 of an Act of Feb. 16, 1909, ch. 131, 35 Stat. L. 622, entitled "An Act to promote the administration of justice in the Navy," given under the title NAVY.

Courts-martial should adhere to the rules of evidence established in the common-law courts of criminal jurisdiction, and they cannot dispense with the attendance of witnesses and take depositions to be used on the trial, when objected to by the officer preferring the charges. (1830) 2 Op. Atty-Gen. 343.

A court-martial is a court of limited and special jurisdiction, and nothing in the way of control over civilians is to be taken in its favor by implication. Civilians cannot be compelled to appear and testify before a naval court-martial. The provisions of section 1202, R. S., apply only to army courts-martial. (1890) 19 Op. Atty-Gen. 501.

ART. 43. [Charges.] The person accused shall be furnished with a true copy of the charges, with the specifications, at the time he is put under arrest; and no other charges than those so furnished shall be urged against him at the trial, unless it shall appear to the court that intelligence of such other charge had not reached the officer ordering the court when the accused was put under arrest, or that some witness material to the support of such charge was at that time absent and can be produced at the trial; in which case reasonable time shall be given to the accused to make his defense against such new charge. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

This article refers to the time when the accused is arrested for trial by court-martial, and not to the time of any previous arrest, as to await the action of a court of inquiry. Being furnished with a copy of the charge and specification when the Secretary of the Navy informed him of the report of the court of inquiry, four days before the court-martial met, was a sufficient compliance. Johnson v. Sayre, (1895) 158 U. S. 109, 15 S. Ct. 773, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 914; (1890) 19 Op. Att.-Gen. 472.

Failure to furnish the accused with a copy of the charges and specifications goes to the jurisdiction of the court-martial and may be inquired into by a civil court. Sailors on shipboard are beyond the reach of a writ of habeas corpus and without legal advice, and jurisdictional requirements must be followed and appear affirmatively on the record. An entry on the log is not notice to the prisoner, and being first informed of the charges by their being read during the proceedings of the court-martial, is not a compliance with the requirements of this article. Smith v. U. S., (1901) 36 Ct. Cl. 304.

When the record shows that the accused, in reply to an inquiry of the judge-advocate, stated that he had received a copy of the charges and specifications preferred against him, but it does not appear that such copy was served upon him at the time of his arrest, it must be presumed that the copy was served as required by this article, in the absence of any objection at the trial. In re Crain, (1897) 84 Fed. 788.

What charges may be tried.—A specification of charge known to the Secretary of the Navy, where former charges against the accused were prepared by him, before another and distinct court-martial, upon a different and distinct matter, may be tried before a subsequent court-martial. The inhibitions of this article apply only to courts-martial ordered on the application of persons other than the Secretary himself. Voorhees's Case, (1845) 4 Op. Att.-Gen. 410.

Time for service of charges.—The arrest referred to in this article as the time when the person accused is to be furnished with a copy of the charges and specifications on which he is to be tried by a naval court-martial, is not the preliminary arrest or detention while awaiting the action of higher authority to frame charges and specifications and order the court-martial, but is the arrest resulting from the preferring of the charges by the proper authority and the convening of the court-martial. U. S. v. Smith, (1905) 197 U. S. 386, 25 S. Ct. 489, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 801.

ART. 44. [Duty of officer arrested.] Every officer who is arrested for trial shall deliver up his sword to his commanding officer and confine himself to the limits assigned him, on pain of dismissal from the service. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

Construing articles 24, 43, and 44 together, there may be two arrests: first, an arrest in an emergency, or with a view to a preliminary examination; and second, "an arrest for trial." (1890) 19 Op. Att.-Gen. 472.

ART. 45. [Suspension of proceedings.] When the proceedings of any general court-martial have commenced, they shall not be suspended or delayed on account of the absence of any of the members, provided five or more are assembled; but the court is enjoined to sit from day to day, Sundays excepted, until sentence is given, unless temporarily adjourned by the authority which convened it. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

ART. 46. [Absence of members.] No member of a general court-martial shall, after the proceedings are begun, absent himself therefrom, except in case of sickness, or of an order to go on duty from a superior officer, on pain of being cashiered. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

ART. 47. [Witnesses examined in absence of a member.] Whenever any member of a court-martial, from any legal cause, is absent from the court after the commencement of a case, all the witnesses who have been examined during his absence must, when he is ready to resume his seat, be recalled by the court, and the recorded testimony of each witness so examined must be read over to him, and such witness must acknowledge the same to be correct and be subject to such further examination as the said member may require. Without a compliance with this rule, and an entry thereof upon the record, a member who shall have been absent during the examination of a witness shall not be allowed to sit again in that particular case. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

ART. 48. [Suspension of pay.] Whenever a court-martial sentences an officer to be suspended, it may suspend his pay and emoluments for the whole or any part of the time of his suspension. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

ART. 49. [Flogging, branding, &c.] In no case shall punishment by flogging, or by branding, marking, or tattooing on the body be adjudged by any court-martial or be inflicted upon any person in the Navy. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862; Act of June 6, 1872, ch. 316, 17 Stat. L. 261.

Flogging seamen.—Under the Act of a seaman. U. S. v. Cutler, (1853) 1 Curt. March 3, 1835, 4 Stat. L. 776, the mas- (U. S.) 501.
ter of a vessel may be indicted for flogging

ART. 50. [Sentences, how determined.] No person shall be sentenced by a court-martial to suffer death, except by the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present, and in the cases where such punishment is expressly provided in these articles. All other sentences may be determined by a majority of votes. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

See article 63.

ART. 51. [Adequate punishment; recommendation to mercy.] It shall be the duty of a court-martial, in all cases of conviction, to adjudge a punishment adequate to the nature of the offense; but the members thereof may recommend the person convicted as deserving of clemency, and state, on the record, their reasons for so doing. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

See article 63.

ART. 52. [Authentication of judgment.] The judgment of every court-martial shall be authenticated by the signature of the president, and of every member who may be present when said judgment is pronounced, and also of the judge-advocate. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

The death of one of the members of a general court-martial after sentence had been imposed, but before he had appended his signature, does not render the sentence void. (1901) 23 Op. Atty-Gen. 550.

ART. 53. [Confirmation of sentence.] No sentence of a court-martial, extending to the loss of life, or to the dismissal of a commissioned or warrant officer, shall be carried into execution until confirmed by the President.

All other sentences of a general court-martial may be carried into execution on confirmation of the commander of the fleet or officer ordering the court. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

The President's approval of a sentence of the court-martial dismissing an officer is a judicial act, and cannot be reconsidered and revoked after the approval has been consummated by actual dismissal. But the President may purge the offense by a pardon, and while this would not restore the officer to his lost position, it would remove any disabilities he might be under as a consequence of the conviction and dismissal. (1864) 11 Op. Atty-Gen. 19.

Disapproval of officer ordering court-martial.—When the officer who ordered a naval general court-martial forwarded the record of the proceedings to the Navy Department with the indorsement, "Respectfully forwarded with the remark that the finding of the court is not sustained by the evidence, which fails to show that the accused received from the bank the amount of money he is charged with having received," this action is not a disapproval of the finding and sentence. Bellows's Case, (1879) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 312.

A court-martial is not dissolved until the officer convening the court has so ordered. Under the Navy Regulations, before the court is dissolved the officer who convened it may direct it to reconsider its proceedings and sentence, and accordingly the court may inflict a severer punishment. Ex p. Reed, (1879) 100 U. S. 13, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 538; Smith v. Whitney, (1886) 116 U. S. 167, 6 S. Ct. 570, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 601.

An acting master's mate is not a warrant officer of the navy, and the authority to approve the sentence of a court-martial dismissing such an officer from the service was vested in the officer who convened the court. Arnold's Case, (1865) 11 Op. Atty-Gen. 251.

When there has been any irregularity in the proceedings by court-martial, it is waived by the accused failing to take advantage of it before the approval of the sentence by the President; and the approval of the sentence of dismissal is a consummated fact, and if the party be restored to the service it can only be by renomination to the Senate and reappointment. (1855) 7 Op. Atty-Gen. 98; (1854) 6 Op. Atty-Gen. 369.

Review by civil court.—Civil courts are not courts of error to review the proceedings and sentences of courts-martial, where they are legally organized and have jurisdiction of the offense and of the person of the accused, and have complied with the statutory requirements governing their proceedings. Mullan v. U. S., (1909) 212 U. S. 516, 29 S. Ct. 330, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 632.

ART. 54. [Remission and mitigation of sentence.] Every officer who is authorized to convene a general court-martial shall have power, on revision of its proceedings, to remit or mitigate, but not to commute, the sentence of any such court which he is authorized to approve and confirm. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

See the note to article 33.

The Secretary of the Navy has power to approve or confirm the sentence of courts-martial in all cases where those courts are convened or ordered by him according to law, and where the sentences do not extend to loss of life or to dismissal of a commissioned or warrant officer. (1852) 5 Op. Atty-Gen. 508.

An acting master's mate is not a warrant officer of the navy, and the authority to approve the sentence of a court-martial dismissing such an officer from the service was vested in the officer who convened the court. There is no authority in the President to review the sentence after being carried into execution. Arnold's Case, (1865) 11 Op. Atty-Gen. 251.

Where forfeiture or loss of pay is made a part of the sentence of a court-martial, in addition to confinement or suspension from duty, the former may be remitted in whole or in part by the President or Secretary of the Navy without also remitting the latter. (1876) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 175.

"Mitigation of sentence."—Reducing the sentence of a court-martial which dismissed a naval officer from the service, to suspension for five years on one-half sea pay, with a reduction in rank to the foot of the list of officers of his grade, is a mitigation of the sentence within the meaning of this article, that "every officer who is authorized to convene a general court-martial shall have power, on revision of its proceedings, to remit or mitigate, but not to commute, the sentence of any such court which he is authorized to approve and confirm." Mullan v. U. S., (1909) 212 U. S. 516, 29 S. Ct. 330, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 632.

ART. 55. [Courts of inquiry, by whom ordered.] Courts of inquiry may be ordered by the President, the Secretary of the Navy, or the commander of a fleet or squadron. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

ART. 56. [Constitution of.] A court of inquiry shall consist of not more than three commissioned officers as members, and of a judge-advocate, or person officiating as such. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

ART. 57. [Powers of.] Courts of inquiry shall have power to summon witnesses, administer oaths, and punish contempts, in the same manner as courts-martial; but they shall only state facts, and shall not give their opinion, unless expressly required so to do in the order for convening. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

A court-martial is a court of limited and special jurisdiction, and nothing in the way of control over civilians is to be taken in its favor by implication. Civilians cannot be compelled to appear and testify before a naval court-martial. The provisions of section 1202, R. S., apply only to army courts-martial. (1890) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 501.

ART. 58. [Oath of members and judge-advocate.] The judge-advocate, or person officiating as such, shall administer to the members the following oath or affirmation: "You do swear (or affirm) well and truly to examine and inquire, according to the evidence, into the matter now before you, without partiality." After which the president shall administer to the judge-advocate, or person officiating as such, the following oath or affirmation: "You do swear (or affirm) truly to record the proceedings of this court and the evidence to be given in the case in hearing." [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

ART. 59. [Rights of party inquired of.] The party whose conduct shall be the subject of inquiry, or his attorney, shall have the right to cross-examine all the witnesses. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

ART. 60. [Proceedings, how authenticated and used as evidence.] The proceedings of courts of inquiry shall be authenticated by the signature of the president of the court and of the judge-advocate, and shall, in all cases not capital, nor extending to the dismissal of a commissioned or warrant officer, be evidence before a court-martial, provided oral testimony cannot be obtained. [R. S. sec. 1624.]

Act of July 17, 1862.

Waiver of objection to admission of record of court of inquiry.—A court-martial convened at the request of a naval officer to investigate charges against him is not without jurisdiction because such officer was required, as a condition precedent, to waive the protection of this article, by consenting to the admission in evidence of the record of the testimony introduced before a prior court of inquiry, with the right to call additional witnesses. Mullan v. U. S., (1909) 212 U. S. 516, 29 S. Ct. 330, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 632.

ART. 61. [Trials to be within two years of committing offense.] No person shall be tried by court-martial or otherwise punished for any offense, except as provided in the following article, which appears to have been committed more than two years before the issuing of the order for such trial or punishment, unless by reason of having absented himself, or of some other manifest impediment he shall not have been amenable to justice within that period. [28 Stat. L. 680.]

This and the following article 62 were added by the Act of Feb. 25, 1895, ch. 128, 28 Stat. L. 680, entitled "An Act to amend the articles for the government of the navy."

ART. 62. [Trials for desertion in time of peace.] No person shall be tried by court-martial or otherwise punished for desertion in time of peace committed more than two years before the issuing of the order for such trial or punishment, unless he shall meanwhile have absented himself from the United States, or by reason of some other manifest impediment shall not have been amenable to justice within that period, in which case the time of his absence shall be excluded in computing the period of the limitation: Provided, That said limitation shall not begin until the end of the term for which said person was enlisted in the service. [28 Stat. L. 680.]

See note to article 61.

ART. 63. [Punishment for offenses in time of peace.] Whenever, by any of the Articles for the Government of the Navy of the United States, the punishment on conviction of an offense is left to the discretion of the court-martial, the punishment therefor shall not, in time of peace, be in excess of a limit which the President may prescribe. [28 Stat. L. 689.]

This article was added by the Act of Feb. 27, 1895, ch. 137, 28 Stat. L. 689, entitled "An Act to amend the articles for the government of the navy relative to punishment on conviction by court martial."

[SEC. 1.] [Punishment for fraudulent enlistment.] * * * A fraudulent enlistment, and the receipt of any pay or allowance thereunder, is hereby declared an offense against naval discipline and made punishable by general court martial, under article twenty-two of the articles for the government of the Navy; but this provision shall not take effect until sixty days after the passage of this act. [27 Stat. L. 716.]

This is from the Naval Appropriation Act of March 3, 1893, ch. 212.

Enlistment by person under eighteen without consent of parent or guardian.—Where an infant, not eligible to enlistment in the navy, enlisted without the consent of his parents or guardian, it was held that he was not "a person belonging to the navy" and was not punishable as for fraudulent enlistment under this section. Ex p. Lisk, (1906) 145 Fed. 860.

Habeas corpus.—In a habeas corpus proceeding to recover possession of a minor under eighteen years of age, who had enlisted in the navy without the consent of his parents or guardian, it was held to be no answer to the writ that the naval authorities were entitled to retain the custody of the minor for the purpose of having him tried by a naval court martial for fraudulent enlistment. Ex p. Lisk, (1906) 145 Fed. 860.

SEC. 10. [General courts-martial — by whom convened.] That general courts-martial may be convened by the President, by the Secretary of the Navy, by the commander in chief of a fleet or squadron, and by the commanding officer of any naval station beyond the continental limits of the United States. [35 Stat. L. 621.]

This is from an Act of Feb. 16, 1909, ch. 131, and supersedes article 38 given supra, p. 433, note. See notes to article 38.

See WAR DEPARTMENT AND MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

Sec. 1342. [Articles of war.] The armies of the United States shall be governed by the following rules and articles. The word officer, as used therein, shall be understood to designate commissioned officers; the word soldier shall be understood to include non-commissioned officers, musicians, artificers, and privates, and other enlisted men, and the convictions mentioned therein shall be understood to be convictions by court-martial. [R. S.]

Act of April 10, 1806, ch. 20, 2 Stat. L. 359.

Who are in the army service and subject to court-martial.—See articles 61 and 63, and R. S. sec. 1343, infra, p. 481.

Death penalty.—The Act of January 15, 1897 (29 Stat. L., ch. 29, p. 487), abolishing the death penalty, excepts offenses specified under this section. Notes v. U. S., (1900) 178 U. S. 458, 20 S. Ct. 993, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1150.

Army regulations.—Army regulations

when directly approved by Congress have the absolute force of law. When not so approved, they have the force of law when founded on the President's constitutional powers as commander-in-chief, or when consistent with or supplementary to the acts of Congress in reference to the army. Matter of Smith, (1888) 23 Ct. Cl. 452; Swain v. U. S., (1897) 165 U. S. 553, 17 S. Ct. 448, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 823. But they do not control subsequent express statutory provisions. Morrison's Case, (1877) 13 Ct. Cl. 1.

They are intended for the government of the officers of the army and agents of the department, and do not bind the commander-in-chief nor the head of the War Department. U. S. v. Burns, (1870) 12 Wall. 246, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 388; Matter of Smith, (1889) 24 Ct. Cl. 209.

Neither a civil employee as a quartermaster's clerk nor a superintendent of a national cemetery belongs to the military establishment, or is amenable to a court-martial. The persons comprehended by this section are those designated in section 1094, R. S., and persons who do not belong to that establishment, who are not a part of the army as thus fixed and defined, are not subject to such jurisdiction, excepting where they come within either of sections 1343, 1361, 4824, and 4835, R. S., and during service in the field under art. 64. (1878) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 13, 48.

A paymaster's clerk is a person engaged in a particular department of the military service, and altering and forging vouchers will subject him to trial before military tribunals. In re Thomas, (1869) 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,888. See In re Reed, (1879) 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,636.

Cadets form a part of the land forces, though not specifically mentioned in the introductory section, and are subject to the rules and articles of war, and to trial by courts-martial. Babbitt's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 202; (1819) 1 Op. Atty.-Gen. 276; (1855) 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 323.

A military officer detailed for duty in the Freedmen's Bureau, guilty of misappropriation of money or any violation of the rules and regulations governing disbursing officers of the army, may be tried by court-martial. (1873) 14 Op. Atty.-Gen. 268.

When persons who are to render military service have been ascertained by draft or otherwise, and have been lawfully commanded to attend a rendezvous, those who disobey may be subjected by military force to military discipline and organization. McCall's Case, (1863) 5 Phila. (Pa.) 259, 20 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 108.

A soldier serving out a term of imprisonment, though the sentence included discharge from the army, is connected with the military service and subject to military government, and may be tried by court-martial for an offense committed during such imprisonment. (1879) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 292; In re Craig, (1895) 70 Fed. 969; Ex p. Wildman, (1876) 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,653a.

A soldier who has served out his time but who is refused his discharge, while he remains in the barracks is subject to military rules, and cannot violate them except as to any act or exertion the direct object of which should be to depart from the place. U. S. v. Travers, (U. S. Cir. Ct. 1814) 2 Wheel. Crim. (N. Y.) 490.

An army contractor, under the Act of July 17, 1862 (12 Stat. L., p. 596, § 16), is subject to the rules and regulations of the army, and liable to be tried by court-martial for fraud upon the government. U. S. v. Adams, (1868) 7 Wall. 463, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 249; (1866) 2 Ct. Cl. 70; Hill's Case, (1873) 9 Ct. Cl. 178. See Holmes v. Sheridan, (1870) 1 Dill. (U. S.) 351.

Though in Ex p. Henderson, (1878) 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,349, it is said that an act attempting to make a contractor of supplies to the army a part of the land forces, and providing that fraud will render him amenable to court-martial, is unconstitutional.

In (1829) 2 Op. Atty.-Gen. 223, the attorney-general said that the marine corps seemed to belong to the land forces of the military service, as its organization corresponds rather with that of the army than the navy. But the Act of Congress of June 30, 1834 (R. S. 1621), makes the marine corps subject to laws governing the navy, except when serving with the army. The case of U. S. v. Dunn, (1887) 120 U. S. 249, 7 S. Ct. 507, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 667, holds that the chief control of the marine is placed under the Secretary of the Navy unless, by order of the President, it be placed more immediately, for temporary duty, with the army, and under the command of the superior army officers.

A retired officer, one who has not resigned or been dismissed from the service, is still an officer of the United States within the meaning of section 5498, R. S. In re Winthrop, (1895) 31 Ct. Cl. 35.

The "muster out" of volunteers and militia troops cannot be viewed as in itself a discharge of such troops from service. Not until discharge certificates are delivered can they be deemed to have been honorably "discharged." (1870) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 278.

Martial law.—Martial law is neither more nor less than the will of the general who commands the army. It is regulated by no known or established system or code of laws, as it is over and above all of them. Its necessity must be shown affirmatively by any person who assumes to exercise it. Where a person was tried by a military commission, in South Carolina, in November, 1865, for a murder committed in September, 1865, and was convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for life, the Confederate army having surrendered seven months before the trial, he was entitled to be discharged on habeas corpus, as the conviction was illegal for want of jurisdiction in the tribunal. In re Egan, (1866) 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 319.

The President cannot, as Congress alone has the power to, authorize the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus; and in the absence of a valid suspension of the writ, a military officer has no right to detain a person, not subject to the articles of war, for an offense against the law of the United States, except in aid of the civil authority. Ex p. Merryman, (1861) Taney (U. S.) 246; Ex p. Benedict, (1862) 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,292. But in Ex p. Field, (1862) 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 63, the court sustains the authority of the President to proclaim martial law.

During the civil war, a citizen of a loyal state in which the courts were open, who had never been in the military service, and was not a prisoner of war, could not be tried by a military commission, but was entitled to his constitutional right of trial by jury, and should be released on a writ of habeas corpus. Congress could not invest military commissions with such powers. Ex p. Milligan, (1866) 4 Wall. 2, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 281; Devlin's Claim, (1867) 12 Op. Atty-Gen. 128; Milligan v. Hovey, (1871) 3 Biss. (U. S.) 13.

The President has no authority to suspend the writ of habeas corpus unless authorized to do so by Act of Congress; the power of Congress to suspend the writ extends to enabling them to pass laws protecting officers against actions for arrests previously made. McCall v. McDowell, (1867) 1 Abb. (U. S.) 212.

When a person was arrested and held by sentence of a military commission in St. Louis, he must be discharged if the grand jury, organized next after a list of prisoners so held is furnished to the judges, do not present him to the court for trial, as the courts of the United States were open, and perfectly competent to the trial of any offenses within their jurisdiction. In re Murphy, (1867) Woolw. (U. S.) 141.

In a time of civil war, the President, as commander-in-chief, even in a locality where martial law is not in force, may arrest citizens, not in the military or naval forces, for mischievous acts of disloyalty which impede or endanger the military department as the representative of the President. Such arrests are justifiable on the ground of military necessity, and the existence of that necessity the courts have no authority by writs of habeas corpus to inquire into. Ex p. Valandigham, (1863) 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,316. And in the same case in 1 Wall. (U. S.) 243, 17 U. S. (L. ed.) 589, the Supreme Court says that it has no power to review by certiorari the proceedings of a military commission ordered by a general officer of the United States army.

Persons charged with the assassination of the President in the city of Washington may be lawfully tried before a military tribunal, though the civil courts were open and held regular sessions, because at the time war was flagrant, the city of Washington was defended by military operations, and martial law had been declared in the District of Columbia. (1865) 11 Op. Atty-Gen. 297.

The suspension of the writ of habeas corpus by the President, acting under authority of an Act of Congress, has the effect of stopping any proceedings under a writ issued before the proclamation. In re Fagan, (1863) 2 Sprague (U. S.) 91.

Review of courts-martial by civil courts.—There can be no review by a civil court of a trial by court-martial. When the record of a court-martial comes into a civil court in a collateral way the only questions that can be considered are: (1) was the court-martial legally constituted? (2) did it have jurisdiction of the case? (3) was the sentence duly approved and authorized by law? Swain v. U. S., (1893) 28 Ct. Cl. 173, affirmed in (1897) 165 U. S. 553, 17 S. Ct. 448, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 823; U. S. v. Fletcher, (1893) 148 U. S. 84, 18 S. Ct. 552, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 378; Keyes v. U. S., (1883) 109 U. S. 336, 3 S. Ct. 202, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 954; Carter v. McClaughry, (1900) 105 Fed. 614; In re Zimmerman, (1887) 30 Fed. 176.

Courts-martial are lawful tribunals, and their proceedings are not open to review by the civil tribunals, except for the purpose of ascertaining whether the military court had jurisdiction of the person and subject matter, and whether, though having such jurisdiction, it had exceeded its powers in the sentence pronounced. Carter v. Roberts, (1900) 177 U. S. 496, 20 S. Ct. 713, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 861; In re Davison, (1884) 21 Fed. 618; In re Esmond, (1886) 5 Mackey (D. C.) 64; Ex p. Mason, (1881) 105 U. S. 696, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1213; Biddle's Petition, (1855) 2 Hayw. & H. (D. C.) 198; In re White, (1883) 17 Fed. 723. And the judgments of courts-martial are as final and conclusive as those of civil tribunals. In re McVey, (1885) 23 Fed. 878.

Where a court-martial has jurisdiction of the person accused and of the offense charged; and acts within the scope of its lawful powers, its decision and sentence cannot be reviewed or set aside by the civil courts, by writ of habeas corpus or otherwise. U. S. v. Praeger, (1907) 149 Fed. 474.

If a court-martial undertakes to try and punish a person not within its jurisdiction, or to punish a person within its jurisdiction for an offense not within its jurisdiction, its judgment is void, and may be so declared by any court having jurisdiction of the proper parties and of the subject matter, Barrett v. Hopkins, (1881) 7 Fed. 312; and so where it inflicts a punishment forbidden by law, Dynes v. Hoover, (1857) 20 How. 65, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 838; and a writ of habeas corpus may issue, except in cases where the privilege of the writ is suspended, and on refusal to discharge a writ of error will lie, Ex p. Milligan, (1866) 4 Wall. 2, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 281.

Where a military officer made a return to a writ of habeas corpus that he declined to obey it at that time under orders from his superior, the court could take no further action in the matter and would deny a motion to execute the writ. Ex p. McQuillon, (1861) 16 Fed. Cas. No. 8,924; Ex p. Merryman, (1861) Taney (U. S.) 246.

If a Circuit Court has the right, even in an application in a proper case, to issue a writ of prohibition to a court-martial, it could only issue where the court-martial had no jurisdiction; matters of pleading or to the merits cannot be inquired into.

U. S. v. Maney, (1894) 61 Fed. 140; State v. Wakely, (1820) 2 Nott & M. (S. C.) 410.

In the case of Smith v. Whitney, (1886) 116 U. S. 167, the court says that a writ of prohibition will not issue from a civil court to a court-martial unless it clearly appears that the court is about to exceed its jurisdiction.

A person illegally conscripted into the army may be discharged on habeas corpus. (This case is nowhere reported.) Stingle's Case, (1863) 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,458.

Jurisdiction over civilian.—A court-martial has no final jurisdiction over a civilian before it as a witness and is without power to punish him for contempt for refusing to testify, its authority over him in that regard being limited to a certification of the facts to the United States district attorney. U. S. v. Praeger, (1907) 149 Fed. 474.

The civil courts may, by appropriate proceedings, prohibit a court-martial from trying a civilian. Ex p. Henderson, (1878) 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,349.

ARTICLE 1. [Officers shall subscribe these articles.] Every officer now in the Army of the United States shall within six months from the passing of this act, and every officer hereafter appointed shall, before he enters upon the duties of his office, subscribe these rules and articles. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 1.

ART. 2. [Articles to be read to recruits.] These rules and articles shall be read to every enlisted man at the time of, or within six days after, his enlistment, and he shall thereupon take an oath or affirmation, in the following form: "I, A. B., do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America; that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all their enemies whomsoever; and that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States, and the orders of the officers appointed over me, according to the rules and articles of war." This oath may be taken before any commissioned officer of the Army. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 10; Act of Jan. 29, 1813; Act of Aug. 3, 1861.

The oath is the final act of enlistment. — Reading the articles of war is not a prerequisite. Having taken the oath of enlistment, a soldier cannot avoid a charge of desertion by showing that at the time he enlisted he was over the age limit. In re Grimley, (1890) 137 U. S. 147, 11 S. Ct. 54, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 636.

ART. 3. [Officers making unlawful enlistments.] Every officer who knowingly enlists or musters into the military service any minor over the age of sixteen years without the written consent of his parents or guardians, or any minor under the age of sixteen years, or any insane or intoxicated persons, or any deserter from the military or naval service of the United States, or any person who has been convicted of any infamous criminal offense, shall, upon conviction, be dismissed from the service, or suffer such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Act of March 5, 1833; Act of March 3, 1863; Act of July 4, 1864; Act of March 3, 1865; Act of May 15, 1872, 17 Stat. L. 117.

This section was partly superseded by a provision of section 4 of an Act of March 2, 1889, ch. 352, entitled "An Act for increasing the efficiency of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes" (30 Stat. L. 978), which required that the limits of age for enlistment in the army should be eighteen and thirty-five years.

As to fraudulent enlistment and receipt of pay, see notes to article 62, infra, p. 461.

Acts of Congress prohibiting enlistment of minors apply to the volunteer army. In re Burns, (1898) 87 Fed. 796.

As to desertion by minors, see art. 47.

ART. 4. [Discharges.] No enlisted man, duly sworn, shall be discharged from the service without a discharge in writing, signed by a field-officer of the regiment to which he belongs, or by the commanding officer, when no field-officer is present; and no discharge shall be given to any enlisted man before his term of service has expired, except by order of the President, the Secretary of War, the commanding officer of a department, or by sentence of a general court-martial. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 11.

A volunteer soldier, notwithstanding his muster out, is not to be regarded as discharged until he is released from military control and from subjection to the orders of his superior officers; that is, at the time his discharge certificate is delivered to him. (1870) 13 Op. Atty-Gen. 278.

Authority of President.—The contract of a soldier of the United States, made by his enlistment and oath to serve for a definite term, "unless sooner discharged by proper authority," is one terminable by the government at will, acting through an officer having proper authority; and this article, which provides that "no discharge shall be given to any enlisted man before his term of service has expired, except by order of the President, the Secretary of War, the commanding officer of a department, or by sentence of a general court-martial," confers such authority upon, or recognizes it as existing in, the President of the United States. Reid v. U. S., (1908) 161 Fed. 469.

The power to discharge a soldier is a discretion vested in the President, exercised by him through the Secretary of War; and when granted upon the petition of the soldier, conditions may be prescribed. Grimley v. U. S., (1897) 32 Ct. Cl. 285.

Terms of discharge.—The terms of a discharge given to a soldier by order of the President, not being prescribed by any statute, are discretionary with the President, and such discretion, exercised by directing a discharge "without honor," cannot be reviewed by the courts. Reid v. U. S., (1908) 161 Fed. 469.

ART. 5. [Mustering persons not soldiers.] Any officer who knowingly musters as a soldier a person who is not a soldier shall be deemed guilty of knowingly making a false muster, and punished accordingly. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 17.

ART. 6. [Taking money on mustering.] Any officer who takes money, or other thing, by way of gratification, on mustering any regiment, troop, battery, or company, or on signing muster-rolls, shall be dismissed from the service, and shall thereby be disabled to hold any office or employment in the service of the United States. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 16.

ART. 7. [Returns of regiments, &c.] Every officer commanding a regiment, an independent troop, battery, or company, or a garrison, shall, in the beginning of every month, transmit through the proper channels, to the Department of War, an exact return of the same, specifying the names of the officers then absent from their posts, with the reasons for and the time of their absence. And any officer who, through neglect or design, omits to send such returns, shall, on conviction thereof, be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 19.

ART. 8. [False returns.] Every officer who knowingly makes a false return to the Department of War, or to any of his superior officers, authorized to call for such returns, of the state of the regiment, troop or company, or garrison under his command; or of the arms, ammunition, clothing or other stores thereunto belonging, shall, on conviction thereof before a court-martial, be cashiered. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 18.

ART. 9. [Captured stores secured for public service.] All public stores taken from the enemy shall be secured for the service of the United States; and for neglect thereof the commanding officer shall be answerable. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 58.

Property is captured on land when seized or taken from hostile possession by military forces under orders from a commanding officer. The captors and agents of the treasury, while acting within the scope of their powers, are protected by the authority of the government. Lamar v. Browne, (1875) 92 U. S. 187, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 650; Holmes v. Sheridan, (1870) 1 Dill. (U. S.) 351.

Vesting of title.—Does a capture by a private person during a war, and turning the property over to his government, vest a title in the government? Worthy v. Kinamon, (1871) 44 Ga. 299.

The capture of a steamer in time of war vested perfect and complete title in the United States. No legal condemnation was necessary or proper. White v. Red Chief, (1870) 1 Woods (U. S.) 40. But the Supreme Court, in U. S. v. Klein, (1871) 13 Wall. 128, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 519, said that the title to the proceeds of captured property was in no case divested out of the original owner; it was for the government to determine whether the proceeds should be restored to the owner or not.

ART. 10. [Accountability for arms, &c.] Every officer commanding a troop, battery, or company, is charged with the arms, accouterments, ammunition, clothing, or other military stores belonging to his command, and is accountable to his colonel in case of their being lost, spoiled, or damaged otherwise than by unavoidable accident, or on actual service. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 40.

ART. 11. [Furloughs.] Every officer commanding a regiment or an independent troop, battery, or company, not in the field, may, when actually quartered with such command, grant furloughs to the enlisted men, in such numbers and for such time as he shall deem consistent with the good of the service. Every officer commanding a regiment, or an independent troop, battery, or company, in the field, may grant furloughs not exceeding thirty days at one time, to five per centum of the enlisted men, for good conduct in the line of duty, but subject to the approval of the commander of the forces of which said enlisted men form a part. Every company officer of a regiment, commanding any troop, battery, or company not in the field, or commanding in any garrison, fort, post, or barrack, may, in the absence of his field-officer, grant furloughs to the enlisted men, for a time not exceeding twenty days in six months, and not to more than two persons to be absent at the same time. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 12; Act of March 3, 1863, ch. 75, 12 Stat. L. 736.

ART. 12. [Musters.] At every muster of a regiment, troop, battery, or company, the commanding officer thereof shall give to the mustering officer certificates, signed by himself, stating how long absent officers have been absent and the reasons of their absence. And the commanding officer of every troop, battery, or company shall give like certificates, stating how long absent non-commissioned officers and private soldiers have been absent and the reasons of their absence. Such reasons and time of absence shall be inserted in the muster-rolls opposite the names of the respective absent officers and soldiers, and the certificates, together with the muster-rolls, shall be transmitted by the mustering officer to the Department of War, as speedily as the distance of the place and muster will admit. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 13.

ART. 13. [False certificates.] Every officer who signs a false certificate, relating to the absence or pay of an officer or soldier, shall be dismissed from the service. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 14.

ART. 14. [False muster.] Any officer who knowingly makes a false muster of man or horse, or who signs, or directs, or allows the signing of any muster-roll, knowing the same to contain a false muster, shall, upon proof thereof by two witnesses, before a court-martial, be dismissed from the service, and shall thereby be disabled to hold any office or employment in the service of the United States. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 15.

ART. 15. [Allowing military stores to be damaged.] Any officer who, willfully or through neglect, suffers to be lost, spoiled, or damaged, any military stores belonging to the United States, shall make good the loss or damage, and be dismissed from the service. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 36; Act of March 2, 1863, ch. 67, 12 Stat. L. 696.

ART. 16. [Wasting ammunition.] Any enlisted man who sells, or willfully or through neglect wastes the ammunition delivered out to him, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 37.

1 F. S. A.—29

ART. 17. [Losing or spoiling horses, accouterments, &c.] Any soldier who sells or through neglect losses [loses?] or spoils his horse, arms, clothing, or accoutrements shall be punished as a court-martial may adjudge, subject to such limitation as may be prescribed by the President by virtue of the power vested in him.

This article was amended to read as above by the Act of July 27, 1892, ch. 272, 27 Stat. L. 277, entitled "An Act to Amend the Articles of War and for other purposes." Prior to such amendment the article was as follows: "ART. 17. Any soldier who sells or, through neglect, loses or spoils his horse, arms, clothing, or accouterments, shall suffer such stoppages, not exceeding one-half of his current pay, as a court-martial may deem sufficient for repairing the loss or damage, and shall be punished by confinement or such other corporal punishment as the court may direct." [R. S. sec. 1342.] Art. of War, 38.

Sale of clothing.—The sale of military clothing issued to a soldier during his term of service constitutes an offense against the military law, for which he may be punished by a court-martial. U. S. v. Michael, (1907) 153 Fed. 609.

ART. 18. [Commanders not to be interested in sale of victuals, &c.] Any officer commanding in any garrison, fort, or barracks of the United States who, for his private advantage, lays any duty or imposition upon, or is interested in, the sale of any victuals, liquors, or other necessities of life, brought into such garrison, fort, or barracks, for the use of the soldiers, shall be dismissed from the service. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 31.

ART. 19. [Disrespectful words against the President, &c.] Any officer who uses contemptuous or disrespectful words against the President, the Vice-President, the Congress of the United States, or the chief magistrate or legislature of any of the United States in which he is quartered, shall be dismissed from the service, or otherwise punished, as a court-martial may direct. Any soldier who so offends shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 5.

ART. 20. [Disrespect toward commanding officer.] Any officer or soldier who behaves himself with disrespect toward his commanding officer shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 6.

ART. 21. [Striking a superior officer.] Any officer or soldier who, on any pretense whatsoever, strikes his superior officer, or draws or lifts up any weapon, or offers any violence against him, being in the execution of his office, or disobeys any lawful command of his superior officer, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 9.

A soldier who has killed his sergeant is triable by the civil courts for murder, as well as by a court-martial for mutinous conduct. (1857) 8 Op. Atty.-Gen. 396.

ART. 22. [Mutiny.] Any officer or soldier who begins, excites, causes, or joins in any mutiny or sedition, in any troop, battery, company, party, post, detachment, or guard, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 7.

In preserving the peace within a fort, an officer is authorized to use all reasonable means, but the means used should be measured by the necessity of the case. The law will not justify the killing of a single unarmed soldier, though drunken, riotous, or even mutinous, when he could be arrested without resort to such extreme means. U. S. v. Carr, (1872) 1 Woods (U. S.) 480.

ART. 23. [Failing to resist mutiny.] Any officer or soldier who, being present at any mutiny or sedition, does not use his utmost endeavor to suppress the same, or having knowledge of any intended mutiny or sedition, does not, without delay, give information thereof to his commanding officer, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 8.

ART. 24. [Quarrels and frays.] All officers, of what condition soever, have power to part and quell all quarrels, frays, and disorders, whether among persons belonging to his own or to another corps, regiment, troop, battery, or company, and to order officers into arrest, and non-commissioned officers and soldiers into confinement, who take part in the same, until their proper superior officer is acquainted therewith. And whosoever, being so ordered, refuses to obey such officer or non-commissioned officer, or draws a weapon upon him, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 27.

ART. 25. [Reproachful or provoking speeches.] No officer or soldier shall use any reproachful or provoking speeches or gestures to another. Any officer who so offends shall be put in arrest. Any soldier who so offends shall be confined, and required to ask pardon of the party offended, in the presence of his commanding officer. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 24.

ART. 26. [Challenges to fight duels.] No officer or soldier shall send a challenge to another officer or soldier to fight a duel, or accept a challenge so sent. Any officer who so offends shall be dismissed from the service. Any soldier who so offends shall suffer such punishment as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 25.

This article was amended to read as above by the Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 244. The amendment consisted of striking out the word "corporal" before the word "punishment."

ART. 27. [Allowing persons to go out and fight; seconds and promoters.] Any officer or non-commissioned officer, commanding a guard, who, knowingly and willingly, suffers any person to go forth to fight a duel, shall be punished as a challenger; and all seconds or promoters of duels, and carriers of challenges to fight duels, shall be deemed principals, and punished accordingly. It shall be the duty of any officer commanding an army, regiment, troop, battery, company, post, or detachment, who knows or has reason to believe that a challenge has been given or accepted by any officer or enlisted man under his command, immediately to arrest the offender and bring him to trial. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 26.

ART. 28. [Upbraiding another for refusing challenge.] Any officer or soldier who upbraids another officer or soldier for refusing a challenge shall himself be punished as a challenger; and all officers and soldiers are hereby discharged from any disgrace or opinion of disadvantage which might arise from their having refused to accept challenges, as they will only have acted in obedience to the law, and have done their duty as good soldiers, who subject themselves to discipline. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 28.

ART. 29. [Wrongs to officers, redress of.] Any officer who thinks himself wronged by the commanding officer of his regiment, and, upon due application to such commander, is refused redress, may complain to the general commanding in the State or Territory where such regiment is stationed. The general shall examine into said complaint and take proper measures for redressing the wrong complained of; and he shall, as soon as possible, transmit to the Department of War a true statement of such complaint, with the proceedings had thereon. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 34.

ART. 30. [Wrongs to soldiers, redress of.] Any soldier who thinks himself wronged by any officer may complain to the commanding officer of his regiment, who shall summon a regimental court-martial for the doing of justice to the complainant. Either party may appeal from such regimental court-martial to a general court-martial; but if, upon such second hearing, the appeal appears to be groundless and vexatious, the party appealing shall be punished at the discretion of said general court-martial. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 35.

ART. 31. [Lying out of quarters.] Any officer or soldier who lies out of his quarters, garrison, or camp, without leave from his superior officer, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 42.

ART. 32. [Soldiers absent without leave.] Any soldier who absents himself from his troop, battery, company, or detachment, without leave from his commanding officer, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 21.

The pay of a soldier cannot be stopped where he was convicted of absence without leave, when the sentence of the court does not impose such stoppage, unless a statute or an army regulation so provides. (1880) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 474.

ART. 33. [Absence from parade without leave.] Any officer or soldier who fails, except when prevented by sickness or other necessity, to repair, at the fixed time, to the place of parade, exercise, or other rendezvous appointed by his commanding officer, or goes from the same, without leave from his commanding officer, before he is dismissed or relieved, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 44.

ART. 34. [One mile from camp without leave.] Any soldier who is found one mile from camp, without leave in writing from his commanding officer, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 41.

ART. 35. [Failing to retire at retreat.] Any soldier who fails to retire to his quarters or tent at the beating of retreat, shall be punished according to the nature of his offense. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 43.

ART. 36. [Hiring duty.] No soldier belonging to any regiment, troop, battery, or company shall hire another to do his duty for him, or be excused from duty, except in cases of sickness, disability, or leave of absence. Every such soldier found guilty of hiring his duty, and the person so hired to do another's duty, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 47.

ART. 37. [Conniving at hiring duty.] Every non-commissioned officer who connives at such hiring of duty shall be reduced. Every officer who knows and allows such practices shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 48.

ART. 38. [Drunk on duty.] Any officer who is found drunk on his guard, party, or other duty, shall be dismissed from the service. Any soldier who so offends shall suffer such punishment as a court-martial may direct. No court-martial shall sentence any soldier to be branded, marked, or tattooed. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 45.

This article was amended to read as above by the Act of Feb. 18, 1875, ch. 80, 18 Stat. L. 318. The amendment consisted in striking out the word "corporal" before the word "punishment," and in the addition of the last sentence. The word "corporal" was also stricken out by the Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 244.

When the word used in the charge is "inebriation," and not the word "drunkenness," it is not a strictly formal following of the term used in the article, but is sufficient to inform the accused of the military offense for which he is to be tried: (1819) 1 Op. Atty-Gen. 294.

ART. 39. [Sentinel sleeping on post.] Any sentinel who is found sleeping upon his post, or who leaves it before he is regularly relieved, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 46.

ART. 40. [Quitting guard, &c., without leave.] Any officer or soldier who quits his guard, platoon, or division, without leave from his superior officer, except in a case of urgent necessity, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 50.

ART. 41. [False alarms.] Any officer who, by any means whatsoever, occasions false alarms in camp, garrison, or quarters, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 49.

ART. 42. [Misbehavior before the enemy, cowardice, &c.] Any officer or soldier who misbehaves himself before the enemy, runs away, or shamefully abandons any fort, post, or guard, which he is commanded to defend, or speaks words inducing others to do the like, or casts away his arms or ammunition, or quits his post or colors to plunder or pillage, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 52.

ART. 43. [Compelling a surrender.] If any commander of any garrison, fortress, or post is compelled, by the officers and soldiers under his command, to give up to the enemy or to abandon it, the officers or soldiers so offending shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 59.

ART. 44. [Disclosing watchword.] Any person belonging to the armies of the United States who makes known the watchword to any person not entitled to receive it, according to the rules and discipline of war, or presumes to give a parole or watchword different from that which he received, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 53.

ART. 45. [Relieving the enemy.] Whosoever relieves the enemy with money, victuals, or ammunition, or knowingly harbors or protects an enemy, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 56.

ART. 46. [Corresponding with the enemy.] Whosoever holds correspondence with, or gives intelligence to, the enemy, either directly or indirectly, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 57.

An acquittal by a court-martial is no bar to a prosecution for treason in a civil court under the Act of July 17, 1862, § 2. U. S. v. Cashiel, (1863) 1 Hughes (U.S.) 552.

ART. 47. [Desertion.] Any officer or soldier who, having received pay, or having been duly enlisted in the service of the United States, deserts the same, shall, in time of war, suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct; and in time of peace, any punishment, excepting death, which a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 20; Act of May 29, 1830, ch. 183, 4 Stat. L. 418.

Deserters—apprehension of deserters, etc.—See R. S. secs. 1996, 1997, 1998, and subsequent acts, under title WAR DEPARTMENT AND MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

The penalties imposed under sections 1996 and 1998, R. S., can take effect only upon conviction by court-martial. Kurtz v. Moffitt, (1885) 115 U. S. 487, 6 S. Ct. 148, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 458.

Defense of over age at time of enlistment.—Having taken the oath of enlistment, a soldier cannot avoid a charge of desertion by showing that at the time he enlisted he was over the age limit. In re Grimley, (1890) 137 U. S. 147, 11 S. Ct. 54, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 636.

Forfeiture of rights of citizenship.—Congress cannot prescribe the qualifications of electors within the several states; the state alone has the power to regulate suffrage and to determine who shall or who shall not be a voter. The Act of March 3, 1865 (R. S. 1996), in imposing forfeiture of the rights of citizenship as a punishment for desertion, is within the powers of Congress, and the Act is not an ex post facto law in so punishing previous desertion, as failing to return to the service makes the desertion a continuing offense. Huber v. Reilly, (1866) 53 Pa. St. 112.

Desertion is an exclusively military crime not triable by the civil tribunals. Kurtz v. Moffitt, (1885) 115 U. S. 487, 6 S. Ct. 148, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 458; In re White, (1883) 17 Fed. 723.

Desertion by minors.—If the enlistment of a minor be void by reason of the absence of consent of parents, yet if he remains in the service for more than two years after coming of age and receives pay, he comes within the letter of the article, and a judgment by court-martial for desertion cannot be collaterally questioned on habeas corpus. In re Dohrendorf, (1889) 40 Fed. 148; In re Spencer, (1889) 40 Fed. 149.

A minor, enlisted without the consent of his parents or guardians, though improperly enlisted, cannot, after receiving pay and clothing, himself determine the legality or illegality of his service by deserting it, and if he desert, he is liable to be tried and punished by court-martial.

In re Kaufman, (1890) 41 Fed. 876; In re Zimmerman, (1887) 30 Fed. 176.

The enlistment of a minor is voidable only; and, although under age, he becomes by such enlistment engaged in the service of the United States, and subject to the power and jurisdiction of the military authorities. In re Spencer, (1889) 40 Fed. 149; In re Cosenow, (1889) 37 Fed. 670; In re Hearn, (1887) 32 Fed. 141; In re Davison, (1884) 21 Fed. 618.

When a minor, within three days after enlistment, leaves the recruiting station before being assigned to duty and does not return it cannot be considered as a criminal desertion and he may be discharged on habeas corpus from military custody. U. S. v. Hanchett, (1883) 18 Fed. 26.

In the case of In re Baker, (1885) 23 Fed. 30, the court says that the enlistment, being contrary to R. S. sec. 1117, was absolutely void, and must be so held on petition of the father. Not being duly enlisted, the minor could not commit the crime of desertion, and the court-martial could not retain jurisdiction. See also U. S. v. Wright, (1863) 5 Phila. (Pa.) 296, 20 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 21.

The enlistment of one under sixteen years of age was void whether the father consented in writing or not. The evidence of relatives, no one of whom testifies with certainty, supported by mutilated records of the ages of the children in what purports to be the family Bible, is not sufficient to establish the fact that one was under sixteen years against the sworn statement of the father at the time of enlistment that he was twenty years and six months. In re Lawler, (1889) 40 Fed. 233.

When a bounty is offered to volunteers accepted and mustered into the service, the instalments of bounty due and payable at the time of desertion are forfeited thereby, and the instalments not already due never become due in case the deserter does not return. In case he returns, or is apprehended and put back into service, on serving out his term he is entitled to receive them. (1870) 13 Op. Atty-Gen. 188.

ART. 48. [Deserter shall serve full term.] Every soldier who deserts the service of the United States shall be liable to serve for such period as shall, with the time he may have served previous to his desertion, amount to the full term of his enlistment; and such soldier shall be tried by a court-martial and punished, although the term of his enlistment may have elapsed previous to his being apprehended and tried. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Act of Jan. 11, 1812, ch. 14, 2 Stat. L. 673; Act of Jan. 29, 1813, ch. 16, 2 Stat. L. 796.

The penalties imposed under sections 1996 and 1998, R. S., can take effect only upon conviction by court-martial. Kurtz v. Moffitt, (1885) 115 U. S. 487, 6 S. Ct. 148, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 458.

When a conviction for desertion has been disapproved by the reviewing officer, and the prisoner released and restored to duty, it is in effect an acquittal, and pay cannot be withheld. (1871) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 459.

Enlistment of deserter.—While section 1118, R. S., prohibits the enlistment of a deserter, a deserter who enlists, and afterwards again deserts, on being brought to trial for the second offense, cannot defend on the ground that his enlistment was void. In re McVey, (1885) 11 Sawy. (U. S.) 25.

The forfeiture of pay and bounty due and payable at the time of desertion, under No. 1358 of the Army Regulations, is not a fine or penalty, but relates solely to the soldier's rights under his contract of enlistment, and the fact of desertion need not be established by the record of court-martial. (1870) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 188.

Recovery by deserter for horse captured.—All statutes for the benefit of soldiers are based on the supposition of faithful service, and a deserter cannot recover for his horse captured by the enemy. Tapia's Case, (1880) 16 Ct. Cl. 561.

Pay and bounty of deserter honorably discharged.—A soldier found guilty of desertion, though restored to duty and subsequently honorably discharged, is not entitled to pay and bounty forfeited by such desertion. U. S. v. Landers, (1875) 92 U. S. 77, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 603. But where a deserter was restored to duty, without trial, on condition that he make good the time lost, and complied with the condition, an honorable discharge at the expiration of his term of service was a final judgment on his entire military record, and he was entitled to bounty money. U. S. v. Kelly, (1872) 15 Wall. 34, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 106; Cole v. U. S., (1899) 34 Ct. Cl. 446.

ART. 49. [Desertion by resignation.] Any officer who, having tendered his resignation, quits his post or proper duties, without leave, and with intent to remain permanently absent therefrom, prior to due notice of the acceptance of the same, shall be deemed and punished as a deserter. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Act of Aug. 5, 1861, ch. 54, 12 Stat. L. 316.

Upon receipt of notice of acceptance of resignation the office becomes vacant, and a revocation by the President does not restore the officer. Nothing could reinstate him but a new nomination and confirmation by the Senate. Mimmack v.

ART. 50. [Enlisting in other regiment without discharge.] No non-commissioned officer or soldier shall enlist himself in any other regiment, troop, or company, without a regular discharge from the regiment, troop, or company in which he last served, on a penalty of being reputed a deserter, and suffering accordingly. And in case any officer shall knowingly receive and entertain such non-commissioned officer or soldier, or shall not, after his being discovered to be a deserter, immediately confine him and give notice thereof to the corps in which he last served, the said officer shall, by a court-martial, be cashiered. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 22.

ART. 51. [Advising to desert.] Any officer or soldier who advises or persuades any other officer or soldier to desert the service of the United States, shall, in time of war, suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct; and in time of peace, any punishment, excepting death, which a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 23; Act of May 29, 1830, ch. 183, 4 Stat. L. 418.

This is an exclusively military offense v. Moffitt, (1885) 115 U. S. 487, 6 S. Ct. not triable by the civil tribunals. Kurtz 148, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 458.

ART. 52. [Misconduct at divine service.] It is earnestly recommended to all officers and soldiers diligently to attend divine service. Any officer who behaves indecently or irreverently at any place of divine worship shall be brought before a general court-martial, there to be publicly and severely reprimanded by the president thereof. Any soldier who so offends shall, for his first offense, forfeit one-sixth of a dollar; for each further offense he shall forfeit a like sum, and shall be confined twenty-four hours. The money so forfeited shall be deducted from his next pay, and shall be applied, by the captain or senior officer of his troop, battery, or company, to the use of the sick soldiers of the same. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 2.

ART. 53. [Profane oaths.] Any officer who uses any profane oath or execration shall, for each offense, forfeit and pay one dollar. Any soldier who so offends shall incur the penalties provided in the preceding article; and all moneys forfeited for such offenses shall be applied as therein provided. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 3.

ART. 54. [Officers to keep good order in their commands.] Every officer commanding in quarters, garrison, or on the march, shall keep good order, and, to the utmost of his power, redress all abuses or disorders which may be committed by any officer or soldier under his command; and if, upon complaint made to him of officers or soldiers beating or otherwise ill-treating any person, disturbing fairs or markets, or committing any kind of riot, to the disquieting of the citizens of the United States, he refuses or omits to see justice done to the offender, and reparation made to the party injured, so far as part of the offender's pay shall go toward such reparation, he shall be dismissed from the service, or otherwise punished, as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 32.

ART. 55. [Waste or spoil and destruction of property without orders.] All officers and soldiers are to behave themselves orderly in quarters and on the march; and whoever commits any waste or spoil, either in walks or trees, parks, warrens, fish-ponds, houses, gardens, grain-fields, inclosures, or meadows, or maliciously destroys any property whatsoever belonging to inhabitants of the United States, (unless by order of a general officer commanding a separate army in the field,) shall, besides such penalties as he may be liable to by law, be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 54.

ART. 56. [Violence to persons bringing provisions.] Any officer or soldier who does violence to any person bringing provisions or other necessities to the camp, garrison, or quarters of the forces of the United States in foreign parts, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 51.

ART. 57. [Forcing a safeguard.] Whosoever, belonging to the armies of the United States in foreign parts, or at any place within the United States or their Territories during rebellion against the supreme authority of the United States, forces a safe-guard, shall suffer death. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 55; Act of July 13, 1861; Act of July 31, 1861; Act of Feb. 13, 1862, ch. 25, 12 Stat. L. 340.

ART. 58. [Certain crimes during rebellion.] In time of war, insurrection, or rebellion, larceny, robbery, burglary, arson, mayhem, manslaughter, murder, assault and battery with an intent to kill, wounding, by shooting or stabbing, with an intent to commit murder, rape, or assault and battery with an intent to commit rape, shall be punishable by the sentence of a general court-martial, when committed by persons in the military service of the United States, and the punishment in any such case shall not be less than the punishment provided, for the like offense, by the laws of the State, Territory, or district in which such offense may have been committed. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Act of July 13, 1861; Act of July 31, 1861; Act of March 3, 1863; Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 144, 18 Stat. L. 479.

Larceny of a horse in time of war by one from his fellow soldiers is a crime under this article. Irby v. U. S., (1883) 18 Ct. Cl. 259.

This article does not confer exclusive jurisdiction on the military tribunals as against the courts of loyal states; but one in the military service of the United States is not amenable to the laws of a state in which a crime committed by him is perpetrated, when such state was at the time in a state of hostility to the national government. Coleman v. Tennessee, (1878) 97 U. S. 509, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 1118; Tennessee v. Hibdon, (1885) 23 Fed. 795.

"Condition of hostility."—If a territory be declared to be in a state of insurrection by the President's proclamation, and part of such territory should come within the national lines, the "condition of hostility" remained impressed upon it until it was removed by proclamation of the President. McClelland's Case, 10 Ct. Cl. 68; Philips v. Hatch, (1871) 1 Dill. (U. S.) 571.

Army contractors are subject to military rules and articles of war, and a commander may issue an order to arrest one who has induced friendly Indians to steal cattle for him with a view to turn the cattle over to the government under contracts to supply beef to the army. Holmes v. Sheridan, (1870) 1 Dill. (U. S.) 351.

This article is limited in its operation to a state of "war, insurrection, or rebellion," within the United States, and therefore has no application in Cuba during military occupation. (1900) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 120.

ART. 59. [Offenders to be delivered up to civil magistrates.] When any officer or soldier is accused of a capital crime, or of any offense against the person or property of any citizen of any of the United States, which is punishable by the laws of the land, the commanding officer, and the officers of the regiment, troop, battery, company, or detachment, to which the person so accused belongs, are required, except in time of war, upon application duly made by or in behalf of the party injured, to use their utmost endeavors to deliver him over to the civil magistrate, and to aid the officers of justice in apprehending and securing him, in order to bring him to trial. If, upon such application, any officer refuses or willfully neglects, except in time of war, to deliver over such accused person to the civil magistrates, or to aid the officers of justice in apprehending him, he shall be dismissed from the service. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 33; Act of March 3, 1863, ch. 75, 12 Stat. L. 736.

Surrender of accused.—An application to the commanding officer must show that the offense charged is "punishable by the known laws of the land," and he must be so satisfied before surrendering the accused to the civil authorities. (1825) 2 Op. Atty.-Gen. 10.

Jurisdiction of civil courts.—In U. S. v. Lewis, (1904) 129 Fed. 823, affirmed (1906) 200 U. S. 1, 26 S. Ct. 229, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 343, it was held that the enactment of this article was a distinct recognition by Congress of the general jurisdiction in time of peace of the civil courts of the state over persons in the United States military service accused of offenses against citizens of the state.

A District Court has jurisdiction to indict and try a person charged with having forged an obligation of the United States with intent to defraud, which is made an offense against the United States by R. S. sec. 5414, 2 Fed. Stat. Annot. 298, although he was at the time an officer of the army, and the alleged offense was committed at a military post, and with intent to defraud an enlisted soldier, where the accused has since been discharged from the army without any action against him having been taken by the military authorities; there being no provision, either constitutional or statutory, conferring exclusive jurisdiction on courts-martial to punish such offense. Neall v. U. S., (1902) 118 Fed. 699.

In U. S. v. Clark, (1887) 31 Fed. 710, it was held that a Circuit Court has jurisdiction of a homicide committed by one soldier upon another in a military reservation.

Homicide by military guard.—Where, on a writ of habeas corpus to obtain the discharge of two members of the United States army from an indictment for murder, found by the courts of the state where the offense was committed, it appeared that the shooting of the deceased occurred in the streets of a city, outside the military reservation, while the petitioners were endeavoring to arrest deceased for depredations committed on such reservation, but the evidence was conflicting as to whether the shooting was done while deceased was endeavoring to escape or after he had stopped, thrown up his hands, and offered to surrender, the determination of whether the shooting was justifiable was within the exclusive jurisdiction of the state courts. U. S. v. Lewis, (1904) 129 Fed. 823, affirmed (1906) 200 U. S. 1, 26 S. Ct. 229, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 343.

Homicide in Cuba.—This article does not require that a soldier who committed homicide in Cuba be delivered to the Cuban courts, but it is, nevertheless, proper to permit such courts to try him. (1900) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 120.

Effect of civil judgment.—The conviction or acquittal by the civil authorities of an offense against the general law does not discharge an officer or soldier from responsibility for the military offense on the same facts; though under some circumstances the civil authority will have the preference until its jurisdiction be exhausted. Steiner's Case, (1854) 6 Op. Atty.-Gen. 413; Howe's Case. (1854) 6 Op. Atty.-Gen. 506.

ART. 60. [Certain crimes of fraud against the United States.] Any person in the military service of the United States who makes or causes to be made any claim against the United States, or any officer thereof, knowing such claim to be false or fraudulent; or [Making false claim. Presenting false claim.] Who presents or causes to be presented to any person in the civil or military service thereof, for approval or payment, any claim against the United States or any officer thereof, knowing such claim to be false or fraudulent; or

[Agreement to obtain payment of false claim.] Who enters into any agreement or conspiracy to defraud the United States by obtaining, or aiding others to obtain, the allowance or payment of any false or fraudulent claim; or

[False paper.] Who, for the purpose of obtaining, or aiding others to obtain, the approval, allowance, or payment of any claim against the United States or against any officer thereof, makes or uses, or procures or advises the making or use of, any writing, or other paper, knowing the same to contain any false or fraudulent statement; or

[Perjury.] Who, for the purpose of obtaining, or aiding others to obtain, the approval, allowance, or payment of any claim against the United States or any officer thereof, makes, or procures or advises the making of, any oath to any fact or to any writing or other paper, knowing such oath to be false; or

[Forgery.] Who, for the purpose of obtaining, or aiding others to obtain, the approval, allowance, or payment of any claim against the United States or any officer thereof, forges or counterfeits, or procures or advises the forging or counterfeiting of, any signature upon any writing or other paper, or uses, or procures or advises the use of, any such signature, knowing the same to be forged or counterfeited; or

[Delivering less property than receipt calls for.] Who, having charge, possession, custody or control of any money or other property of the United States, furnished or intended for the military service thereof, knowingly delivers, or causes to be delivered, to any persons having authority to receive the same, any amount thereof less than that for which he receives a certificate or receipt; or

[Giving receipts without knowing truth of.] Who, being authorized to make or deliver any paper certifying the receipt of any property of the United States, furnished or intended for the military service thereof, makes, or delivers to any person, such writing, without having full knowledge of the truth of the statements therein contained, and with intent to defraud the United States; or

[Stealing, wrongfully selling, &c.] Who steals, embezzles, knowingly and willfully misappropriates, applies to his own use or benefit, or wrongfully or knowingly sells or disposes of any ordnance, arms, equipments, ammunition, clothing, subsistence stores, money, or other property of the United States, furnished or intended for the military service thereof; or

[Buying public military property.] Who knowingly purchases, or receives in pledge for any obligation or indebtedness, from any soldier, officer, or other person who is a part of or employed in said forces or service, any ordnance, arms, equipments, ammunition, clothing, subsistence stores, or other property of the United States, such soldier, officer, or other person not having lawful right to sell or pledge the same,

Shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by fine or imprisonment, or by such other punishment as a court-martial may adjudge or by any or all of said penalties. And if any person, being guilty of any of the offenses aforesaid, while in the military service of the United States, receives his discharge, or is dismissed from the service, he shall continue to be liable to be arrested and held for trial and sentence by a court-martial, in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had not received such discharge nor been dismissed. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Act of March 2, 1863, ch. 67, 12 Stat. L. 696.

This article was amended by the Act of March 2, 1901, ch. 809, 31 Stat. L. 951, by inserting in the first sentence of the last paragraph the words "or by any or all of said penalties."

An army contractor, under the Act of July 17, 1862 (12 Stat. L. 596, § 16), is subject to the rules and regulations of the army, and liable to be tried by court-martial for fraud upon the government. U. S. v. Adams, (1868) 7 Wall. 463, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 249, (1866) 2 Ct. Cl. 70; Hill's Case, (1873) 9 Ct. Cl. 178. See Holmes v. Sheridan, (1870) 1 Dill. (U. S.) 351; though in Ex p. Henderson, (1878) 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,349, it is said that an Act of Congress attempting to make a contractor of supplies to the army a part of the land forces, and providing that fraud will render him amenable to court-martial, is unconstitutional.

A clerk in the employ of a paymaster of the United States army is a person engaged in the military service and is subject to trial before a military tribunal for forging army vouchers. In re Thomas, (1869) 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,888.

The penalty imposed by this article is in the alternative. But the sentences may be in the aggregate when the relator is found guilty of each of several charges. In re Carter, (1899) 97 Fed. 496; Carter v. McClaughry, (1900) 105 Fed. 614.

ART. 61. [Conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman.] Any officer who is convicted of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman shall be dismissed from the service. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 83.

The same course of conduct may constitute an offense elsewhere provided for, and also may warrant a finding of guilty under this article. In re Carter, (1899) 97 Fed. 496.

ART. 62. [Crimes and disorders to prejudice of military discipline.] All crimes not capital, and all disorders and neglects, which officers and soldiers may be guilty of, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, though not mentioned in the foregoing articles of war, are to be taken cognizance of by a general, or a regimental, garrison, or field-officers' court-marshal [martial], according to the nature and degree of the offense, and punished at the discretion of such court. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 90.

Fraudulent enlistment and receipt of pay is punishable under this article by section 3 of an Act of July 27, 1892, ch. 272, infra, p. 479.

Acts bringing reproach on service.—A court-martial has the right, without a review by the civil courts, to try and punish acts which tend to bring reproach upon the service, whether those acts are done in the performance of military duties, or in a civil position, or in a social relation, or in private business. Swaim v. U. S., (1897) 185 U. S. 553, 17 S. Ct. 448, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 823.

A soldier charged with assault with intent to kill, in the District of Columbia, may be convicted by court-martial under this article; and a sentence of discharge from the service, forfeiture of pay, and imprisonment in the penitentiary for the term of eight years, is authorized by article 97. Ex p. Mason, (1881) 105 U. S. 696, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1213; U. S. v. Maney, (1894) 61 Fed. 140.

Where an officer was charged with habitual drunkenness, but only convicted of conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, it was a lesser offense than that charged, and was authorized by this article. Blankhead v. U. S., (1885) 20 Ct. Cl. 405.

Assault.—A charge of assault with a rifle and the infliction of a mortal wound by accused upon a fellow soldier, with particulars of the time and place clearly stated, sufficiently alleged an offense within this article. In re Stubbs, (1906) 133 Fed. 1012.

Embezzlement.—Under this article a conviction may be had of the offense of embezzlement as defined by section 5488, R. S., and may be punished by both fine and imprisonment. In re Carter, (1899) 97 Fed. 496; Carter v. McClaughry, (1900) 105 Fed. 614.

Enlistment expiring before trial.—If proceedings were instituted against a soldier while he was within the jurisdiction of the military authority, such jurisdiction continued until trial and conviction, notwithstanding his term of enlistment expired before trial. Barrett v. Hopkins, (1881) 7 Fed. 312.

Effect of civil judgment.—Where a United States soldier killed a fellow soldier during a military encampment, and on being surrendered to the civil authorities of the state was prosecuted for murder and acquitted, such acquittal, though a final determination of his innocence of murder and of each lesser offense necessarily included therein, was no bar to his subsequent military arrest and trial by a general court-martial, for conduct "to the prejudice of good order and military discipline," in violation of this article, though based on the same act. In re Stubbs, (1905) 133 Fed. 1012.

So also, it has been held that a trial by a civil court of a charge of larceny is not a bar to a subsequent trial upon the same facts, by court-martial, of a charge of conduct to the prejudice of military discipline. In re Esmond, (1886) 5 Mackey (D. C.) 64.

Effect of discharge of soldier.—Where a soldier, while in fact discharged from the army, but before the expiration of the term of enlistment, committed a homicide, it was held that he was amenable to this article and might be arrested and held for trial by the military authority, the discharge being afterward set aside and he being, at the time of the offense, a soldier de jure. In re Bird, (1871) 2 Sawy. 33, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,428.

ART. 63. [Retainers of camp.] All retainers to the camp, and all persons serving with the armies of the United States in the field, though not enlisted soldiers, are to be subject to orders, according to the rules and discipline of war. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 60.

Civil employees of the War Department, serving with the army in the Indian country, during offensive and defensive operations against the Indians, are amenable to military jurisdiction and trial by court-martial. (1872) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 22.

ART. 64. [All troops subject to articles of war.] The officers and soldiers of any troops, whether militia or others, mustered and in pay of the United States, shall, at all times and in all places, be governed by the articles of war, and shall be subject to be tried by courts-martial. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 97; Act of July 29, 1861; Act of March 2, 1863, ch. 67, 12 Stat. L. 696.

State militia ordered into the service of the United States are subject to the Articles of War. Martin v. Mott, (1827) 12 Wheat. 19, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 537; Luther v. Borden, (1849) 7 How. 1, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 581.

Militiamen are not to be considered as being in the service of the United States until mustered at the place of rendezvous. Houston v. Moore, (1820) 5 Wheat. 1, 5 U. S. (L. ed.) 19.

A state militiaman disobeying an order to attend a rendezvous, duly called under an Act of Congress, is subject to military discipline. McCall's Case, (1863) 5 Phila. (Pa.) 259, 20 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 108. But see Mills v. Martin, (1821) 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 7, and Rathbun v. Martin, (1823) 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 343.

ART. 65. [Arrest of officers accused of crimes.] Officers charged with crime shall be arrested and confined in their barracks, quarters, or tents, and deprived of their swords by the commanding officer. And any officer who leaves his confinement before he is set at liberty by his commanding officer shall be dismissed from the service. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 77.

Retired officer.—The arrest and detention in military barracks of a retired officer upon charges of "conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline," and "conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman," are authorized by this article. Closson v. U. S., (1896) 7 App. Cas. (D. C.) 460.

ART. 66. [Soldiers accused of crimes.] Soldiers charged with crimes shall be confined until tried by court-martial, or released by proper authority. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 78.

No warrant is required for the arrest nor is the manner of confinement specified. Hutchings v. Van Bokkelen, (1852) 34 Me. 126.

ART. 67. [Receiving prisoners.] No provost-marshal, or officer commanding a guard, shall refuse to receive or keep any prisoner committed to his charge by an officer belonging to the forces of the United States; provided the officer committing shall, at the same time, deliver an account in writing, signed by himself, of the crime charged against the prisoner. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 80.

ART. 68. [Report of prisoners.] Every officer to whose charge a prisoner is committed shall, within twenty-four hours after such commitment, or as soon as he is relieved from his guard, report in writing, to the commanding officer, the name of such prisoner, the crime charged against him, and the name of the officer committing him; and if he fails to make such report, he shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 82.

ART. 69. [Releasing prisoner without authority; escapes.] Any officer who presumes, without proper authority, to release any prisoner committed to his charge, or suffers any prisoner so committed to escape, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 81.

If a military guard committed homicide by shooting an escaping military convict, it was excusable when he acted without malice, in good faith, and doing what he conceived to be his duty, unless the act were manifestly beyond the scope of his authority. U. S. v. Clark, (1887) 31 Fed. 710.

ART. 70. [Duration of confinement.] No officer or soldier put in arrest shall be continued in confinement more than eight days, or until such time as a court-martial can be assembled. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 78.

This article applies solely to confinement preliminary to trial, and not to confinement during trial and awaiting judgment. Matter of Corbett, (1877) 9 Ben. (U. S.) 274.

A confinement for ten days, where it does not appear that a court-martial could be assembled within that period, did not exceed the bounds authorized by law. Hutchings v. Van Bokkelen, (1852) 34 Me. 126.

ART. 71. [Copy of charges and time of trial.] When an officer is put in arrest for the purpose of trial, except at remote military posts or stations, the officer by whose order he is arrested shall see that a copy of the charges on which he is to be tried is served upon him within eight days after his arrest, and that he is brought to trial within ten days thereafter, unless the necessities of the service prevent such trial; and then he shall be brought to trial within thirty days after the expiration of said ten days. If a copy of the charges be not served, or the arrested officer be not brought to trial, as herein required, the arrest shall cease. But officers released from arrest, under the provisions of this article, may be tried, whenever the exigencies of the service shall permit, within twelve months after such release from arrest. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

If a copy of the charges be not served upon the accused within the time specified in this article, on account of the delay caused by his evading the jurisdiction of the court-martial by serving out a writ of habeas corpus, he should be returned to the military officers. Closson v. U. S., (1896) 7 App. Cas. (D. C.) 460.

Art. 72. Repealed.—This article was as follows: "ART. 72. Any general officer commanding an army, a Territorial Division or a Department, or colonel commanding a separate Department may appoint general courts martial whenever necessary. But when any such commander is the accuser or prosecutor of any officer under his command the court shall be appointed by the President; and its proceedings and sentence shall be sent directly to the Secretary of War, by whom they shall be laid before the President, for his approval or orders in the case."

Article 72 was amended to read as above by the Act of July 5, 1884, ch. 224, 23 Stat. L. 121. Prior to such amendment the article was as follows: "ART. 72. Any general officer, commanding the Army of the United States, a separate Army, or a separate department, shall be competent to appoint a general court-martial, either in time of peace or in time of war. But when any such commander is the accuser or prosecutor of any officer under his command, the court shall be appointed by the President, and its proceedings and sentence shall be sent directly to the Secretary of War, by whom they shall be laid before the President, for his approval or orders in the case." [R. S. sec. 1342.] Act of May 29, 1830, ch. 179, 4 Stat. L. 417.

It was repealed and other provisions enacted in lieu thereof by the Act of March 2, 1913, ch. 93, § 1, infra, p. 479.

Department commander the accuser.—A conviction by a court-martial convened by the department commander, who is also the accuser, should be set aside. In re Bird, (1871) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 33.

The constitutional authority of the President as commander-in-chief and the authority of Congress to "make rules for the government" of the land forces are distinct, and Congress cannot, in the disguise of making rules, impair the authority of the President as such commander-in-chief. As such commander-in-chief, he has authority to convene a general court-martial to try an officer upon charges actually preferred, and the authority is not restricted to the single instance named in this article. An order by the President ordering a court-martial to be convened to try an officer upon the charges based upon the findings of the court of inquiry, does not make the President the accuser or prosecutor within the meaning of this section. Swaim v. U. S., (1897) 165 U. S. 553, 17 S. Ct. 448, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 823.

Art. 73. Repealed.—This section was as follows: "ART. 73. In time of war the commander of a division, or of a separate brigade of troops, shall be competent to appoint a general court-martial. But when such commander is the accuser or prosecutor of any person under his command, the court shall be appointed by the next higher commander." [R. S. sec. 1342.] Act of Dec. 24, 1861, ch. 3, 12 Stat. L. 330.

It was repealed and other provisions enacted in lieu thereof by the Act of March 2, 1913, ch. 93, § 1, infra, p. 479.

A commander of division, who, upon information laid before him of misconduct on the part of a regimental officer, directed the colonel (from whom the information was received) to prefer charges, and who saw that the charges were put in proper form, cannot be deemed the accuser or prosecutor in the sense of this article. (1878) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 106.

Heading of order.—If an order convening the court be headed "Headquarters, district of —," it may be shown that the officer was in fact a commander of a "division or separate brigade." Phelps's Case, (1868) 4 Ct. Cl. 209.

ART. 74. [Judge-advocate.] Officers who may appoint a court-martial shall be competent to appoint a judge-advocate for the same. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 69.

Review of irregularities.—The appointment of the judge-advocate and his taking the oath required are matters of mere procedure, and any irregularities cannot be reviewed by the Court of Claims in a collateral action. Swain v. U. S., (1897) 165 U. S. 553, 17 S. Ct. 448, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 823.

Art. 75. Repealed.—This section was as follows: "ART. 75. General courts-martial may consist of any number of officers from five to thirteen, inclusive; but they shall not consist of less than thirteen when that number can be convened without manifest injury to the service." [R. S. sec. 1342.] Art. of War, 64.

It was repealed and other provisions enacted in lieu thereof by the Act of March 2, 1913, ch. 93, § 1, infra, p. 479.

Undergraduate cadets are not commissioned officers, and cannot serve on a court-martial, but graduated cadets assigned to service as supernumerary officers may. (1855) 7 Op. Atty-Gen. 323.

This article is merely directory to the officer appointing the court, and his decision as to the number which can be convened without manifest injury to the service, being in a matter submitted to his sound discretion, must be conclusive, Martin v. Mott, (1827) 12 Wheat. 19, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 537; provided it does not fall below the minimum number of five, Howe's Case, (1854) 6 Op. Atty-Gen. 506.

The execution of a sentence of death is murder unless the court pronouncing it consisted of thirteen commissioned officers, where that number could have been convened without manifest injury to the service. (1819) 1 Op. Atty-Gen. 296.

A member of a court-martial who has been absent during a portion of the trial, and who therefore did not hear the witnesses testify, should not take part in sentencing the accused, and when the court consisted of only five members, including the absentee, the proceedings will be set aside. (1831) 2 Op. Atty-Gen. 414.

The settled practice should be followed, that a member of a court-martial, who participated in the proceedings of the same at the commencement of its sittings, but who, from sickness, has been unable to attend during the trial of the whole case, could not afterwards, on recovering his health, resume his seat again as a member of the court without a new precept issued; (1842) 4 Op. Atty-Gen. 7. But the remaining members may adjourn the court from day to day until he is able to attend the trial. (1842) 4 Op. Atty-Gen. 17.

Sentence sent back for revision—competency of court.—Where a general court-martial was required by the Secretary of War to revise its sentence, and on re-assembling two of the original members were absent, but a legal quorum of the court remained, the court remained the same competent court as when first assembled. (1855) 7 Op. Atty-Gen. 338.

ART. 76. [When requisite number not at a post.] When the requisite number of officers to form a general court-martial is not present in any post or detachment, the commanding officer shall, in cases which require the cognizance of such a court, report to the commanding officer of the department, who shall, thereupon, order a court to be assembled at the nearest post or department at which there may be such a requisite number of officers, and shall order the party accused, with necessary witnesses, to be transported to the place where the said court shall be assembled. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 86.

ART. 77. [Regular officers, on what courts may sit.] Officers of the Regular Army shall not be competent to sit on courts-martial to try the officers or soldiers of other forces, except as provided in Article 78. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 97.

1 F. S. A.—30

Officer on indefinite leave of absence with volunteer forces.—An officer of the regular army is within the provision of this article that "officers of the Regular Army shall not be competent to sit on courts-martial to try the officers or soldiers of other forces," although such officer has been granted an indefinite leave of absence from the regular army in order to enable him to accept a commission in the volunteer forces. U. S. v. Brown, (1907) 206 U. S. 240, 27 S. Ct. 620, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 1046.

ART. 78. [Marine and Regular Army officers associated on courts.] Officers of the Marine Corps, detached for service with the Army by order of the President, may be associated with officers of the Regular Army on courts-martial for the trial of offenders belonging to the Regular Army, or to forces of the Marine Corps so detached; and in such cases the orders of the senior officer of either corps, who may be present and duly authorized, shall be obeyed. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 68; Act of June 30, 1834, ch. 132, 4 Stat. L. 713.

ART. 79. [Officers triable by general courts-martial.] Officers shall be tried only by general courts-martial; and no officer shall, when it can be avoided, be tried by officers inferior to him in rank. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 75.

This provision is merely directory to the officer appointing the court, and his decision as to whether the trial by officers inferior in rank to the accused was or was not avoidable, being a matter submitted to his sound discretion, must be conclusive. Swaim v. U. S., (1897) 165

U. S. 553, 17 S. Ct. 448, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 823.

Graduated cadets assigned to service as supernumerary officers are subject to the duties of commissioned officers, and can only be tried by general courts-martial. (1855) 7 Op. Atty-Gen. 323.

Art. 80. Repealed.—This article was repealed by section 2 of an Act of June 18, 1898, ch. 469, 30 Stat. L. 484. Article 80, repealed by above-mentioned Act, read as follows: "In time of war a field-officer may be detailed in every regiment, to try soldiers thereof for offenses not capital; and no soldier, serving with his regiment, shall be tried by a regimental [or] garrison court-martial when a field-officer of his regiment may be so detailed." [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. 81. Repealed.—This article was as follows: "ART. 81. Every officer commanding a regiment or corps shall, subject to the provisions of article eighty, be competent to appoint, for his own regiment or corps, courts-martial, consisting of three officers, to try offenses not capital." [R. S. sec. 1342.] Art. of War, 69; Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 201, 12 Stat. L. 598.

It was repealed by the Act of March 2, 1913, ch. 93, § 1, infra, p. 479.

Art. 82. Repealed.—This section was as follows: "ART. 82. Every officer commanding a garrison, fort, or other place, where the troops consist of different corps, shall, subject to the provisions of article eighty, be competent to appoint, for such garrison or other place, courts-martial, consisting of three officers, to try offenses not capital." [R. S. sec. 1342.] Art. of War, 66; Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 201, 12 Stat. L. 598.

This article was amended by the Act of Feb. 18, 1875, ch. 80, 18 Stat. L. 318. The amendment consisted in striking out the words "ninety-five" and inserting the word "eighty."

It was repealed by the Act of March 2, 1913, ch. 93, § 1, infra, p. 479.

Art. 83. Repealed.—This section was as follows: "ART. 83. Regimental and garrison courts-martial and summary courts detailed under existing laws to try enlisted men shall not have power to try capital cases or commissioned officers, but shall have power to award punishment not to exceed confinement at hard labor for three months or forfeiture of three months' pay, or both, and in addition thereto, in the case of non-commissioned officers reduction to the ranks and in the case of first-class privates reduction to second-class privates: Provided, That a summary court shall not adjudge confinement and forfeiture in excess of a period of one month, unless the accused shall before trial consent in writing to trial by said court, but in any case of refusal to so consent, the trial may be had either by general, regimental, or garrison court-martial, or by said summary court, but in case of trial by said summary court without consent as aforesaid, the court shall not adjudge confinement or forfeiture of pay for more than one month."

This article was amended to read as above by section 4 of the Act of March 2, 1901, ch. 809, 31 Stat. L. 950. Prior to the amendment the article read as follows: "ART. 83. Regimental and garrison courts-martial, and field-officers detailed to try offenders, shall not have power to try capital cases or commissioned officers, or to inflict a fine exceeding one month's pay, or to imprison or put to hard labor any non-commissioned officer or soldier for a longer time than one month." [R. S. sec. 1342.] Arts. of War, 66 and 67.

It was repealed by the Act of March 2, 1913, ch. 93, § 1, infra, p. 479.

Undergraduate cadets are not commissioned officers and are subject to trial by regimental or garrison court-martial, but graduated cadets assigned to service as supernumerary officers are, and can only be tried by general courts-martial. (1855) 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 323.

The Act of Oct. 1, 1890, ch. 1259, 26 Stat. L. 648, "to promote the administration of justice in the army" does not repeal articles 81, 82, 83, et seq., nor article 104, nor that part of article 112 providing that every officer, commanding a regiment or garrison in which a regiment or garrison court-martial may be held, shall have power to pardon or mitigate any punishment which such court may adjudge. The summary court here provided for is a substitute for the garrison or regimental court-martial, with the right reserved to the accused to have his trial by court-martial, in which case he will enjoy the benefit of articles 104 and 112. This Act does not give the reviewing officer power to mitigate or approve a part and disapprove a part of a sentence of a summary court where the sentence was within the power of the court-martial to impose. (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 346.

ART. 84. [Oath of members of courts-martial.] The judge-advocate shall administer to each member of the court, before they proceed upon any trial, the following oath, which shall also be taken by all members of regimental and garrison courts-martial: "You, A B, do swear that you will well and truly try and determine, according to evidence, the matter now before you, between the United States of America and the prisoner to be tried, and that you will duly administer justice, without partiality, favor, or affection, according to the provisions of the rules and articles for the government of the armies of the United States, and if any doubt should arise, not explained by said articles, then according to your conscience, the best of your understanding, and the custom of war in like cases; and you do further swear that you will not divulge the sentence of the court until it shall be published by the proper authority, except to the judge-advocate; neither will you disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof, as a witness, by a court of justice, in a due course of law. So help you God."

This article was amended to read as above by the Act of July 27, 1892, ch. 272, 27 Stat. L. 277. Before the amendment it read as follows: "ART. 84. The judge-advocate shall administer to each member of the court, before they proceed upon any trial, the following oath, which shall also be taken by all members of regimental and garrison courts-martial: 'You, A B, do swear that you will well and truly try and determine, according to evidence, the matter now before you, between the United States of America and the prisoner to be tried, and that you will duly administer justice, without partiality, favor, or affection, according to the provisions of the rules and articles for the government of the armies of the United States, and if any doubt should arise, not explained by said articles, then according to your conscience, the best of your understanding, and the custom of war in like cases; and you do further swear that you will not divulge the sentence of the court until it shall be published by the proper authority; neither will you disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof, as a witness, by a court of justice, in a due course of law. So help you God.'" [R. S. sec. 1342.] Art. of War, 69.

ART. 85. [Oath of judge-advocate.] When the oath has been administered to the members of a court-martial, the president of the court shall administer to the judge-advocate, or person officiating as such, an oath in the following form:

"You, A B, do swear that you will not disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof, as a witness, by a court of justice, in due course of law; nor divulge the sentence of the court to any but the proper authority, until it shall be duly disclosed by the same. So help you God." [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 69.

The appointment of the judge-advocate and his taking the oath required are matters of mere procedure, and any irregularities cannot be reviewed by the Court of Claims in a collateral action. Swaim v. U. S., (1897) 165 U. S. 553, 17 S. Ct. 448, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 823.

ART. 86. [Contempts of court.] A court-martial may punish, at discretion, any person who uses any menacing words, signs, or gestures, in its presence, or who disturbs its proceedings by any riot or disorder. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 76.

Civilian witness.—A court-martial has no authority to punish a civilian witness for contempt in refusing to testify unless the authority is conferred by statute. Ar- ticle 86 does not give this authority. (1885) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 278; U. S. v. Praeger, (1907) 149 Fed. 474.

ART. 87. [Behavior of members.] All members of a court-martial are to behave with decency and calmness. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 72.

ART. 88. [Challenges by prisoner.] Members of a court-martial may be challenged by a prisoner, but only for cause stated to the court. The court shall determine the relevancy and validity thereof, and shall not receive a challenge to more than one member at a time. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 71.

Review.—The decision of the court-martial in determining the validity of the challenge cannot be reviewed by the Court of Claims in a collateral action. Swaim v. U. S., (1897) 165 U. S. 553, 17 S. Ct. 448, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 823.

ART. 89. [Prisoner standing mute.] When a prisoner, arraigned before a general court-martial, from obstinacy and deliberate design, stands mute, or answers foreign to the purpose, the court may proceed to trial and judgment, as if the prisoner had pleaded not guilty. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 70.

ART. 90. [Judge-advocate, prosecutor and counsel for prisoner.] The judge-advocate, or some person deputed by him, or by the general or officer commanding the Army, detachment, or garrison, shall prosecute in the name of the United States, but when the prisoner has made his plea, he shall so far consider himself counsel for the prisoner as to object to any leading question to any of the witnesses, and to any question to the prisoner, the answer to which might tend to criminate himself. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 69.

The judge-advocate is required to withdraw from closed sessions by section 2 of the Act of July 27, 1892, ch. 272, infra, p. 479.

ART. 91. [Depositions.] The depositions of witnesses residing beyond the limits of the State, Territory, or district in which any military court may be ordered to sit, if taken on reasonable notice to the opposite party and duly authenticated, may be read in evidence before such court in cases not capital. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 74; Act of March 3, 1863, ch. 75, 12 Stat. L. 736.

Accused as witness.—By the Act of March 16, 1878, ch. 37, 20 Stat. L. 30, the person charged “at his own request; but not otherwise,” is made “a competent witness.”

ART. 92. [Oath of witness.] All persons who give evidence before a court-martial shall be examined on oath, or affirmation, in the following form: “You swear (or affirm) that the evidence you shall give, in the case now in hearing, shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God.” [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 73.

Administration of oaths.—By section 4 of the Act of July 27, 1892, ch. 272, 27 Stat. L. 277, it is provided that “judge-advocates of departments and of courts-martial, and the trial officers of summary courts, are hereby authorized to administer oaths for the purposes of the administration of military justice, and for other purposes of military administration.”

Rules of evidence.—Courts-martial are governed by the same rules of evidence as ordinary courts of criminal jurisdiction. Whittaker's Case, (1882) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 310.

Experts.—The Secretary of War has the right to authorize a judge-advocate to employ expert witnesses at agreed rates of compensation. Matter of Smith. (1889) 24 Ct. Cl. 209.

ART. 93. [Continuances.] A court-martial shall, for reasonable cause, grant a continuance to either party, for such time, and as often, as may appear to be just: Provided, That if the prisoner be in close confinement, the trial shall not be delayed for a period longer than sixty days. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Act of March 3, 1863, ch. 75, 12 Stat. L. 736.

Art. 94. Repealed. This article was as follows: “ART. 94. Proceedings of trials shall be carried on only between the hours of eight in the morning and three in the afternoon, excepting in cases which, in the opinion of the officer appointing the court, require immediate example.” [R. S. sec. 1342.] Art. of War, 75.

It was repealed by an Act of March 2, 1901, ch. 890, 31 Stat. L. 950.

ART. 95. [Order of voting.] Members of a court-martial, in giving their votes, shall begin with the youngest in commission. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 72.

ART. 96. [Sentence of death.] No person shall be sentenced to suffer death, except by the concurrence of two-thirds of the members of a general court-martial, and in the cases herein expressly mentioned. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 87.

ART. 97. [Penitentiaries.] No person in the military service shall, under the sentence of a court-martial, be punished by confinement in a penitentiary, unless the offense of which he may be convicted would, by some statute of the United States, or by some statute of the State, Territory, or District in which such offense may be committed, or by the common law, as the same exists in such State, Territory, or District, subject such convict to such punishment. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Act of July 16, 1862, ch. 190, 12 Stat. L. 589.

A soldier charged with assault with intent to kill, in the District of Columbia, may be convicted by court-martial under article 62; and a sentence of discharge from the service, forfeiture of pay, and imprisonment in the penitentiary for the term of eight years, is authorized by this article. Ex p. Mason, (1881) 105 U. S. 696, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1213.

ART. 98. [Flogging.] No person in the military service shall be punished by flogging, or by branding, marking, or tattooing on the body. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Act of Aug. 5, 1861; Act of June 6, 1872, ch. 316, 17 Stat. L. 261.

ART. 99. [Discharge and dismissal of officers.] No officer shall be discharged or dismissed from the service, except by order of the President, or by sentence of a general court-martial; and in time of peace no officer shall be dismissed, except in pursuance of the sentence of a court-martial, or in mitigation thereof. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 11; Act of July 13, 1866, ch. 176, 14 Stat. L. 92.

Power of President.—Until the Act of July 13, 1866, the President had the power to remove officers. (Gratiot's Case, (1865) 1 Ct. Cl. 258.)

The constitutional authority of the President as commander-in-chief and the authority of Congress to "make rules for the government" of the land forces are distinct, and Congress cannot in the disguise of making rules impair the authority of the President as such commander-in-chief. Swaim v. U. S., (1893) 28 Ct. Cl. 173.

While the President is made commander-in-chief by the Constitution, Congress has the right to legislate for the army, not impairing his efficiency as such commander-in-chief, and when a law is passed for the regulation of the army, having that constitutional qualification, he becomes as to that law an executive officer, and is limited in the discharge of his duty by the statute. McBlair v. U. S., (1884) 19 Ct. Cl. 528.

An order of the President dismissing an officer may be revoked by the same President that issued it; and if the office be not filled at the time of revocation, and if the pay thereof has not been paid lawfully to another, the dismissed officer will be entitled to the office and to the pay ad interim; but if the office be filled by the appointment of another, the revocation must remain suspended till a vacancy occur; and if the pay ad interim has been paid lawfully to another, the officer must take his reinstatement cum onere. Montgomery's Case, (1869) 5 Ct. Cl. 136; Smith's Case, (1866) 2 Ct. Cl. 206.

If an officer be once entirely severed from the army by the constitutional action of the President, and more particularly if the place has been filled by a new appointment confirmed by the Senate, he cannot be restored by any action of the President alone, but only with the advice and consent of the Senate. U. S. v. Corson, (1885) 114 U. S. 619, 5 S. Ct. 1158, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 254; Montgomery v. U. S., (1884) 19 Ct. Cl. 370.

The purpose of this article is not to attach a life tenure or element of vested right to the office, but to save officers "in times of peace" from a hasty and dishonorable dismissal. It cannot limit the power of Congress to reduce the army by appropriate legislation. Street v. U. S., (1890) 133 U. S. 299, 10 S. Ct. 309, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 631; Hildeburn's Case, (1877) 13 Ct. Cl. 62.

This article discloses no intention to restrict the power of the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to displace officers by the appointment of others in their places. Keyes v. U. S., (1883) 109 U. S. 336, 3 S. Ct. 202, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 954; Blake v. U. S., (1880) 103 U. S. 227, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 462; McElrath v. U. S., (1880) 102 U. S. 426, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 189; Mullan v. U. S., (1891) 140 U. S. 240, 11 S. Ct. 788, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 489; Crenshaw v. U. S., (1890) 134 U. S. 99, 10 S. Ct. 431, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 825; Fletcher v. U. S., (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 541; Carrick v. U. S., (1889) 24 Ct. Cl. 264.

If an officer resign while of unsound mind and the resignation be accepted, and the vacancy be duly filled, the loss must fall on the officer who caused it, notwithstanding his insanity. Blake's Case, (1878) 14 Ct. Cl. 462.

Commission of President.—The right of one to an office is not vested until his commission has been signed by the President. Until a commission has been signed, it is within the discretionary power of the President to withhold it. Eggleston's Case, (1869) 13 Op. Atty-Gen. 44.

ART. 100. [Publication of officers cashiered for cowardice or fraud.]

When an officer is dismissed from the service for cowardice or fraud, the sentence shall further direct that the crime, punishment, name, and place of abode of the delinquent shall be published in the newspapers in and about the camp, and in the State from which the offender came, or where he usually resides; and after such publication it shall be scandalous for an officer to associate with him. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 85.

ART. 101. [Suspension of officers' pay.] When a court-martial suspends an officer from command, it may also suspend his pay and emoluments for the same time according to the nature of his offense. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 84.

Suspension of pay signifies its absolute forfeiture, and not simply the temporary withholding thereof. Swain's Case, (1885) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 113.

ART. 102. [No person tried twice for same, &c.] No person shall be tried a second time for the same offense. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 87.

A plea of former arrest on the same charges and a discharge without trial is not well founded; a former trial is the only defense in this article. (1819) 1 Op. Atty-Gen. 294.

New trial.—For error in excluding proper testimony the President may order a new trial by a court composed of different members upon the motion of the accused. The plea of former conviction or acquittal is the privilege of the accused and may be waived by him. (1818) 1 Op. Atty-Gen. 233.

A conviction or acquittal by the civil authorities of an offense against the general law does not discharge the accused from responsibility for the military offense on the same facts. In re Stubbs, (1905) 133 Fed. 1012; In re Esmond, (1886) 5 Mackey (D. C.) 64; Steiner's Case, (1854) 6 Op. Atty-Gen. 413; Howe's Case, (1854) 6 Op. Atty-Gen. 506; (1842) 3 Op. Atty-Gen. 749.

An acquittal by a court-martial is not a bar to the prosecution for the same act by the civil authorities. In re Fair, (1900) 100 Fed. 149. Nor is a conviction. U. S. v. Cashiel, (1863) 1 Hughes (U. S.) 552.

ART. 103. [Limitation of time of prosecution.] No person shall be liable to be tried and punished by a general court-martial for any offense which appears to have been committed more than two years before the issuing of the order for such trial, unless, by reason of having absented himself, or of some other manifest impediment, he shall not have been amenable to justice within that period.

No person shall be tried or punished by a court-martial for desertion in time of peace and not in the face of an enemy, committed more than two years before the arraignment of such person for such offense, unless he shall meanwhile have absented himself from the United States, in which case the time of his absence shall be excluded in computing the period of the limitation: Provided, That said limitation shall not begin until the end of the term for which said person was mustered into the service.

This article was amended to read as above by the Act of April 11, 1890, ch. 78, 26 Stat. L. 54. The amendment consisted in adding the last paragraph. The first paragraph was from original Article of War, 88, R. S. sec. 1342.

Courts of inquiry.—This article does not apply to courts of inquiry. (1853) 6 Op. Atty-Gen. 239.

A plea of the statute of limitations is a matter of defense in the trial by court-martial and cannot be inquired into on habeas corpus. In re Cadwallader, (1904) 127 Fed. 881; In re Zimmerman, (1887) 30 Fed. 176; In re Davison, (1884) 21 Fed. 618; In re White, (1883) 17 Fed. 723.

To what offenses applicable.—This article applies to all offenses triable and punishable by court-martial, (1872) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 52; and so is applicable to the offense of desertion. (1876) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 152; In re Davison, (1880) 4 Fed. 507; In re Zimmerman, (1887) 12 Sawy. (U. S.) 257.

Desertion being a continuing offense, the limitation does not begin to run until the expiration of the term of enlistment. The provision of article 48 does not of itself operate to extend the term of service so as to continue the offense correspondingly, and thus postpone the time when the limitation begins to run. (1878) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 170; (1879) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 396; (1876) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 152; In re Zimmerman, (1887), 12 Sawy. (U. S.) 257.

Prosecution is barred when more than five years have expired since the alleged desertion, and more than two years from the expiration of the term of enlistment to the arrest. (1871) 13 Op. Atty-Gen. 462.

The limitation will run in favor of a deserter who re-enlists in another regiment. Harris's Case, (1873) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 265.

A soldier may be detained in custody by the military authorities, for trial or lawful disposition after his term of service expires, on account of an act committed during such service. In re Bird, (1871) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 33.

Pendency of proceedings in civil courts.—A plea of the statute of limitations cannot be sustained where it appears that the accused was arraigned before court-martial within the two years, and action was suspended upon his plea of the pendency of proceedings against him in the civil courts, which were not finally disposed of until the expiration of two years. Howe's Case, (1854) 6 Op. Atty-Gen. 506. See (1842) 3 Op. Atty-Gen. 749.

The accused cannot waive the benefit of the limitation, so that upon a plea of guilty the government must show, in some other way than by his plea or admission at the trial, why he was not brought to trial for desertion within the two years from the cessation of the offense, that is, from the expiration of the term of enlistment. (1878) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 170; (1879) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 396; (1853) 6 Op. Atty-Gen. 239; (1820) 1 Op. Atty-Gen. 383.

Concealment of the offense by the accused is not such a "manifest impediment" to his prosecution as will prevent the running of the limitation. (1872) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 52; Harris's Case, (1873) 14 Op. Atty-Gen. 265.

The mere absence without leave by a deserter does not bring him within the exceptions of this article, so that an arrest or surrender is not necessary to start the running of the limitation. (1876) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 152; In re Davison, (1880) 4 Fed. 507.

Officer dismissed and restored.—Where charges were preferred against an officer, and shortly thereafter he was dismissed from the service for other reasons, upon his restoration he cannot be tried on the charges pending against him at the time of his dismissal, after the lapse of two years from the commission of the alleged offense. (1858) 9 Op. Atty-Gen. 181.

"Time of peace."—A soldier who deserted after the signing of the protocol between the United States and Spain, and while a state of peace actually existed, and nothing remained to be done to conclude peace except the settlement of the details of the treaty, was held to be within the provision of this section that no person shall be court-martialed for desertion in time of peace, and not in the face of an enemy, committed more than two years before his arraignment therefor. In re Cadwallader, (1904) 127 Fed. 881.

ART. 104. [Approval of sentence by officer ordering court.] No sentence of a court-martial shall be carried into execution until the same shall have been approved by the officer ordering the court, or by the officer commanding for the time being.

This article was amended to read as above by the Act of July 27, 1892, ch. 272, 27 Stat. L. 277. Before the amendment it was as follows: "ART. 104. No sentence of a court-martial shall be carried into execution until the whole proceedings shall have been approved by the officer ordering the court, or by the officer commanding for the time being. [R. S. sec. 1342.] Art. of War, 65.

If a sentence in gross is pronounced upon conviction under sixteen specifications, and upon review by the President twelve are set aside, the sentence need not be disturbed provided it is such as could have been lawfully imposed under the counts which are upheld. Carter v. McClaughry, (1900) 105 Fed. 614.

Inadmissible evidence.—Courts-martial are governed by the same rules of evidence as ordinary courts of criminal jurisdiction, and when inadmissible evidence has been received, it is error if it was material to the finding of the court, and the sentence should be set aside by the reviewing officer. Whittaker's Case, (1882) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 310.

The reviewing officer's approval and orders are as much a part of the record as the proceedings and sentence of the court. All constitute an entire proceeding and are to be construed together. In re Esmond, (1886) 5 Mackey (D. C.) 64.

Disapproval as acquittal.—Where a conviction has been disapproved by the reviewing officer, and the prisoner released from confinement and restored to duty, it is in effect an acquittal. (1871) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 459.

Where a sentence discharging a soldier from the service has been set aside as void, he is not affected by such sentence, and is deemed to have been in the service between the sentence and the order setting it aside. In re Bird, (1871) 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 33.

Questioning legality of sentence.—If the sentence of a court-martial does not sever the relations of the accused with the military service, he may any time question the legality of his sentence. Swaim v. U. S., (1893) 28 Ct. Cl. 173.

After the dissolution of a court-martial, the Secretary of War has no authority to receive affidavits or other evidence as to the incorrectness of the record and modify or amend it. (1900) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 23.

Evidence to supply facts which record fails to show.—Upon an application to the department to have proceedings as of court-martial declared null and void, evidence may be admitted, not to impeach the validity of the proceedings, but to supply facts which the record fails to show. (1878) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 106.

Increasing severity of sentence.—The commanding officer charged with the duty of reviewing the proceedings of the court cannot increase the severity of a sentence; he may approve or disapprove or mitigate. But he may remand the case to the court suggesting the inadequacy of the sentence, and the court may in its discretion revoke the sentence and inflict a severer sentence. Swaim v. U. S., (1893) 28 Ct. Cl. 173. See Ex p. Reed, (1879) 100 U. S. 13, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 538.

ART. 105. [Confirmation of death sentence.] No sentence of a court-martial, inflicting the punishment of death, shall be carried into execution until it shall have been confirmed by the President; except in the cases of persons convicted, in time of war, as spies, mutineers, deserters, or murderers, and in the cases of guerilla marauders, convicted, in time of war, of robbery, burglary, arson, rape, assault with intent to commit rape, or of violation of the laws and customs of war; and in such excepted cases the sentence of death may be carried into execution upon confirmation by the commanding general in the field, or the commander of the department, as the case may be. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 65; Act of July 17, 1862; Act of March 3, 1863; Act of July 2, 1862, ch. 215, 13 Stat. L. 356.

A court-martial may reconsider the sentence and judgment, and sentence to death where the former sentence imposed only imprisonment. (1819) 1 Op. Atty.-Gen. 296.

Fifth amendment to Constitution.—The words "when in actual service in time of war or public danger," in the fifth article of amendments to the United States Constitution, apply only to the militia. Johnson v. Sayre, (1895) 158 U. S. 109, 15 S. Ct. 773, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 914.

This article does not authorize a trial of citizens of a state by a military commission for the alleged offense of killing a military guard when the state is in fact in the exercise of its civil functions.

U. S. v. Commandant of Ft. Delaware, (1866) 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,842.

ART. 106. [Confirmation of dismissals in time of peace.] In time of peace no sentence of a court-martial, directing the dismissal of an officer, shall be carried into execution, until it shall have been confirmed by the President. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 65.

When officer is out of service.—Upon a sentence of dismissal by a court-martial, the officer sentenced is not legally out of the service unless the record positively and distinctly shows that the proceedings have been approved by the President. Runkle v. U. S., (1887) 122 U. S. 543, 7 S. Ct. 1141, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 1167; Page v. U. S., (1890) 25 Ct. Cl. 254.

An indorsement upon the record by the Secretary of War that: "In conformity with the 65th (now article 106) of the Rules and Articles of War, the proceedings of the general court-martial in the foregoing case have been forwarded to the Secretary of War for the action of the President. The proceedings, findings, and sentence are approved, and the sentence will be duly executed," is sufficient to show compliance with this article. This article requires the personal judicial action of the President, but such may be evidenced by the act of the Secretary of War under section 216, R. S. U. S. v. Fletcher, (1893) 148 U. S. 84, 13 S. Ct. 552, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 378; U. S. v. Page, (1891) 137 U. S. 673, 11 S. Ct. 219, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 828; (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 290.

The case of Runkle v. U. S., (1887) 122 U. S. 543, 7 S. Ct. 1141, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 1167, is distinguished, in that the record did not show in that case that the proceedings had been laid before the President or acted on by him, and in the Fletcher case the court says that the Runkle case is hardly a safe precedent.

Nomination of successor.—A sentence of dismissal of an officer, carried into effect under orders of the War Department, is confirmed by a nomination of a successor to the Senate, or by an appointment by the President of a successor during a recess of the Senate. (1879) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 298.

Review by succeeding President.—A decision made and executed under one President is not liable to be reviewed and annulled under the administration of another. Howe's Case, (1854) 6 Op. Atty.-Gen. 506; (1854) 6 Op. Atty.-Gen. 369. See (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 290.

Waiver of right.—If an officer on the active list submits without appeal and without objection for an unreasonable time to an illegal or irregular order of dismissal, he must be held to have abandoned and waived his right to all title and claim to the office and to its emoluments. Ide v. U. S., (1890) 25 Ct. Cl. 401; Armstrong v. U. S., (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 387.

An officer on the retired list does not come under the rule in Ide's case, above cited. Fletcher v. U. S., (1891) 26 Ct. Cl. 541.

ART. 107. [Dismissal by division or brigade courts.] No sentence of a court-martial appointed by the commander of a division or of a separate brigade of troops, directing the dismissal of an officer, shall be carried into execution until it shall have been confirmed by the general commanding the army in the field to which the division or brigade belongs. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Act of Dec. 24, 1861, ch. 3, 12 Stat. L. 330.

ART. 108. [General officers, sentences respecting.] No sentence of a court-martial, either in time of peace or in time of war, respecting a general officer, shall be carried into execution, until it shall have been confirmed by the President. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 65.

ART. 109. [Confirmation by officer ordering court.] All sentences of a court-martial may be confirmed and carried into execution by the officer ordering the court, or by the officer commanding for the time being, where confirmation by the President, or by the commanding general in the field, or commander of the department, is not required by these articles. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 65.

Art. 110. Repealed. This section was as follows: "ART. 110. No sentence adjudged by a field officer, detailed to try soldiers of his regiment, shall be carried into execution until the same shall have been approved by the brigade commander, or, in case there be no brigade commander, by the commanding officer of the post or camp."

Article 110 was amended so to read by the Act of July 27, 1892, ch. 272, 27 Stat. L. 277. Prior to the amendment it read as follows: "ART. 110. No sentence of a field-officer, detailed to try soldiers of his regiment, shall be carried into execution, until the whole proceedings shall have been approved by the brigade commander, or, in case there be no brigade commander, by the commanding officer of the post." [R. S. sec. 1342.]

It was repealed by an Act of June 18, 1898, ch. 464, 30 Stat. L. 484.

ART. 111. [Suspension of sentence of death or dismissal.] Any officer who has authority to carry into execution the sentence of death, or of dismissal of an officer, may suspend the same until the pleasure of the President shall be known; and, in such case, he shall immediately transmit to the President a copy of the order of suspension, together with a copy of the proceedings of the court. [R. S. sec. 1542.]

Art. of War, 80.

ART. 112. [Pardon and mitigation of sentences.] Every officer who is authorized to order a general court-martial shall have power to pardon or mitigate any punishment adjudged by it, except the punishment of death or of dismissal of an officer. Every officer commanding a regiment or garrison in which a regimental or garrison court-martial may be held, shall have power to pardon or mitigate any punishment which such court may adjudge. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 89; Act of July 17, 1862, ch. 201, 12 Stat. L. 598.

Power of officers.—An officer who is authorized to order a general court-martial has no power to pardon or mitigate the punishment after confirmation by him of the sentence. (1888) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 106.

A general, commanding the forces of the United States in the field, does not possess power to commute a sentence of dismissal of an officer, but only the power to execute the sentence, or to suspend it and take the direction of the President. (1853) 6 Op. Atty.-Gen. 123.

The appointment of an officer to a new commission is constructive pardon of a previous sentence pronounced but not yet executed. (1853) 6 Op. Atty.-Gen. 123.

The President may substitute a suspension for a term of years without pay for a sentence of absolute dismissal, as he possesses the power to revise, pardon, and to mitigate a sentence, (1845) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 432; but he cannot substitute another punishment for that decreed by the court, as the mitigation must be of the punishment adjudged, by modifying its severity, except in cases of sentences of death, where there is no inferior degree, (1845) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 444; and in case of sentence of death he may substitute a milder punishment. (1820) 1 Op. Atty.-Gen. 327.

ART. 113. [Proceedings forwarded to Judge-Advocate-General.] Every judge-advocate, or person acting as such, at any general court-martial, shall, with as much expedition as the opportunity of time and distance of place may admit, forward the original proceedings and sentence of such court to the Judge-Advocate-General of the Army, in whose office they shall be carefully preserved. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 90; Act of July 17, 1862; Act of July 28, 1866; Act of March 3, 1877, ch. 102, 19 Stat. L. 310.

ART. 114. [Party entitled to a copy.] Every party tried by a general court-martial shall, upon demand thereof, made by himself or by any person in his behalf, be entitled to a copy of the proceedings and sentence of such court. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 90.

ART. 115. [Courts of inquiry, how ordered.] A court of inquiry, to examine into the nature of any transaction of, or accusation or imputation against, any officer or soldier, may be ordered by the President or by any commanding officer; but, as courts of inquiry may be perverted to dishonorable purposes, and may be employed, in the hands of weak and envious commandants, as engines for the destruction of military merit, they shall never be ordered by any commanding officer, except upon a demand by the officer or soldier whose conduct is to be inquired of. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Arts. of War, 91 and 92.

The great purpose of a court of inquiry is to collect information by which to guide the discretion of him who orders it. The two years' limitation, article 103, does not apply to courts of inquiry. (1853) 6 Op. Atty.-Gen. 239.

ART. 116. [Members of court of inquiry.] A court of inquiry shall consist of one or more officers, not exceeding three, and a recorder, to reduce the proceedings and evidence to writing. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 91.

ART. 117. [Oaths of members and recorder of court of inquiry.] The recorder of a court of inquiry shall administer to the members the following oath: "You shall well and truly examine and inquire, according to the evidence, into the matter now before you, without partiality, favor, affection, prejudice, or hope of reward: so help you God." After which the president of the court shall administer to the recorder the following oath: "You, A B, do swear that you will, according to your best abilities, accurately and impartially record the proceedings of the court and the evidence to be given in the case in hearing: so help you God." [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 93.

ART. 118. [Witnesses before courts of inquiry.] A court of inquiry, and the recorder thereof, shall have the same power to summon and examine witnesses as is given to courts-martial and the judge-advocates thereof. Such witnesses shall take the same oath which is taken by witnesses before courts-martials, and the party accused shall be permitted to examine and cross-examine them, so as fully to investigate the circumstances in question. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Arts. of War, 91 and 93; Acts of March 3, 1863, ch. 75, 12 Stat. L. 736, ch. 79, 12 Stat. L. 754.

ART. 119. [Opinion; when given by.] A court of inquiry shall not give an opinion on the merits of the case inquired of unless specially ordered to do so. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 91.

ART. 120. [Authentication of proceedings of court of inquiry.] The proceedings of a court of inquiry must be authenticated by the signatures of the recorder and the president thereof, and delivered to the commanding officer. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 92.

ART. 121. [Proceedings of court of inquiry used as evidence.] The proceedings of a court of inquiry may be admitted as evidence by a court-martial, in cases not capital, nor extending to the dismissal of an officer: Provided, That the circumstances are such that oral testimony cannot be obtained. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 92.

A court-martial should itself decide questions as to the admissibility of evidence or the construction of a statute; it is not the official duty of the Secretary of War to give an opinion. (1881) 17 Op. Atty-Gen. 54.

ART. 122. [Command, when different corps happen to join.] If, upon marches, guards, or in quarters, different corps of the army happen to join or do duty together, the officer highest in rank of the line of the Army, Marine Corps, organized militia, or volunteers, by commission, there on duty or in quarters, shall command the whole, and give orders for what is needful in the service, unless otherwise specially directed by the President, according to the nature of the case. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

This article was amended to read as above given by section 1 of an Act of March 8, 1910, ch. 88, 36 Stat. L. 234, entitled "An Act to modify the one hundred and twenty-second and one hundred and twenty-fourth articles of war, and to repeal the one hundred and twenty-third article of war." The article amended was originally as follows: "ART. 122. If, upon marches, guards, or in quarters, different corps of the Army happen to join or do duty together, the officer highest in rank of the line of the Army, Marine Corps, or militia, by commission, there on duty or in quarters, shall command the whole, and give orders for what is needful to the service, unless otherwise specially directed by the President, according to the nature of the case." [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 92.

ART. 123. Repealed. This section was as follows: "ART. 123. In all matters relating to the rank, duties, and rights of officers, the same rules and regulations shall apply to officers of the Regular Army and to volunteers commissioned in, or mustered into said service, under the laws of the United States, for a limited period." [R. S. sec. 1342.] Act of March 2, 1867, ch. 159, 14 Stat. L. 435.

It was repealed by an Act of March 8, 1910, ch. 88, § 2, 36 Stat. L. 235.

Regulars and volunteers.—This article seems only intended for a condition of the military service in which both volunteers and regulars exist as distinct organizations. The officers of the regular army and the officers of the volunteer forces mustered into service shall, in the matter of rank, duty, and rights, be governed by the same rules and regulations. (1877) 15 Op. Atty-Gen. 330.

ART. 124. [Rank of organized militia officers on duty with officers of regular or volunteer forces.] Officers of the organized militia of the several States, when called into the service of the United States, shall on all detachments, courts-martial, and other duty, wherein they may be employed in conjunction with the regular or volunteer forces of the United States, take rank next after all officers of the like grade in said regular forces, and shall take precedence of all officers of volunteers of equal or inferior rank, notwithstanding the commissions of such militia officers may be older than the commissions of the said officers of the regular forces of the United States. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

This article was amended to read as above by section 1 of an Act of March 8, 1910, ch. 88, 36 Stat. L. 234, see the note to article 122 supra. The section amended was as follows: "ART. 124. Officers of the militia of the several States, when called into the service of the United States, shall on all detachments, courts-martial, and other duty wherein they may be employed in conjunction with the regular or volunteer forces of the United States, take rank next after all officers of the like grade in said regular or volunteer forces, notwithstanding the commissions of such militia officers may be older than the commissions of the said officers of the regular or volunteer forces of the United States." [R. S. sec. 1342.] Art. of War, 98; Act of March 2, 1867, ch. 159, 14 Stat. L. 435.

ART. 125. [Deceased officers' effects.] In case of the death of any officer, the major of his regiment, or the officer doing the major's duty, or the second officer in command at any post or garrison, as the case may be, shall immediately secure all his effects then in camp or quarters, and shall make, and transmit to the office of the Department of War, an inventory thereof. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 94.

ART. 126. [Deceased soldiers' effects.] In case of the death of any soldier, the commanding officer of his troop, battery, or company shall immediately secure all his effects then in camp or quarters, and shall, in the presence of two other officers, make an inventory thereof, which he shall transmit to the office of the Department of War. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 94.

ART. 127. [Effects of deceased officers and soldiers to be accounted for.] Officers charged with the care of the effects of deceased officers or soldiers shall account for and deliver the same, or the proceeds thereof, to the legal representatives of such deceased officers or soldiers. And no officer so charged shall be permitted to quit the regiment or post until he has deposited in the hands of the commanding officer all the effects of such deceased officers or soldiers not so accounted for and delivered. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 95.

ART. 128. [Articles of war to be published once in six months to every regiment, &c.] The foregoing articles shall be read and published, once in every six months, to every garrison, regiment, troop, or company in the service of the United States, and shall be duly observed and obeyed by all officers and soldiers in said service. [R. S. sec. 1342.]

Art. of War, 101.

An Act to amend the Articles of War relative to the punishment on conviction by courts-martial.

[Act of Sept. 27, 1890, ch. 998, 26 Stat. L. 491.]

[Punishment on conviction by courts martial.] That whenever by any of the Articles of War for the government of the Army the punishment or conviction of any military offense is left to the discretion of the court martial the punishment therefor shall not, in time of peace, be in excess of a limit which the President may prescribe. [26 Stat. L. 491.]

Sentence.—The President having fixed a term of ten years as the maximum of imprisonment in cases prosecuted under the sixty-second article of war, as authorized by this paragraph, it was held that a court-martial, on convicting a soldier of conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline in violation of such article, had jurisdiction to sentence the accused to a term of five years' imprisonment, though such term extended beyond the term of military service for which he had enlisted. In re Stubbs, (1905) 133 Fed. 1012.

SEC. 2. [Judge-advocate to withdraw from closed sessions.] That whenever a court-martial shall sit in closed session the judge-advocate shall withdraw, and when his legal advice or his assistance in referring to recorded evidence is required it shall be obtained in open court. [27 Stat. L. 278.]

The above section 2 and section 3 following are from the Act of July 27, 1892, ch. 272, entitled "An Act to amend the articles of war, and for other purposes."

This section relates to procedure and not to jurisdiction and the nonobservance of it by military tribunals is a matter for the revising military authorities and not for the civil courts, which are in no sense appellate tribunals for the revision of proceedings in courts-martial. When it appears that the court-martial had jurisdiction of the person and of the subject matter which was tried before it, errors in procedure can be corrected only by the proper military authorities. Ex p. Tucker, (D. C. Mass. 1913) 212 Fed. 569.

SEC. 3. [Fraudulent enlistment and receipt of pay.] That fraudulent enlistment, and the receipt of any pay or allowance thereunder, is hereby declared a military offense and made punishable by court-martial, under the Sixty-second Article of War. [27 Stat. L. 278.]

Fraudulent enlistment and receipt of pay.—A minor who by misrepresenting his age has fraudulently enlisted in the army without the consent of his parents, and thereby subjected himself to punishment under military law, will not be relieved from such punishment by his discharge by the civil courts on a writ of habeas corpus on the application of his parents, even though the military prosecution is not instituted until after the writ is issued. Ex p. Lewkowitz, (1908) 163 Fed. 646, overruling In re Carver, (1900) 103 Fed. 624. See also In re Scott, (1906) 144 Fed. 79.

[SEC. 1.] [Courts-martial — members — appointment — powers.]
* * * On and after July first, nineteen hundred and thirteen, courts-martial shall be of three kinds, namely: First, general courts-martial; second, special courts-martial; and third, summary courts-martial.

General courts-martial may consist of any number of officers from five to thirteen, inclusive.

Special courts-martial may consist of any number of officers from three to five, inclusive.

A summary court-martial shall consist of one officer.

The President of the United States, the commanding officer of a territorial division or department, the Superintendent of the Military Academy, the commanding officer of an army, a field army, an army corps, a division, or a separate brigade, and when empowered by the President, the commanding officer of any district or of any force or body of troops, may appoint general courts-martial whenever necessary; but when any such commander is the accuser or the prosecutor of the person or persons to be tried the court shall be appointed by superior competent authority, and no officer shall be eligible to sit as a member of such court when he is the accuser, or a witness for the prosecution.

The commanding officer of a district, garrison, fort, camp, or other place where troops are on duty, and the commanding officer of a brigade, regiment, detached battalion, or other detached command, may appoint special courts-martial for his command; but such special courts-martial may in any case be appointed by superior authority when by the latter deemed desirable, and no officer shall be eligible to sit as a member of such court when he is the accuser or a witness for the prosecution.

The commanding officer of a garrison, fort, camp, or other place where troops are on duty, and the commanding officer of a regiment, detached battalion, detached company, or other detachment may appoint summary courts-martial for his command; but such summary courts-martial may in any case be appointed by superior authority when by the latter deemed desirable: Provided, That when but one officer is present with a command he shall be the summary court-martial of that command and shall hear and determine cases brought before him.

General courts-martial shall have power to try any person subject to military law for any crime or offense made punishable by the Articles of War and any other person who by statute or by the law of war is subject to trial by military tribunals: Provided, That no officer shall be brought to trial before a general court-martial appointed by the Superintendent of the Military Academy.

Special courts-martial shall have power to try any person subject to military law, except an officer, for any crime or offense not capital made punishable by the Articles of War: Provided, That the President may by regulations, which he may modify from time to time, except from the jurisdiction of special courts-martial any class or classes of persons subject to military law.

Special courts-martial shall have power to adjudge punishment not to exceed confinement at hard labor for six months or forfeiture of six months' pay, or both, and in addition thereto reduction to the ranks in the cases of noncommissioned officers, and reduction in classification in the cases of first-class privates.

Summary courts-martial shall have power to try any soldier, except one who is holding the privileges of a certificate of eligibility to promotion, for any crime or offense not capital made punishable by the Articles of War: Provided, That noncommissioned officers shall not, if they object thereto, be brought to trial before a summary court-martial without the authority of the officer competent to bring them to trial before a general court-martial.

Summary courts-martial shall have power to adjudge punishment not to exceed confinement at hard labor for three months or forfeiture of three months' pay, or both, and in addition thereto reduction to the ranks in the cases of noncommissioned officers and reduction in classification in the cases of first-class privates: Provided, That when the summary court officer is also the commanding officer no sentence of such summary court-martial adjudging confinement at hard labor or forfeiture of pay, or both, for a period in excess of one month shall be carried into execution until the same shall have been approved by superior authority.

Articles seventy-two, seventy-three, seventy-five, eighty-one, eighty-two, and eighty-three of section thirteen hundred and forty-two of the Revised Statutes; the first section of an Act entitled "An Act to promote the administration of justice in the Army," approved October first, eighteen hundred and ninety, as amended by the first section of an Act approved June eighteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight (Thirtieth Statutes, four hundred and eighty-three, four hundred and eighty-four), are hereby repealed, but courts-martial duly and regularly convened in orders issued prior to the date when this Act takes effect and in existence on that date, under Articles of War hereby repealed, may continue as legal courts for the trial of cases referred to them prior to that date with the same effect as if this Act has [sic] not been passed: Provided, That prior to July first, nineteen hundred and thirteen, the President may, when deemed by him necessary, empower any officer competent under the terms of this Act to appoint the general courts-martial which it authorizes, to appoint general courts-martial authorized by existing law. [37 Stat. L. 721.]

This is from the Army Appropriations Act of March 2, 1913, ch. 93. For the Articles of War above repealed see supra, this title.

Sec. 1343. [Spies.] All persons who, in time of war, or of rebellion against the supreme authority of the United States, shall be found lurking or acting as spies, in or about any of the fortifications, posts, quarters, or encampments of any of the armies of the United States, or elsewhere, shall be triable by a general court-martial, or by a military commission, and shall, on conviction thereof, suffer death. [R. S.]

Act of April 10, 1806; Act of Feb. 13, 1862; Act of March 3, 1863, ch. 75, 12 Stat. L. 737.

This section, as well as articles 60 and 63 of section 1342, R. S., makes persons not strictly in the military service amenable to court-martial jurisdiction. Such statutes are not unconstitutional as being in conflict with the United States Constitution, amendment 5. (1879) 16 Op. Atty-Gen. 294; Ex p. Wildman, (1876) 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,653a.

Status of spy on restoration of peace.—One cannot be held as a spy who was not brought to trial and punishment during the existence of the war. Matter of Mar- tin, (1865) 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 142, wherein it appeared that the return to a writ of habeas corpus stated that the relator was, in November, 1864, within the federal lines as a spy, he being at that time an officer in the Confederate army, disguised in the dress of a citizen. The court held that the restoration of peace absolved all offenses committed by the public enemy during the existence of the war, and that the prisoner could not therefore be lawfully arraigned before a military tribunal for the offense of being a spy.

Sec. 924. [Attachment in postal suits.] In all cases where debts are due from defaulting or delinquent postmasters, contractors, or other officers, agents, or employés of the Post-Office Department, a warrant of attachment may issue against all real and personal property and legal and equitable rights belonging to such officer, agent, or employé, and his sureties, or either of them, in the following cases:

First. When such officer, agent, or employé, and his sureties, or either of them, is a non-resident of the district where such officer, agent, or employé was appointed, or has departed from such district for the purpose of permanently residing out of the same, or of defrauding the United States, or of avoiding the service of civil process.

Second. When such officer, agent, or employé, and his sureties, or either of them, has conveyed away, or is about to convey away his property, or any part thereof, or has removed or is about to remove the same or any part thereof from the district wherein it is situate, with intent to defraud the United States.

And when any such property has been removed, certified copies of the warrant may be sent to the marshal of the district into which the same has been removed, under which certified copies he may seize said property and convey it to some convenient point within the jurisdiction of the court from which the warrant originally issued. And alias warrants may be issued in such cases upon due application, and the validity of the warrant first issued shall continue until the return day thereof. [R. S.]

Amendments of process.—Section 948 confers the power upon circuit or district courts to allow amendments of any process returnable to or before such courts, and the power applies, beyond doubt, to the distinctive and special proceedings in attachment authorized in favor of the United States against defaulting and delinquent postmasters, contractors, and other officers, agents, and employees of the post-office, as regulated by section 924. "It is not necessary to say that the power to permit amendments in such cases is to be exercised according to the sound discretion of the court to whom the application is addressed." Erstein v. Rothschild, (1884) 22 Fed. 61.

Sec. 925. [Application for warrant; by whom and how made.] Application for such warrant of attachment may be made by any district or assistant district attorney, or any other person authorized by the Postmaster-General, before the judge, or, in his absence, before the clerk of any court of the United States having original jurisdiction of the cause of action. And such application shall be made upon an affidavit of the applicant, or of some other credible person, stating the existence of either of the grounds of attachment enumerated in the preceding section, and upon production of legal evidence of the debt. [R. S.]

Sec. 926. [Issuing warrant; duty of clerk and marshal.] Upon any such application and upon due order of any judge of the court, or, in his absence, without such order, the clerk shall issue a warrant for the attachment of all the property of any kind belonging to the person specified in the affidavit, which warrant shall be executed with all possible dispatch by the marshal, who shall take the property attached, if personal, into his custody, and hold the same subject to all interlocutory or final orders of the court. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 23, 1865, ch. 47, 13 Stat. L. 433.

Sec. 927. [Ownership of attached property; trial; other remedies.] At any time within twenty days before the return day of such warrant, the party whose property is attached may, on giving notice to the district attorney of his intention, file a plea in abatement, traversing the allegations of the affidavit, or denying the ownership of the property attached to be in the defendants or either of them; in which case the court may, upon application of either party, order an immediate trial by jury of the issues raised by the affidavit and plea; but the parties may, by consent, waive a trial by jury, in which case the court shall decide the issues raised. And any party claiming ownership of the property attached and a specific return thereof, shall be confined to the remedy herein afforded, but his right to an action of trespass, or other action for damages, shall not be impaired hereby. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 23, 1865, ch. 47, 13 Stat. L. 435.

Sec. 928. [Proceeds of attached property to be invested.] When the property attached is sold on any interlocutory order of the court or is producing any revenue, the money arising from such sale or revenue shall be invested in securities of the United States, under the order of the court, and all accretions shall be held subject to the orders of the same. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 23, 1865, ch. 47, 13 Stat. L. 433.

Sec. 929. [Publication of attachment.] Immediately upon the execution of any such warrant of attachment, the marshal shall cause due publication thereof to be made, in the case of absconding debtors for two months and of non-residents for four months. The publication shall be made in some newspaper published in the district where the property is situate, and the details thereof shall be regulated by the order under which the warrant is issued. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 23, 1865, ch. 47, 13 Stat. L. 434.

Sec. 930. [Persons having property of defendants to account for it; sales void; personal notice.] After the first publication of such notice of attachment as required by law, every person indebted to, or having possession of any property belonging to, the said defendants, or either of them, and having knowledge of such notice, shall account and answer for the amount of such debt and the value of such property; and any disposal or attempt to dispose of any such property, to the injury of the United States, shall be illegal and void. And when the person indebted to, or having possession of the property of, such defendants, or either of them, is known to the district attorney or marshal, such officer shall see that personal notice of the attachment is served upon such person, but the want of such notice shall not invalidate the attachment. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 23, 1865, ch. 47, 13 Stat. L. 434.

Sec. 931. [Discharge of attachment; bond.] Upon application of the party whose property has been attached, the court, or any judge thereof, may discharge the warrant of attachment as to the property of the applicant, provided such applicant shall execute to the United States a good and sufficient penal bond, in double the value of the property attached, to be approved by a judge of the court, and with condition for the return of said property, or to answer any judgment which may be rendered by the court in the premises. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 23, 1865, ch. 47, 13 Stat. L. 434.

Sec. 932. [Accrued rights not to be abridged.] Nothing contained in the preceding eight sections shall be construed to limit or abridge, in any manner, such rights of the United States as have accrued or been allowed in any district under the former practice of, or the adoption of State laws by, the United States courts. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 23, 1865, ch. 47, 13 Stat. L. 434.

Sec. 933. [Attachments dissolved in conformity with State laws.] An attachment of property, upon process instituted in any court of the United States, to satisfy such judgment as may be recovered by the plaintiff therein, except in the cases mentioned in the preceding nine sections, shall be dissolved when any contingency occurs by which, according to the laws of the State where said court is held, such attachment would be dissolved upon like process instituted in the courts of said State: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall interfere with any priority of the United States in the payment of debts. [R. S.]

Act of March 14, 1848, ch. 18, 9 Stat. L. 213; Act of Feb. 23, 1865, ch. 47, 13 Stat. L. 434.

Dissolved upon state insolvency proceedings.—After the death of a member of a partnership, in a state (Louisiana) in which the share of the deceased partner descends to his heir and does not vest in the survivor, an attempt of the surviving partners to surrender all the partnership effects to the civil court for the benefit of the creditors is not authorized by law unless by consent of the heirs; but when the surrender of the partnership effects is accepted by the court, which, by the appointment of a syndic, undertakes the administration of all the property of the late firm, the judgment of the court accepting the cession of the property and appointing a syndic cannot be collaterally attacked; the judgment can be set aside only by appeal or action in nullity. Where, under the state law, the effect of a cession of property by an insolvent person is to dissolve all attachments which have not matured into judgment, a writ of attachment levied on the partnership property, on the petition of one of the creditors of the late firm, will be dissolved. Tua v. Carriere, (1886) 117 U. S. 201, 6 S. Ct. 565, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 855.

And see Shwartz v. H. B. Clafin Co., (C. C. A. 1893) 60 Fed. 676, in which the court said that either the insolvent partnership or interveners, claiming to be the owners of the goods seized, had the right, as well as the syndic, to suggest or plead the cession of the effects of the insolvent partnership as ground for the dissolution of the attachment.

Stayed until question of insolvency adjudicated.—In an action at law to recover a certain amount of money alleged to be due the plaintiff from the defendant, in which action an attachment was duly issued, and levied by the marshal on property of the defendant, the proceedings for the enforcement of plaintiff's demand will be stayed, until the State Insolvency Court shall have adjudicated the question of defendant's alleged insolvency, where it was made to appear that, after the commencement of the action, resident creditors of the defendant instituted insolvency proceedings against him in one of the superior courts of the state, and, in pursuance of the state statute regulating such matters, the Superior Court made an order directing that no creditor whose debt is provable under the Insolvency Act of the state be allowed to prosecute to final judgment any action therefor against the alleged insolvent until the question of his discharge be finally determined, and that any and all such suits and proceedings be stayed until the further order of the said superior court. "The purpose [of the provisions of this section] was to give to the nonresident, who might sue in the federal courts, the same rights, but no more, in respect to attachment, as are enjoyed by the resident creditor, who must sue in the state court." Neufeld v. Neufeld, (1889) 37 Fed. 560. See also Mather v. Nesbit, (1882) 13 Fed. 872; Mayer v. Cahalin, (1879) 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 355.

Plead insolvency proceedings before judgment.—An action was commenced by attachment, in which judgment was rendered sustaining the attachment and awarding plaintiffs the amount of their claim. After the levy of the attachment, and before trial, the defendants, upon their own petition, were adjudicated insolvents and a provisional syndic was appointed. Upon an appearance by the insolvent defendants or the interveners or the syndic, by a proper plea suggesting insolvency, the attachment would have been dissolved, but by the judgment and sale of the property under a decree of foreclosure, the syndic was cut off from asserting a right which he otherwise would have had, and the plaintiff in attachment has a prior right to the proceeds of the foreclosure sale. Muser v. Kern, (1893) 55 Fed. 916.

State Insolvency Act—impairing obligation of contract.—A state statute (Wisconsin) went into effect on April 30, 1897, providing that, upon the making of an assignment by a debtor within ten days after the levy of an attachment, the attachment and levy "shall be dissolved, and the property attached or levied upon shall be turned over to such assignee or receiver;" and the further provisions have the effect, not only of depriving a creditor of his priority under the attachment, but of excluding him from all substantial enforcement of his contract, unless he shall come into the assignment proceedings, accept such shares as the assets may furnish, and become bound by a release of all remaining indebtedness. In an action founded on an indebtedness alleged to have been contracted prior to the time the state statute went into effect, upon which action a writ of attachment was issued and levy made, the court held that the statute is inoperative upon an attachment founded upon a contract entered into before the passage of the Act, because it takes away substantial remedies for enforcement of the contract, without substituting or leaving an adequate remedy in their place. "Burdening the proceeding with new conditions and restrictions, so as to make the remedy hardly worth pursuing," defines an impairment of the obligation of a contract within the meaning of the constitutional prohibition, as well as legislation touching the express terms of the contract. Heath, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Union Oil, etc., Co., (1897) 83 Fed. 776. See Sloane v. Chiniquy, (1884) 22 Fed. 213.

Bond by defendants for release — waiver of right to dissolve.—Defendants in attachment do not, by the execution of a bond for the release to them of the attached property, waive their right to move the discharge of the attachment, where the state (Idaho) law provides that "the defendant may also at any time, either before or after the release of the attached property, apply on motion to the court that the writ of attachment be discharged, on the ground that the same was improperly or irregularly issued." Glidden v. Whittier, (1891) 46 Fed. 437.

Motion not entertained unless on general appearance.—Where the state (Washington) law provides that "the defendant may at any time after he has appeared in the action, either before or after the release of the attached property, or before any attachment shall have been actually levied, apply on motion, upon reasonable notice to the plaintiff, to the court in which the action is brought, or to the judge thereof, that the writ of attachment be dissolved on the ground that the same was improperly or irregularly issued," the court must refuse to entertain a motion to dissolve the attachment until the plaintiff is within the jurisdiction of the court by a general appearance. Feurer v. Stewart, (1897) 82 Fed. 294.

Motion to discharge not heard at chambers.—A motion to discharge attached property, made upon affidavits in support of the motion, with counter-affidavits in opposition to it, will not be heard by a judge at chambers, although the Attachment Act of the state authorizes a state judge to hear in vacation a motion to discharge attached property. Claffin v. Steinberg, (1871) 2 Dill. (U. S.) 324.

Review order discharging — time to file petition in error.—Provisions of the federal law as to the time within which writs of error may be sued out to review a judgment at law, or within which a party desiring to have a judgment reviewed may obtain a supersedeas by giving the requisite bond, cannot be regarded as overborne by the local law of the state prescribing different limits of time. If there is any conflict between the local statute and the federal statute, the latter must prevail. But where a local statute, fixing a time within which a petition in error must be filed to review orders discharging or modifying attachments, has reference to interlocutory orders made during the progress of the trial, and not to a final judgment which has had that effect, there is no such conflict, and the local statute should be followed. Logan v. Goodwin, (C. C. A. 1900) 101 Fed. 654.

Adoption of procedure of state court.—Where a state statute (Massachusetts) provides that no trust, whether implied by law or created or declared by the parties, shall prevent a creditor who has no notice of the trust from attaching the land or from taking it on execution in like manner as if no such trust existed, a plaintiff in an action at law in the Circuit Court for the federal district of that state, who attaches real estate within that state, is governed by such local statute. M'Dermott v. Hayes, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1912) 197 Fed. 129.

Sec. 942. [Special bail required in suits for duties and penalties.]

In all suits or prosecutions for the recovery of duties or pecuniary penalties prescribed by the laws of the United States, commenced in any State where, by the laws thereof, imprisonment for debt shall not have been abolished, the person against whom process is issued shall be held to special bail, subject to the rules which prevail in civil suits in which special bail is required. [R. S.]

Act of March 2, 1790, ch. 22, 1 Stat. L. 676; Act of Feb. 28, 1839, ch. 35, 5 Stat. L. 321; Act of Jan. 14, 1841, ch. 2, 5 Stat. L. 410.

R. S. secs. 659 and 727 are repealed by the Judicial Code. See JUDICIARY.

Imprisonment for debt prohibited in certain cases only.—When the object of the state law is, not to allow imprisonment for debt under certain conditions and restrictions, but to prohibit it in certain cases, the law does not come within the terms employed by Congress to describe the state laws intended to be referred to. If the law permits imprisonment for debt in some cases and prohibits it in others, it is not abolished within the meaning of the Act of Congress. Catherwood v. Gappete, (1854) 2 Curt. (U. S.) 94.

Cases pending when imprisonment for debt abolished.—So far as regards the remedy, the legislature may alter the law, in its discretion; and unless they be excepted, the law operates as well on cases pending as on those which may be commenced subsequently. When, pending an action in which appearance bail was given, the state legislature abolishes imprisonment for debt, the defendants cannot be required to give special bail, and on motion they will be discharged on common bail and an exoneretur entered as to the sureties on the appearance bail. Gray v. Munroe, (1839) 1 McLean (U. S.) 528.

Committed without a mittimus.—This section authorizes a demand of bail, and on failure to give bond the officer may take the person of the defendant and commit him to the state prison without a mittimus, notwithstanding the state law requires a mittimus in civil cases. Palmer v. Allen, (1813) 7 Cranch 550, 3 U. S. (L. ed.) 436.

Penalties recovered by civil action.—In U. S. v. Elliot, (1879) 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,043, the court incidentally said that from this section and sections 732, 919, 1041, 2124, 3087, and 3213, it clearly appears that a civil action is understood to be the usual form for recovering these penalties.

Sec. 943. [When defendant giving bail in one district is committed in another.] When a defendant who has procured bail to respond to the judgment in a suit in any court of the United States in any district is afterward arrested in any other district and is committed to a jail, the use of which had been ceded to the United States for the custody of prisoners, the judge of the court wherein the suit in which the defendant has so procured bail is depending, shall, at the request of the bail, order that such defendant be held in said jail, in the custody of the marshal of the district in which it is. The said marshal, upon the delivery of such order, duly authenticated, shall receive such person into his custody, and thereupon be chargeable for an escape, and shall forthwith make a certificate, under his hand and seal, of such commitment, and transmit the same to the court from which the order issued, and, if required, shall make and deliver to such bail or to his attorney a duplicate thereof. Upon the return of said certificate, the court which made the said order, or any judge thereof, may direct that an exoneretur be entered upon the bail-piece, where special bail shall have been found, or otherwise discharge such bail. [R. S.]

Act of March 2, 1799, ch. 32, 1 Stat. L. 727.

Sec. 944. [Defendant held until judgment in the first suit.] When a defendant is committed by virtue of the order provided in the preceding section, he shall, unless sooner discharged by law, be holden in jail until final judgment is rendered in the suit in which he procured bail as aforesaid, and sixty days thereafter, if such judgment is rendered against him, in order that he may be charged in execution, which may, in such cases, be directed to and served by the marshal in whose custody he is. [R. S.]

Act of March 2, 1799, ch. 32, 1 Stat. L. 727.

Section 945, R. S., relates to the taking of bail by commissioners "of the circuit court for the district," "when required or allowed in any civil cause in any circuit or district court." See JUDICIAL OFFICERS.

Sec. 946. [Calling of bail in Kentucky.] When a bail-bond is given for the appearance of any person to answer in the district or circuit court for the district of Kentucky, the clerk of such court shall call the party at the time he is bound to appear. If the party fails, the clerk shall enter such failure on his minutes, and on said entry judgment may afterward be made of record by the court; but if the party appears, the clerk shall take another bond, with sureties similar to the first, for further appearance at the next succeeding term of the court, and if the party fails to give such other bond and surety, he shall stand committed by order of the clerk until he complies. [R. S.]

Act of May 15, 1862, ch. 71, 12 Stat. L. 387.

Sec. 947. [When clerks may take bail de bene esse.] Recognizances of special bail may be taken de bene esse by the clerks of the circuit and district courts, in the absence or in case of the disability of the judges, in any action depending in either of the said courts, where special bail is demandable. [R. S.]

Act of May 8, 1792, ch. 36, 1 Stat. L. 278.

Sec. 1015. [Bail shall be admitted in cases not capital; by whom.] Bail shall be admitted upon all arrests in criminal cases where the offense is not punishable by death; and in such cases it may be taken by any of the persons authorized by the preceding section [section 1014] to arrest and imprison offenders. [R. S.]

Authority of Supreme Court justice.—Under section 917, R. S., by which the "Supreme Court shall have power to prescribe, from time to time, and in any manner not inconsistent with any law of the United States, the forms of writs and other process," the Supreme Court has power to regulate the manner of proceeding, or "mode of process," in taking bail upon writs of error. Under the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, Congress must have intended, in cases not capital, and therefore bailable of right before conviction, that bail might be taken, upon writ of error, by order of the proper court, justice, or judge, so that any justice of the Supreme Court is authorized to allow a writ of error, to sign the citation, and, as incidental to the exercise of this power, to order the plaintiff in error to be admitted to bail. He might either himself approve the bail bond, or he might order that such a bond should be taken in an amount fixed by him, the form and sufficiency to be passed upon by the court whose judgment was to be reviewed, or by a judge of that court; or he might leave the whole matter of bail to be dealt with by such court or judge. When a justice of the Supreme Court has fixed the amount of bail and referred the matter of the form and sufficiency of the bond to the district judge, a writ of mandamus will lie upon the refusal of the district judge to pass upon the bond tendered on the ground that the justice has no authority to order the plaintiff in error to be admitted to bail and fix the amount of the bail bond. Hudson v. Parker, (1895) 156 U. S. 277, 15 S. Ct. 450, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 424. For the reasons assigned by the district judge for refusing to pass upon the form and sufficiency of the bond, see U. S. v. Hudson, (1894) 65 Fed. 68.

Recognizance acknowledged before clerk.—A recognizance is not void when signed and acknowledged before the clerk of the District Court, where it appears that it was done by order of the judge at the request of the attorney for the accused, for the purpose of securing the speedy release of the accused, and to prevent his detention in prison over night. Hunt v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1894) 61 Fed. 795, affirmed upon petition to rehear, (C. C. A. 1894) 63 Fed. 568.

Bond taken by clerk under direction of the court.—A clerk of court, as such, has no authority to act as a committing magistrate and hold to bail. But when a bond has been signed by the clerk, "signed, sealed, and acknowledged and approved by me," from the facts that the bond was a part of the record, that the court was open on the day the bond was given, that the defendant was present on trial in court, and that there was a mistrial, and the case continued, it will be presumed that the bond was taken under the immediate direction of the court. U. S. v. Evans, (1880) 2 Fed. 147.

Authority of commissioners after indictment.—Under the provisions of section 1014, R. S. (see title CRIMINAL LAW), commissioners have power to cause the arrest of all persons charged with having violated the criminal statutes of the United States, and to order them to be held for trial; and under the provisions of this section "commissioners have the same power to take bail upon an arrest made after an indictment as they have in cases of arrest before indictment." Hoeffner v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1898) 87 Fed. 185. See also U. S. v. Jones, (1890) 134 U. S. 483, 10 S. Ct. 615, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 1007.

Bail during trial.—No provision is made by the statutes of the United States regarding bail during trial, and the defendant may be refused bail in the discretion of the court. United States v. Rice, (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 192 Fed. 720.

Sec. 1016. [Bail may be admitted in capital cases; by whom.] Bail may be admitted upon all arrests in criminal cases where the punishment may be death; but in such cases it shall be taken only by the Supreme Court or a circuit court, or by a justice of the Supreme Court, a circuit judge, or a judge of a district court, who shall exercise their discretion therein, having regard to the nature and circumstance of the offense, and of the evidence, and to the usages of law. [R. S.]

Act of Sept. 24, 1789, ch. 20, 1 Stat. L. 91; Act of March 2, 1793, ch. 22, 1 Stat. L. 334; Act of April 10, 1869, ch. 22, 16 Stat. L. 44.

Treason.—In 1795, a prisoner who had been committed upon the warrant of a district judge, charging him with high treason, was admitted to bail by the Supreme Court upon a writ of habeas corpus. U. S. v. Hamilton, (1795) 3 Dall. 17, 1 U. S. (L. ed.) 490. But in U. S. v. Stewart, (1795) 2 Dall. 343, 1 U. S. (L. ed.) 408, in refusing to admit a prisoner to bail, pending the adjournment of his trial, the court said: "Stewart has no claim upon the legal discretion of the court; and indeed, the circumstances must be very strong, which will at any time, induce us to admit a person to bail, who stands charged with high treason."

A court possessing the power to bail prisoners not committed by itself may award a writ of habeas corpus for the exercise of that power. The Supreme Court granted a motion for a writ in the case of a person committed by a Circuit Court on a charge of treason. Ex p. Bollman, (1807) 4 Cranch 75, 2 U. S. (L. ed.) 554.

Sec. 1017. [Bail in criminal cases removed by writ of error from State courts.] When a writ of error is issued for the revision of the judgment of a State court, in any criminal proceeding where is drawn in question the validity of a statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States, or where any title, right, privilege, or immunity is claimed under the Constitution, or any statute of, or commission held or authority exercised under, the United States, the defendant, if charged with an offense that is bailable by the laws of such State, shall not be released from custody until a final judgment upon such writ, or until a bond, with sufficient sureties, in a reasonable sum, as ordered and approved by the State court, is given; and if the offense is not so bailable, until a final judgment upon the writ of error. [R. S.]

Act of Sept. 24, 1789, ch. 20, 1 Stat. L. 85; Act of July 13, 1866, ch. 184, 14 Stat. L. 172; Act of Feb. 5, 1867, ch. 28, 14 Stat. L. 386.

Sec. 1018. [Surrender of criminals by their bail.] Any party charged with a criminal offense and admitted to bail, may, in vacation, be arrested by his bail, and delivered to the marshal or his deputy, before any judge or other officer having power to commit for such offense; and at the request of such bail, the judge or other officer shall recommit the party so arrested to the custody of the marshal, and indorse on the recognizance, or certified copy thereof, the discharge and exoneratur of such bail; and the party so committed shall therefrom be held in custody until discharged by due course of law. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 8, 1846, ch. 98, 9 Stat. L. 73.

Surrender of defendants to avoid expense of transportation to place of trial.—Upon a claim for fees and expenses incurred by a United States marshal in transporting prisoners, surrendered by the sureties on their bonds, to the place where the court was held, the marshal's account was not allowed where it appeared that the defendants were surrendered on the day preceding the time at which they were required to appear, raising a presumption that the expense of transportation was intended to be avoided on the part of the defendants and cast upon the United States. Allen v. U. S., (1901) 36 Ct. Cl. 44.

Defendants arrested by state authorities.—Where it appeared that the accused had been admitted to bail by a federal court and while out on bail had been arrested and imprisoned by state authorities, a writ of habeas corpus, sued out on the petition of the sureties on the bail bond representing that they desired to surrender the accused under the provisions of this section, was discharged. A conflict of jurisdiction between the federal and state courts cannot be so brought in question. In re Fox, (1892) 51 Fed. 427. See (1853) 6 Op. Atty-Gen. 103.

Parties should see that proper entries of record are made.—Defenses to a writ of scire facias on bail bond should be made to appear and be proven by the record. The only evidence of the discharge of the sureties in bail is the entry by competent authority of the exoneretur on the record or the bail-piece, or a copy of them. It is the duty of the parties or their attorneys to see that the clerk or other ministerial officer shall make the proper entries on the record. A motion will be granted allowing the entry of the exoneretur where it appears that the defendants did all in their power to relieve themselves from further liability as bail for their principal except to see that the discharge and exoneretur were properly entered of record, and the scire facias will be set aside upon payment of costs. U. S. v. Stevens, (1883) 16 Fed. 101.

Sureties to pay fees.—It is the duty of the bail to procure and pay for the certified copy of the recognizance in case they desire to have the exoneration indorsed thereon. The fee of the clerk in such a case is not a proper charge against the United States. U. S. v. Van Duzee, (C. C. A. 1892) 52 Fed. 930.

Arrest by bail.—In Leary v. United States, (1912) 224 U. S. 567, 32 S. Ct. 599, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 889, Ann. Cas. 1913D 1029, the court said: "It is said that the bail contemplated by the Revised Statutes is common-law bail and that nothing should be done to diminish the interest of the bail in producing the body of his principal. But bail no longer is the mundium, although a trace of the old relation exists in the 'right to arrest' under this section."

Sec. 1019. [New bail to be given in certain cases.] When proof is made to any judge of the United States, or other magistrate having authority to commit on criminal charges as aforesaid, that a person previously admitted to bail on any such charge is about to abscond, and that his bail is insufficient, the judge or magistrate shall require such person to give better security, or, for default thereof, cause him to be committed to prison; and an order for his arrest may be indorsed on the former commitment, or a new warrant therefor may be issued, by such judge or magistrate, setting forth the cause thereof. [R. S.]

Act of Aug. 8, 1846, ch. 98, 9 Stat. L. 73.

Sec. 1020. [When penalty of recognizances may be remitted.] When any recognizance in a criminal cause, taken for, or in, or returnable to, any court of the United States, is forfeited by a breach of the condition thereof, such court may, in its discretion, remit the whole or a part of the penalty, whenever it appears to the court that there has been no willful default of the party, and that a trial can, notwithstanding, be had in the cause, and that public justice does not otherwise require the same penalty to be enforced. [R. S.]

Act of Feb. 28, 1839, ch. 36, 5 Stat. L. 322.

Discretion of the court.—The penalty upon forfeiture of the bond may be remitted even where the circumstances are not strictly within the letter of this section, when the defendant appears subsequently during the term, and the remission is conditioned upon the defendant paying the fine imposed upon him and the costs of prosecution. The record is in control of the court during the term, and a forfeiture may be set aside, vacated, or modified. U. S. v. Barger, (1884) 20 Fed. 500.

"The object of a recognizance is not to enrich the treasury, but to combine the administration of criminal justice with the convenience of a person accused, but not proved to be guilty." A forfeited recognizance is not such a debt due to the United States as to be beyond the control of the court. The reasonableness of an excuse for not appearing on the day mentioned in the recognizance "ought to be examined somewhere, and no tribunal can be more competent than that which possesses all the circumstances of the original offense and of the default." U. S. v. Feely, (1813) 1 Brock. (U. S.) 255.

The attorney-general said, (1854) 6 Op. Atty.-Gen. 408, that when the proceedings have reached the final point of return of execution to judgment in scire facias, they have passed beyond the stage at which the court can remit, and the only relief which can be given to the party is by pardon.

Mere technical breach.—The defendant appeared and answered to the indictment, but, during the trial, he departed without leave of the court; but as the offense charged was only a misdemeanor, the trial proceeded and resulted in an acquittal. As there was a mere technical breach of the recognizance, and, for aught that appeared, the bail was innocent, upon application of the surety the default was set aside, on payment of the costs of any suit that had been commenced by the district attorney. U. S. v. Santos, (1862) 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 104.

Wilful default.—Where, on breach of an appearance bond, the court found that the party had made wilful default, and final judgment was rendered at the succeeding term, it was held that the court had no power to remit any portion of the judgment against one of the sureties on his apprehending the principal and delivering him into custody at the term at which final judgment was entered, no answer having been filed to the scire facias issued and served at the previous term. U. S. v. Robinson, (1908) 158 Fed. 410.

Where a defendant on bail in a criminal case in a federal court voluntarily went into another state with knowledge that prior indictments were there pending against him, and he was arrested, tried, convicted, and imprisoned, it was held that his default of the bail bond was wilful and entitled him to no relief under this section. U. S. v. Marrin, (1909) 170 Fed. 476.

Enforced in an aggravated case.—An application by the defendant to the court to remit the penalty incurred by his bail was denied where it appeared that the defendant, while acting as deputy collector of customs, assisted some or all of his codefendants to smuggle wine and whisky into the district, and the evidence showed that the ends of justice required that the penalty should be enforced. The crime committed by the defendant was an aggravated one, because, at the time, he was in the pay and trust of the government as an officer, for the purpose of preventing just such frauds upon the government.

U. S. v. Mercer, (1868) Deady (U. S.) 502.

Principal in custody of state officer.—A motion to remit the penalty of a forfeited recognizance, on the ground that the party was, when called, in the custody of a state officer under a warrant issued out of a court of the state, on a criminal charge, was denied upon the ground that the question could be best determined on the trial of the action which had been brought upon the forfeited recognizance. U. S. v. Stricker, (1874) 12 Blatchf. (U. S.) 389.

Continuance and nol. pros.—change in time of holding court.—The obligation of a bail bond is peremptory, and the penalty accrues on the failure to appear. An application to have the penalty remitted in whole or in part must be addressed to the court which adjudged the forfeiture, and where alone is lodged the discretion to grant relief. Continuances following forfeitures, and a nolle prosequi, do not absolve the sureties from liability. In an action at law upon a forfeited recognizance, only a legal defense can be heard. U. S. v. McGlashen, (1895) 66 Fed. 537.

Upon appeal, the Circuit Court of Appeals, in McGlashan v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1896) 71 Fed. 434, said that it was relieved from passing upon the conclusion reached by the Circuit Court, as, for reasons not presented to the court below, the action on the bond could not be maintained. When an Act of Congress changed the time at which a court should be held in the district to one week later than the time theretofore held and the time specified in the recognizance, the court was convened without authority of law when held at the old term time, and an attempted forfeiture of a recognizance for nonappearance of the principal was void. Under section 573, the appearance of the principal, and all proceedings, were returnable to the term established "next after the return day thereof," by reason of any acts changing the time of holding the court.

Time for application for remission.—An application to a federal court which has entered judgment on a forfeited recognizance in favor of the United States, for a remission of the penalty for which such judgment was rendered, is not a motion to vacate the judgment, and may be entertained after the term at which the judgment was entered. U. S. v. Jenkins, (1909) 176 Fed. 672. See also U. S. v. Traynor, (1909) 173 Fed. 114.

Prosecution in a territorial court.—The provisions of this statute apply where the recognizance is taken in a territorial court in a prosecution by the United States of an offense against it, as the territorial court is then exercising the jurisdiction of a District Court of the United States.

Lane v. Roth, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1912) 195 Fed. 255, wherein the court said: "While in the trial of cases territorial courts are required to conform to the statutes and practice of the territory, the acts of Congress govern the disposition of moneys and obligations of the United States, and we are clearly of the opinion that the territorial statute was not applicable to the discharge of this forfeiture, that section 1020 of the Revised Statutes of the United States governs, and that under it the court had full power and authority to set aside the forfeiture and exonerate the bond, even after the term at which the forfeiture was entered. Even though section 1020 of the Revised Statutes governed, that section did not give the parties an absolute right to have the forfeiture vacated. That was a matter left to the discretion of the court upon a proper showing, and it is elementary that a court may vacate, modify, or set aside any order or judgment during the term that such order or judgment is entered, and in this case it appears that the order releasing the defendant and his bondsmen was set aside and vacated by the court during the term. The judgment of the court forfeiting the bond remains, and was the foundation for the present action. So long as the judgment of forfeiture stood, an action upon the bond could be maintained, and the judgment in this case was properly rendered and is therefore affirmed."

An Act To establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States.

This Act is known as the "Bankruptcy Act," sometimes called the "Nelson Act."

Various national bankruptcy acts.—Bankruptcy laws have been enacted by the United States as follows:

April 4, 1800, 2 Stat. L. 19, repealed December 19, 1803, 2 Stat. L. 248.

August 19, 1841, 5 Stat. L. 440, repealed March 3, 1843, 5 Stat. L. 614.

March 2, 1867, 14 Stat. L. 517, the provisions of which are incorporated into R. S. Title LXI, secs. 4972-5132, materially amended June 22, 1874, 18 Stat. L. 178, repealed June 7, 1878, 20 Stat. L. 99.

Various amendments and additions to the present Act of 1898 have been made in the Act of Feb. 5, 1903, ch. 487, 32 Stat. L. 797, Act of June 15, 1906, ch. 3333, 34 Stat. L. 267, and Act of June 25, 1910, ch. 412, 36 Stat. L. 838, all of which have been incorporated in their designated places in the text of the Bankruptcy Act following herein.

The concluding section in each of the amendatory Acts of 1903 and 1910 above cited excepted pending cases from the operation of those Acts. Those sections are printed herein at the end of this title.

General orders and forms in bankruptcy, promulgated by the United States Supreme Court Nov. 28, 1898, pursuant to authority given in section 30, and originally appearing in 172 U. S. 653, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 1189, are printed herein immediately following section 30.

Constitutionality of the bankruptcy acts.—By the 4th clause of section 8 of article 1 by the Constitution the power is vested in Congress "to establish . . . uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States." The constitutionality of the Bankruptcy Act of 1898 was unanimously affirmed in Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, (1902) 186 U. S. 181, 22 S. Ct. 857, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 1113, against the objection (1) that under its provisions others than traders may be adjudged bankrupts, and that this may be done on voluntary petitions; (2) that the Act is not uniform throughout the United States, the court holding that "the operation of the law is uniform although it may result in certain particulars differently in different states;" (3) that the recognition of the local law in the matter of exemptions, dower, priority of payments and the like is an attempt by Congress unlawfully to delegate its legislative power; and (4) that as to voluntary proceedings the Act is in violation of the Fifth Amendment in that it deprives creditors of their property without due process of law in failing to provide for notice.

The uniformity which the Constitution requires of a federal bankruptcy act relates to the law itself, and not to its results upon the varying rights of debtor and creditor under the laws of the several states. It has no bearing on the right of dower. That is a matter exclusively for state definition. Thomas v. Woods, (1909) 173 Fed. 585, 97 C. C. A. 535, 19 Ann. Cas. 1080, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1180.

"Congress gets its power to legislate on the subject of bankruptcy from section 8 of article 1 of the Constitution, which empowers it to pass 'uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States.' It has been held, correctly we think, that the 'subject of bankruptcies' includes the distribution of the property of the fraudulent or insolvent debtor among his creditors, and the discharge of the debtor from his contracts and legal liabilities, as well as all the intermediate and incidental matters tending to the accomplishment or promotion of these two principal ends." Pope v. Title Guaranty & Surety Co., (1913) 152 Wis. 611, 140 N. W. 348.

Philologically and historically, a bankrupt is but a broken bank or bench. Such bank or bench, or "counter" as we would in this day designate it, was the bench over which the money lender, trader, or merchant transacted his business; and it was broken for or by him as an evidence of the discontinuance of his business. At English law at the time of the adoption of our Constitution, the meaning of the word was usually limited to persons engaged in trade, in one form or another, who did certain acts affording evidence either of an inability to pay their debts, or of an intention to avoid such payment. Other persons not engaged in trade, and who showed a like disposition to avoid, or a like inability to meet, their obligations to their creditors, were ordinarily called insolvents.

By definition in the last federal Bankruptcy Act, insolvents, as well as bankrupts proper, are included, and the only persons exempt from the operation of the present national law are "wage-earners" and "persons engaged chiefly in farming or tillage of the soil." Whether or not this is an extension of the common-law definition of a bankrupt, and is justifiable, is not a matter of present interest. A bankrupt, then, being as defined a person who by his acts and conduct affords evidence of his inability to pay, or his intention to avoid payment of, his debts, it is quite within the scope of the Bankruptcy Act to define the acts or omissions of the debtor which shall afford prima facie or conclusive evidence of bankruptcy. This the national Bankrupt Act has done. Continental Building & Loan Ass'n v. Superior Court, (1912) 163 Cal. 579, 126 Pac. 476.

The constitutionality of the Bankruptcy Act of 1841 was upheld by Mr. Justice Catron in Re Klein, Fed. Cas. No. 7,865, reported in a note to Nelson v. Carland, (1843) 1 How. 265, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 126. See also Kunzler v. Kohans, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 317. And for similar views of the Bankruptcy Act of 1867, see In re Reiman, (1874) 7 Ben. 455, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,673; In re Silverman, (1871) 1 Sawy. 410, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 12,865; In re California, etc., R. Co., (1874) 3 Sawy. 240, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,315; and likewise as to the Acts of 1841 and of 1867, In re Reynolds, (1867) 8 R. I. 485, 5 Am. Rep. 615.

Suspension of state insolvency laws — In general.—A constitutional federal bankruptcy law suspends or supersedes all state insolvency laws relative to persons or acts declared by the Bankruptcy Act to be subjects of bankruptcy. Sturges v. Crowninshield, (1819) 4 Wheat. 122, 4 U. S. (L. ed.) 529; Ogden v. Saunders, (1827) 12 Wheat. 213, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 606; In re Watts, (1903) 190 U. S. 1, 23 S. Ct. 718, 47 U. S. "The proposition that the state bankruptcy law is suspended by the enactment of the uniform system of national bankruptcy is as clear upon authority as it must inevitably be by the logic of the supremacy of national law." Speer, J., in In re Macon Sash, etc., Co., (1901) 112 Fed. 329.

"Any doubt which might otherwise exist upon the subject is removed by the necessary implication arising from the provision contained in section 70 of the federal [bankruptcy] act that proceedings commenced under state insolvency laws before its passage should not be affected by it. Whenever the federal door is open, the state door is automatically shut." Rockville Nat. Bank v. Latham, (1914) 88 Conn. 70, 89 Atl. 1117.

The state insolvency law is suspended only as to those who can, without their consent, be made subject to the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act. State Nat. Bank of Denison v. Syndicate Co., (1910) 178 Fed. 359; R. H. Herron Co. v. Superior Court, (1902) 136 Cal. 279, 68 Pac. 814, 89 A. S. R. 124; Keystone Driller Co. v. Superior Court, (1903) 138 Cal. 738, 72 Pac. 398; Dille v. People, (1905) 118 Ill. App. 426; Old Town Bank v. McCormick, (1903) 96 Md. 341, 53 Atl. 934, 94 A. S. R. 577, 60 L. R. A. 577; Rittenhouse's Estate, (1906) 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 468; Miller v. Jackson, (1907) 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 31; Hoover v. Ober, (1910) 42 Pa. Super. Ct. 308; Landis Mach. Co. v. Cooper, (1913) 53 Pa. Super. Ct. 416; Lace v. Smith, (1912) 34 R. I. 1, 82 Atl. 268, Ann. Cas. 1913E 945.

As to who may be made involuntary bankrupts see infra, section 4b. But in Littlefield v. Gay, (1902) 96 Me. 422, 52 Atl. 925, the state insolvent law was held to be superseded by the federal Bankruptcy Act, as to a person who could have gone into bankruptcy voluntarily, but could not have been made an involuntary bankrupt.

It is only where the Bankruptcy Law covers and supplies that which is undertaken to be disposed of by the state law that the latter must give way. Johnson v. Crawford, (1907) 154 Fed. 761.

A person is a bankrupt, within the meaning of the federal statute, only when he has been guilty of one or another of the forbidden acts whose commission stamps him as a bankrupt. But it does not at all follow that the state, for good reasons of its own, may not prevent a person or corporation from conducting business, and in so preventing it take control of its affairs, terminate its business, and pay its creditors for acts entirely foreign to and absolutely without the contemplation of bankruptcy. And if the state does this thing for acts not within the contemplation of the Bankruptcy Law, it is immaterial that the procedure which it adopts for the payment of creditors is similar to or identical with the procedure adopted in case of bankruptcy. Continental Building & Loan Ass'n v. Superior Court, (1913) 163 Cal. 579, 126 Pac. 476.

"What constitutes an insolvency law?" The elements of an insolvency law are insolvency, surrender of property, its administration by a receiver or trustee, distribution of the assets among the creditors, and a provision for priorities or other matters not permissible in the absence of such statute. A provision for the discharge of the debtor from the unpaid balances of his debts is not essential to make it an insolvency law. In re Curtis, (1899) 91 Fed. 737; In re F. A. Hall Co., (1903) 121 Fed. 992; In re Salmon, (1906) 143 Fed. 395; Harbaugh v. Costello, (1900) 184 Ill. 110, 56 N. E. 363, 75 A. S. R. 147." In re Weedman Stave Co., (1912) 199 Fed. 948.

"A state statute authorizing a general assignment is an insolvent law when it permits a person of any class voluntarily to take advantage of its provisions by transferring his property in trust for the benefit of his creditors, and provides that, upon a due administration of his estate and a compliance with the requirements of the statute regulating the proceedings, he is thereby discharged from all liabilities on account of his debts which had been incurred at the time of making the general assignment." Pelton v. Sheridan, (1914) 74 Ore. 176, 144 Pac. 410.

A proceeding in aid of execution, with the object of reaching the property of a judgment debtor which he fraudulently conceals, not designed to effect the distribution of the debtor's assets among his creditors, is not an insolvent law. Ex p. Crawford, (1907) 154 Fed. 769.

Assignments for benefit of creditors.—If a state statute regulating assignments for creditors is not an insolvency law in the proper sense of the term, it is not suspended by the Bankruptcy Act. Mayer v. Hellman, (1875) 91 U. S. 496, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 377; In re Sievers, (1899) 91

Fed. 366, affirmed (1899) 92 Fed. 325, 34 C. C. A. 372; In re Scholtz, (1901) 104 Fed. 834; In re Farrell, (1910) 176 Fed. 505; Downer v. Porter, (1903) 116 Ky. 422, 76 S. W. 135; Hilliard v. Burlington Shoe Co., (1903) 76 Vt. 57, 56 Atl. 283; Binder v. McDonald, (1900) 106 Wis. 332, 82 N. W. 156.

But if such statute is to be regarded as an insolvency law, its operation is suspended by the Bankruptcy Act. In re Curtis, (1899) 91 Fed. 737, affirmed (1899) 94 Fed. 630; In re Smith, (1899) 92 Fed. 135; Baxter County Bank v. Copeland, (1914) 114 Ark. 316, 169 S. W. 1180; Rockville Nat. Bank v. Latham, (1914) 88 Conn. 70, 89 Atl. 1117; Harbaugh v. Costello, (1900) 184 Ill. 110, 56 N. E. 363, 75 A. S. R. 147; Pelton v. Sheridan, (1914) 74 Ore. 176, 144 Pac. 410; Duryea v. Muse, (1903) 117 Wis. 399, 94 N. W. 365.

The Bankruptcy Court, in deciding upon the effect of the passing of a federal Bankruptcy Act upon the operation of a state statute which regulates the administration and distribution of estates under general assignments for the benefit of creditors, will be governed by the decision of the state Supreme Court that such statute is an insolvency act. In re Curtis, (1899) 91 Fed. 737, affirmed (C. C. A. 1899) 94 Fed. 630. See also In re Weedman Stave Co., (1912) 199 Fed. 948.

A common-law assignment for the benefit of creditors, not attacked by a proceeding under the Bankruptcy Law, is not affected by the latter. Boese v. King, (1883) 108 U. S. 379, 2 S. Ct. 765, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 760; Pogue v. Rowe, (1908) 236 Ill. 157, 86 N. E. 207; Thompson v. Shaw, (1908) 104 Me. 85, 71 Atl. 370; Armour Packing Co. v. Brown, (1899) 76 Minn. 465, 79 N. W. 522; Patty-Joiner, etc., Co. v. Cummins, (1900) 93 Tex. 598, 57 S. W. 566.

State acts for winding up corporations. If a state statute providing for the winding up of a corporation is an insolvency law its operation is suspended by the federal Bankruptcy Act. In re Storck Lumber Co., (D. C. Md. 1902) 114 Fed. 361; Moody v. Port Clyde Development Co., (1907) 102 Me. 365, 66 Atl. 967; In re Salmon, (1906) 143 Fed. 395. But in State v. Superior Court, (1899) 20 Wash. 545, 56 Pac. 35, 45 L. R. A. 177, it was held upon careful consideration that such proceedings are valid so long as no steps are taken to have the corporation adjudicated bankrupt under the national Bankruptcy Act.

The Bankruptcy Act "does not necessarily deprive a state court of jurisdiction conferred by a state law to dissolve a local corporation even though the reason for exercising such jurisdiction be the insolvency of the corporation. Murphy v. Peniman, (1907) 105 Md. 452, 66 Atl. 282.

121 A. S. R. 583; Singer v. National Bedstead Mfg. Co., (1903) 65 N. J. Eq. 290, 55 Atl. 868. Where, however, bankruptcy proceedings are reasonably instituted, the winding-up proceedings in the state court are superseded." Lyon v. Russell, (1914) 41 App. Cas. (D. C.) 554. To the proposition first above stated see also Continental Building, etc., Ass'n v. Superior Court, (1912) 163 Cal. 579, 126 Pac. 476.

Attachment laws of the states are not abrogated by the national Bankruptcy Act. In re Ogles, (1899) 93 Fed. 426.

General purposes of the Act.—A leading purpose of the Act is to secure an equality of distribution of the assets of the bankrupt among his creditors. Wood v. A. Wilbert's Sons Shingle, etc., Co., (1912) 226 U. S. 384, 33 S. Ct. 125, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 264; Clarke v. Rogers, (1913) 228 U. S. 534, 33 S. Ct. 587, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 953; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Sexton, (1913) 228 U. S. 634, 33 S. Ct. 725, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 998; In re Blount, (1906) 142 Fed. 263; Hewitt v. Boston Straw Board Co., 214 Mass. 260, 101 N. E. 424; Utah Ass'n of Creditmen v. Boyle Furniture Co., 43 Utah 523, 136 Pac. 572.

"The intent of the bankruptcy law is to make an equal distribution of the assets of insolvent persons among their creditors and to prevent preferences and favoritism." Whitwell v. Wright, (1909) 115 N. Y. S. 48.

"It is obviously one of the purposes of the bankrupt law that there should be a speedy disposition of the bankrupt's assets. This is only second in importance to securing equality of distribution." Bailey v. Glover, (1874) 21 Wall. 342, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 636, reaffirmed in Wiswall v. Campbell, (1876) 93 U. S. 347, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 923.

"The determination of the status of the honest and unfortunate debtor by his liberation from incumbrance on future exertion is matter of public concern," and one of the purposes of the Act. Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, (1902) 186 U. S. 181, 22 S. Ct. 857, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 1113.

"It is the twofold purpose of the bankruptcy act to convert the estate of the bankrupt into cash and distribute it among creditors, and then to give the bankrupt a fresh start with such exemptions and rights as the statute left untouched." Burlingham v. Crouse, (1913) 228 U. S. 459, 33 S. Ct. 564, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 920, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 148. To the same point see 3 R. C. L. 164.

"The purpose of the bankrupt act . . . was twofold: First, the relief of the bankrupt from his debts; and, second, an equal distribution of his assets among his creditors. The several provisions of the act must be read in the light of these two objects." Webb v. Lynchburg Shoe Co., (1908) 107 Va. 807, 60 S. E. 130.

In Hardie v. Swafford Bros. Dry Goods Co., (1908) 165 Fed. 588, 91 C. C. A. 426,

20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 785, overruling a contention that the provisions of the law relating to the discharge of bankrupts should be construed against the bankrupt, and all implications and doubts should be resolved against him, Pardee, J., said: "Originally, in bankrupt laws, the discharge of the bankrupt may have been incidental, and the main purpose the equal distribution of his goods among creditors; but to say it now, and of the present law, we must shut our eyes to the actual practice in our courts. In nearly all and every voluntary bankruptcy brought under the present law the administration or distribution of the bankrupt's property has been practically concluded before filing petition, and the sole object of the petitioner is to be relieved from his debts, and in number the voluntary cases are about four to one of the involuntary. See Report, Dept. of Justice, 1907. And the same may be said of the voluntary cases under the Act of March 2, 1867, c. 176, 14 Stat. 517, which was passed mainly to relieve the unfortunate debtors ruined by and through the vicissitudes of the great civil war. For these considerations, we are disposed to deny that in the present bankruptcy law the discharge of the honest debtor is a mere incident which could have been omitted without impairing its symmetry and efficiency; and, on the contrary, to assert that the release of the honest, unfortunate, and insolvent debtor from the burden of his debts and restore him to business activity, in the interest of his family and the general public, is one of the main, if not the most important, objects of the law."

"The business of such an act is, so far as may be, to preserve, not to upset, existing relations." For instance, "the fact remains as true as ever that partnership debts are debts of the members of the firm, and that the individual liability of the members is not collateral, like that of a surety, but primary and direct, whatever priorities there may be in the marshaling of assets." Francis v. McNeal, (1913) 228 U. S. 695, 33 S. Ct. 701, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 1029.

Interpretation of Act.—General purposes of Act controlling.—The Act should be construed in the light of the general purposes of the law (Burlingham v. Crouse, (1913) 228 U. S. 459, 33 S. Ct. 564, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 676), stated supra in this note, and technical constructions conflicting with those purposes will not be applied. 3 R. C. L. 170; Zavelo v. Reeves, (1913) 227 U. S. 625, 33 S. Ct. 365, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 676; Burlingham v. Crouse, (1913) 228 U. S. 459, 33 S. Ct. 564, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 920, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 148; Clarke v. Rogers, (1913) 228 U. S. 534, 33 S. Ct. 587, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 953; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Sexton, (1913) 228 U. S. 634, 33 S. Ct. 725, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 998.

The national Bankruptcy Act is remedial and should be interpreted reasonably and according to a fair import of its terms, with a view to effect its object and to promote justice. Wetmore v. Markoe, (1904) 196 U. S. 68, 25 S. Ct. 172, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 390, 2 Ann. Cas. 265; Blake v. Francis-Valentine Co., (1898) 89 Fed. 691; Norcross v. Nathan, (1900) 99 Fed. 414; Southern L. & T. Co. v. Benbow, (1899) 96 Fed. 514.

It is the purpose of the Bankrupt Act to convert the assets of the bankrupt into cash for distribution among creditors, and then to relieve the honest debtor from the weight of oppressive indebtedness, and permit him to start afresh free from the obligations and responsibilities consequent upon business misfortunes. And nothing is better settled than that statutes should be sensibly construed with a view to effectuating the legislative intent. Williams v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (1915) 236 U. S. 549, 35 S. Ct. 289, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 713. See also Kreitlein v. Ferger, (1915) 238 U. S. 21, 34, 35 S. Ct. 685, 690, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1184, 1189.

On the other hand, "the courts may not change what Congress did on the theory that the general purpose of Congress will be more nearly carried out by construing the Act to mean something which Congress was unwilling to say. Under the Act of 1867, the courts were asked to put a rather strained interpretation upon some of its language in order to carry out the supposed intent of Congress to secure equality of distribution in all cases of insolvency." In re Truitt, (D. C. Md. 1913) 203 Fed. 550, 557.

Comparison with earlier bankruptcy acts.—The courts have had frequent occasion, in construing the present Act, to resort to a comparison of its provisions with those of earlier bankruptcy acts, and a consideration of the judicial construction placed thereon. 3 R. C. L. 171. Where provisions in the present Act and in an earlier bankruptcy act are substantially identical they should ordinarily receive the same construction. Babbitt v. Dutcher, (1910) 216 U. S. 102, 30 S. Ct. 372, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 402, 17 Ann. Cas. 969.

On the other hand, a wide departure in the language of the present Act from that in a former act may be persuasive that a different construction is required. Wilson v. Nelson, (1901) 183 U. S. 191, 22 S. Ct. 74, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 147; New Jersey v. Anderson, (1906) 203 U. S. 483, 27 S. Ct. 137, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 284. For "when the purpose of a prior law is continued, usually its words are, and an omission of the words implies an omission of the purpose." Pirie v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1901) 182 U. S. 438, 21 S. Ct. 906, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1171.

Legislative policy.—The rule that legislative policy clearly deducible from the consistent legislation of Congress is a legitimate factor in determining the meaning of subsequent acts open to construction has been exemplified in a multitude of federal cases. Article Statutes and Statutory Construction, ante, p. 75. Thus it has always been the policy of Congress both in general legislation and in bankruptcy acts to recognize and give effect to the state exemption laws, and an intention to violate that rule in the present Bankruptcy Act should be made to appear by clear and unmistakable language. Holden v. Stratton, (1903) 191 U. S. 115, 24 S. Ct. 45, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 116; Steele v. Buel, (1900) 104 Fed. 963, 44 C. C. A. 287.

Legislative history of Act.—In a case where the court declined to give vital significance to the fact that certain words in a bill amending the Bankruptcy Act as the bill passed the House, were dropped in the Senate, the court said: "It is only in extremely doubtful matters of interpretation that the legislative history of an act of Congress becomes important." Loeser v. Savings Deposit Bank, etc., Co., (1906) 148 Fed. 975, 78 C. C. A. 597, 18 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1233. And see in general on that point the article Statutes and Statutory Construction, ante, p. 64.

The opinions of individual legislators as to the object and effect of the statute are of little or no weight on the question of its construction. Carter v. Hobbs, (1899) 92 Fed. 595. And see article Statutes and Statutory Construction, ante, p. 62.

Section headings.—"This act has the somewhat unusual feature of inserting at the head of each section a separate title indicating the subject matter." Bardes v. Hawarden First Nat. Bank, (1900) 178 U. S. 524, 20 S. Ct. 1000, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1175.

The titles given by Congress to the various sections of the Act are frequently resorted to for the purpose of determining the scope of the provisions and their relation to other portions of the Act. Holden v. Stratton, (1905) 198 U. S. 202, 25 S. Ct. 656, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 1018; Shropshire v. Bush, (1907) 204 U. S. 186, 27 S. Ct. 178, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 436.

Provisos and exceptions.—Many provisos and exceptions appear in the Bankruptcy Act. The usual and primary office of a proviso is to limit generalities and exclude from the scope of the statute that which would otherwise be within its terms. Burlingham v. Crouse, (1913) 228 U. S. 459, 33 S. Ct. 564, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 920, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 148.

But an enactment in the form of a proviso may sometimes mean simply additional legislation. Article Statutes and Statutory Construction, ante, p. 155; Burlingham v. Crouse, (1913) 228 U. S. 459, 33 S. Ct. 564, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 920, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 148.

A proviso intended to protect existing rights ought not to be given an interpretation which would destroy any part of those rights. Thomas v. Woods, (1909) 173 Fed. 585, 97 C. C. A. 535, 19 Ann. Cas. 1080, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1180.

It is a maxim of interpretation that an exception in a statute amounts to an affirmation of the application of its provisions to all other cases not excepted. See article Statutes and Statutory Construction, ante, p. 156. So where general words in a section of the Bankruptcy Act are followed by specified exceptions, these special exceptions exclude all other exceptions. Crawford v. Burke, (1904) 195 U. S. 176, 25 S. Ct. 9, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 147; Wood v. A. Wilbert's Sons Shingle, etc., Co., (1912) 226 U. S. 384, 33 S. Ct. 125, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 264.

Declarations in the official forms promulgated by the Supreme Court have been referred to by that court as indicating the construction it has adopted of provisions of the Act for which the forms are made. Zavelo v. Reeves, (1913) 227 U. S. 625, 33 S. Ct. 365, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 676, Ann. Cas. 1914D 664.

Amendments of the Bankruptcy Act which are embodied in one enactment are presumed not to be in conflict but to be harmonious with each other, and a construction will be adopted, if possible, which reconciles apparent disagreements. Wood v. A. Wilbert's Sons Shingle, etc., Co., (1912) 226 U. S. 384, 33 S. Ct. 125, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 264.

"When language is clear and unambiguous it must be held to mean what it plainly expresses and no room is left for construction." Swarts v. Siegel, (C. C. A. 1902) 117 Fed. 13.

Deliberate dictum of federal Supreme Court.—Where the federal Supreme Court deliberately expresses its preference for a particular construction of a provision, the mere fact that it expressly refrains from deciding the point will not prevent the court in a later case from regarding the dictum as an authoritative deliverance if it was evidently not inconsiderately uttered nor inconsequent to the considerations involved. Hiscock v. Mertens, (1907) 205 U. S. 202, 27 S. Ct. 488, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 771. See also Brown v. United Button Co., (1906) 149 Fed. 48, 79 C. C. A. 70, 9 Ann. Cas. 445, 8 L. R. A. (N. S.) 961.

Stare decisis.—"Of course the construction of the Bankruptcy Act rests with the federal courts, and at last with the Supreme Court of the United States. If there were no difference of opinion among those courts, or indeed if the Supreme Court had finally spoken on the subject, we should, of course, be guided by such utterance. But where variant views are entertained, it is the duty of this court to decide for itself. When it has done so once upon full consideration, at least the rule of stare decisis would suggest the duty and certainly the advisability of adhering to the rule laid down." Stuart v. Farmers' Bank of Cuba City, (1908) 137 Wis. 66, 75, 117 N. W. 820, 16 Ann. Cas. 821, 824.

CHAPTER ONE.

DEFINITIONS.

SECTION 1. MEANING OF WORDS AND PHRASES.—a The words and phrases used in this act and in proceedings pursuant hereto shall, unless the same be inconsistent with the context, be construed as follows: [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

"It will be noted that some of these definitions in section 1 read 'shall mean,' while others read 'shall include.' It was not intended that definitions of words used in the act which read 'shall include' should exclude other meanings or definitions of the word, or limit the ordinary and well-understood meanings. It was intended, as the words used plainly indicate, to make sure that they would be held to include what is expressed." In re Harper, (1910) 175 Fed. 412, 423.

(1) [Person against whom petition has been filed.] "A person against whom a petition has been filed" shall include a person who has filed a voluntary petition; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

(2) [Adjudication.] "adjudication" shall mean the date of the entry of a decree that the defendant, in a bankruptcy proceeding, is a bankrupt, or if such decree is appealed from, then the date when such decree is finally confirmed; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

(3) [Appellate courts.] "appellate courts" shall include the circuit courts of appeals of the United States, the supreme courts of the Territories, and the Supreme Court of the United States; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

(4) [Bankrupt.] "bankrupt" shall include a person against whom an involuntary petition or an application to set a composition aside or to revoke a discharge has been filed, or who has filed a voluntary petition, or who has been adjudged a bankrupt; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

(5) [Clerk.] "clerk" shall mean the clerk of a court of bankruptcy; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

(6) [Corporations.] "corporations" shall mean all bodies having any of the powers and privileges of private corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships, and shall include limited or other partnership associations organized under laws making the capital subscribed alone responsible for the debts of the association; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

(7) [Court.] "court" shall mean the court of bankruptcy in which the proceedings are pending, and may include the referee; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

(8) [Courts of bankruptcy.] "courts of bankruptcy" shall include the district courts of the United States and of the Territories, the supreme court of the District of Columbia, and the United States court of the Indian Territory, and of Alaska; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

The specific designation of the courts of bankruptcy and the investment of them with jurisdiction will be found in chapter II, section 2.

(9) [Creditor.] "creditor" shall include anyone who owns a demand or claim provable in bankruptcy, and may include his duly authorized agent, attorney, or proxy; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

Creditor.—When no restriction is declared by the context, the general terms of the definition of "creditor" as here given must apply; and throughout the Act, whenever the word is used in a narrow sense, apt language is employed to indicate such intention, as in sections 56, 65, and 12. In re Walker, (1899) 96 Fed. 550.

Stockholders as such are not "creditors" of a corporation whose stock they own. In re Eureka Anthracite Coal Co., (W. D. Ark. 1912) 197 Fed. 216.

Attorney.—The word "attorney" in this section includes the attorney-at-law, although he has no power to vote, except upon additional authority. In re Henschel, (1901) 109 Fed. 861.

An acknowledgment of a power of attorney before a foreign consul is sufficient proof of the creditor's claim before the referee, General Order in Bankruptcy No. 21, par. 5, providing that "the execution of any letter of attorney to represent a creditor . . . may be proved or acknowledged before a referee or a United States commissioner, or a notary public," not contemplating such a case, apparently, but not invalidating such acknowledgment. In re Sugeneheimer, (1899) 91 Fed. 744.

(10) [Date of bankruptcy — time of bankruptcy — commencement of proceedings — bankruptcy.] "date of bankruptcy," or "time of bankruptcy," or "commencement of proceedings," or "bankruptcy," with reference to time, shall mean the date when the petition was filed; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

(11) [Debt.] "debt" shall include any debt, demand, or claim provable in bankruptcy; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

Strict legal meaning.—The word "debt" in the Bankrupt Law is not restricted to its strict legal meaning, viz., "a sum of money due by certain and express agreement." In re Fife, (1901) 109 Fed. 880.

(12) [Discharge.] "discharge" shall mean the release of a bankrupt from all of his debts which are provable in bankruptcy, except such as are excepted by this act; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

(13) [Document.] "document" shall include any book, deed, or instrument in writing; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

(14) [Holiday.] "holiday" shall include Christmas, the Fourth of July, the Twenty-second of February, and any day appointed by the President of the United States or the Congress of the United States as a holiday or as a day of public fasting or thanksgiving; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

(15) [When person deemed insolvent.] a person shall be deemed insolvent within the provisions of this act whenever the aggregate of his property, exclusive of any property which he may have conveyed, transferred, concealed, or removed, or permitted to be concealed or removed, with intent to defraud, hinder, or delay his creditors, shall not, at a fair valuation, be sufficient in amount to pay his debts; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

Question of insolvency, in general.—As to partnership insolvency, see the annotation under section 5a.

This definition does not govern in determining whether a voluntary conveyance is fraudulent, so that the property may be recovered by the trustee under section 70e; the question in such a case is to be decided according to the state law. Underleak v. Scott, (1912) 117 Minn. 136, 134 N. W. 731.

*The definition of insolvency provided by section 1a (15) must be strictly adhered to in determining whether an alleged bankrupt is solvent or otherwise. In re Rome Planing-Mill Co., (N. D. N. Post-dated check and renewal.—The fact that a merchant, seven months before filing his bankruptcy petition, sent a creditor a post-dated check and a note, which he afterward renewed and paid a little less than four months before the filing of the petition, for the balance, does not prove insolvency within section 1a (15) of the Act. In re Chappell, (1901) 113 Fed. 545.

To say that a man is in failing circumstances or unable to pay all his debts in full is a different thing from saying that his property taken at a fair valuation is not sufficient in amount to pay his debts, as a man's property at a fair valuation, which means the market value, may be sufficient to pay his debts, but he may not be able to realize at once the amount of the valuation. Martin v. Bigelow (Supm. Ct. Spec. T. 1901) 36 Misc. 298, 73 N. Y. S. 443.

Permitting judgment and its satisfaction is not proof that the debtor had no other property sufficient to pay his other debts, and that he was therefore insolvent. Levor v. Seiter, (Supm. Ct. Spec. T. 1901) 34 Misc. 382, 69 N. Y. S. 987.

There is a presumption that a debtor knows his financial condition as to solvency, but this is a disputable presumption. In re Gilbert, (1902) 112 Fed. 951.

Corporation unable to pay debts—evidence.—Upon the question of the insolvency of a corporation, evidence of its inability to pay its debts, of the suspension of its business, and of negotiations looking to the granting by the creditors of permission to the corporation to carry on future operations, is material and competent, and, in the absence of other evidence, is conclusive of insolvency; and evidence of insolvency at the admitted time justifies the inference of insolvency for a prior period. In re Elmira Steel Co., (1901) 109 Fed. 456

On the general question of insolvency, see also In re Bloch, (C. C. A. 1901) 109 Fed. 790, where it was held that evidence was improperly rejected at the trial; Hewitt v. Boston Straw Board Co., (1913) 214 Mass. 260, 101 N. E. 424; Gill v. Eli-Norris Safe Co., (1913) 170 Mo. App. 478, 156 S. W. 811, and In re Rome Planing-Mill Co., (1900) 99 Fed. 937, where, upon the proof, insolvency was established; and In re Gilbert, (1902) 112 Fed. 951, where it was not.

Fair valuation.—Insolvency, under the definition contained in this section, turns on what is a fair valuation of the property. In re Gilbert, (D. C. Ore. 1902) 112 Fed. 951.

It is impossible to say that a party is insolvent so long as the evidence leaves the fair value of his property an unanswered speculative question. Jump v. Bernier, (1915) 221 Mass. 241, 108 N. E. 1027.

Time of valuation.—The property should be taken at a fair valuation in determining the question of solvency, not at the amount it afterward brings when sold at auction by a trustee in bankruptcy. Rutland County Nat. Bank v. Graves, (D. C. Vt. 1907) 156 Fed. 168, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446.

"Fair valuation" means a value that can be made promptly effective by the owner of property to pay his debts. Such a value excludes, on the one hand, the sacrifice price that would result from an execution or foreclosure sale; and, on the other hand, the retail price that could be realized in the slow process of trade. Stern v. Paper, (D. C. N. D. 1910) 183 Fed. 228.

"Fair valuation" has been held to be the present market value, and not the amount which might be realized from a forced sale of the property. Ziegler v. Thayer, (1912) 34 R. I. 288, 83 Atl. 266. It means the value which the debtor might realize thereon if permitted to continue in business. But in considering the actual value of commercial paper, accounts, etc., the actual value, not the face of the accounts, must be taken as the true value. Arnold v. Knapp, (W. Va. 1915) 84 S. E. 895.

"Fair valuation" means such a price as a capable and diligent business man could presently obtain for the property after conferring with those accustomed to buy such property. Such a value will depend upon many circumstances, such as the age and condition of the stock, the season of the year, and the state of trade. Stern v. Paper, (D. C. N. D. 1910) 183 Fed. 228.

"The valuation for the test of solvency or insolvency under the issue made must relate to the conditions affecting the hotel as a going concern when the mortgage was given, and not at its value as dead property after bankruptcy intervened." In re Klein, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1912) 197 Fed. 241.

In Empire State Trust Co. v. William F. Fisher Co., (1904) 67 N. J. Eq. 88, 57 Atl. 502, the following rule is given: "The authorities seem to hold the reasonable rule that the assets of the debtor must . . . be valued as those of a going concern, if that be the actual condition, and that subsequent actual insolvency is not the true and only test."

The test of a "fair valuation" of property is its market value at the time legal proceedings were taken, where that can be fairly established, and not its value as it may have been affected by such proceedings. In re Hines, (D. C. Ore. 1906) 144 Fed. 142, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295.

The fair "market value" of a corporation's assets, for the purpose of determining its solvency when it commits an alleged act of bankruptcy, is the value which the corporation might have realized on them for itself. In re Marine Iron Works, (E. D. N. Y. 1908) 159 Fed. 753, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 390.

Charge to jury as to fair valuation.—The definition of insolvency in this section must be strictly adhered to, and a charge by the court to a jury that solvency means ability to realize sufficient to pay the liabilities, and that "a fair valuation" is what can be at once realized for the property, the debtor's situation and the number and amount of the obligations, with the time each becomes due, being considered, is "misleading, and calculated to place the debtor in a harder situation than was intended by the statute." Duncan v. Landis, (C. C. A. 1901) 106 Fed. 839.

Assets, in general—Exempt property included.—In determining the issue as to the solvency or insolvency of an alleged bankrupt, all of the property which he owns is to be reckoned in computing the amount of his assets, except such as he may have transferred or concealed in fraud of creditors, but not excluding property which is exempt from execution by the laws of the state. Plymouth Cordage Co. v. Smith, (1907) 18 Okla. 249, 90 Pac. 418, 11 Ann. Cas. 445 and note; In re Baumann, (W. D. Tenn. 1899) 96 Fed. 946, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 196; In re Hines, (D. C. Ore. 1906) 144 Fed. 142, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295; In re Crenshaw, (S. D. Ala. 1907) 156 Fed. 638, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502; Louisiana Nat. Life Assur. Society v. Segen, (E. D. La. 1912) 196 Fed. 903.

Preferences considered.—Where the alleged act of bankruptcy consists in granting or permitting a preference to a creditor, the property thus transferred is to be considered in determining the question of solvency at that time. In re Doscher, (E. D. N. Y. 1902) 120 Fed. 408, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 547; In re Hines, (D. C. Ore. 1906) 144 Fed. 142, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295; Acme Food Co. v. Meier, (6th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 77, 82 C. C. A. 208, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 550.

Fraudulent transfers excluded.—Property transferred in fraud of creditors is not to be considered in determining the solvency of an alleged bankrupt. In re Shoemith, (7th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 684, 68 C. C. A. 322, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 645; Acme Food Co. v. Meier, (6th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 74, 82 C. C. A. 208, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 550; In re Crenshaw, (S. D. Ala. 1907) 156 Fed. 638, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502.

Contingent assets.—Assets must have a present value, and be salable, in order to be considered in determining the question of the solvency of an alleged bankrupt; contingent assets are not within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act. In re Rome Planing-Mill Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1900) 99 Fed. 937, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 766; In re Bloch, (2d Cir. 1901) 109 Fed. 790, 48 C. C. A. 650, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300; In re Marine Iron Works, (E. D. N. Y. 1908) 159 Fed. 753, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 390.

Prospective profits upon goods ordered, but not paid for and not delivered, which might arise from orders to be filled in the future if not canceled, and if paid for, are not property, and cannot be considered as a part of the alleged bankrupt's assets. In re Bloch, (2d Cir. 1901) 109 Fed. 790, 48 C. C. A. 650, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300.

The liability of stockholders of a corporation for stock claimed to have been issued without payment, which claim is disputed, cannot be taken into account as an asset in determining the question of the corporation's solvency in bankruptcy proceedings against it. Wilkes Barre First Nat. Bank v. Wyoming Valley Ice Co., (M. D. Pa. 1905) 136 Fed. 466, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 448.

Accounts receivable.—In determining the solvency or insolvency of a person, his accounts receivable are to be taken at their actual value and not at their nominal value. While it might be that something could be realized out of them in the future, that does not satisfy the law. It is their value at the time of the bankruptcy that is to be taken into consideration. In re Coddington, (M. D. Pa. 1902) 118 Fed. 281, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243.

Unpaid stock subscriptions are "assets" of a corporation on the question of its insolvency. In re Commonwealth Lumber Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 223 Fed. 667.

Open accounts against execution-proof parties.—"It appears that the defendant is a peddler of jewelry, and that he sells same on the instalment plan, usually to people who have no assets except their salaries. It is a reasonable inference from the testimony taken that a great majority of these parties are execution proof, though they are doubtless honest, and may eventually pay their debts in full. Therefore these open accounts should not be considered in estimating the defendant's resources. In considering assets in relation to liabilities, to determine solvency vel non, the assets ought to be such as a creditor of the alleged bankrupt could realize on if he obtained a judgment against him in the ordinary course of judicial procedure." On an application for a new trial the court said: "In my former remarks I inadvertently stated too broadly the rule in regard to what assets should be considered in determining solvency vel non, as under it as stated exempt property would be excluded from consideration, which is clearly not the intention of the law. But in determining solvency the property relied upon should undoubtedly be such as would be available to the bankrupt himself with which to meet his liabilities within a reasonable time." Louisiana Nat. Life Assur. Society v. Segen, (E. D. La. 1912) 196 Fed. 903.

Other matters considered in determining solvency.—Outstanding bonds, though issued irregularly, should not be excluded from consideration in determining the question of a corporation's insolvency in bankruptcy proceedings against it. Wilkes Barre First Nat. Bank v. Wyoming Valley Ice Co., (M. D. Pa. 1905) 136 Fed. 466, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 448.

Interest of mortgagor in mortgaged property.—The interest of an alleged bankrupt in premises that he has mortgaged should be considered in determining whether he is solvent or insolvent within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act. Lansing Boiler, etc., Works v. Ryerson, (6th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 701, 63 C. C. A. 253, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 558; Acme Food Co. v. Meier, (6th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 74, 82 C. C. A. 208, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 550.

Debt guaranteed by bankrupt.—In a suit by a bankrupt's trustee to avoid a preference, it was held that a debt of a third person who was insolvent, and which the bankrupt had guaranteed, was properly considered as a debt of the bankrupt in determining his solvency at the time the alleged preference was given; and this though the guaranty was oral and within the statute of frauds, as that statute relates merely to the evidence required to prove the undertaking, and not to its validity. Huttig Mfg. Co. v. Edwards, (8th Cir. 1908) 160 Fed. 619, 87 C. C. A. 521, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349.

Suspension of business.—Upon the question of the insolvency of a corporation at the time of the commission of an alleged act of bankruptcy, evidence of its suspension of business, and its inability to pay its debts, at a time within a few weeks or months thereafter is competent, and, in the absence of other evidence, is sufficient to warrant a finding of such insolvency. In re Elmira Steel Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1901) 109 Fed. 456, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

The verified schedules of a bankrupt are competent evidence on the question of his insolvency, not only when the petition was filed, but also when a conveyance claimed to have been preferential was made, if within a reasonable time prior thereto. In re Mandel, (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 127 Fed. 863, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 774, affirmed (2d Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 1021, 68 C. C. A. 546.

Inference of insolvency.—No inference arises from an adjudication in bankruptcy that the bankrupt was insolvent within the meaning of the act four months before he was adjudicated such. In re Chappell, (E. D. Va. 1901) 113 Fed. 545, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608.

The fact that a man is pressed and cannot meet his debts as they fall due is no evidence that he is insolvent within the meaning of the Bankrupt Act. In re Chappell, (E. D. Va. 1901) 113 Fed. 545, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608.

Proof that a man was insolvent on a certain day does not justify an inference that he was insolvent on a day some time prior thereto. Many contingencies, such as unwise investments, losing contracts, misfortune, or accident, might happen to reduce a person from a state of solvency to one of insolvency within a short space of time. Kimball v. Dresser, (1904) 98 Me. 519, 57 Atl. 787; Halbert v. Pranke, (1904) 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 620, 91 Minn. 204, 97 N. W. 976.

In In re Lange, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 97 Fed. 197, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 231, it was held, where the bankrupt sent a letter to his creditors stating his inability to pay his debts and calling a meeting for the purpose of inducing them to take in settlement a small percentage in unsecured notes, that he was insolvent.

(16) [Judge.] “judge” shall mean a judge of a court of bankruptcy, not including the referee; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

Allowance of a claim by a referee, while binding and conclusive against the estate in bankruptcy, unless reversed on appeal, is not a personal judgment binding on the bankrupt, even though it is true that referees in bankruptcy “take the same oath of office as judges of the United States courts,” are referred to “as an arm of the Bankruptcy Court, invested with certain judicial powers,” and as “a court of very great importance in the administration of bankrupt assets and the determination of conflicting rights arising thereunder,” and in their hearings within the scope of their powers are clothed with the authority of judges. Maryman v. Dreyfus, (1915) 117 Ark. 17, 174 S. W. 549.

(17) [Oath.] “oath” shall include affirmation; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

(18) [Officer.] “officer” shall include clerk, marshal, receiver, referee, and trustee, and the imposing of a duty upon or the forbidding of an act by any officer shall include his successor and any person authorized by law to perform the duties of such officer; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 544.]

(19) [Persons.] “persons” shall include corporations, except where otherwise specified, and officers, partnerships, and women, and when used with reference to the commission of acts which are herein forbidden shall include persons who are participants in the forbidden acts, and the agents, officers, and members of the board of directors or trustees, or other similar controlling bodies of corporations; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

(20) [Petition.] “petition” shall mean a paper filed in a court of bankruptcy or with a clerk or deputy clerk by a debtor praying for the benefits of this Act, or by creditors alleging the commission of an act of bankruptcy by a debtor therein named; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

(21) [Referee.] “referee” shall mean the referee who has jurisdiction of the case or to whom the case has been referred, or anyone acting in his stead; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

(22) [Conceal.] "conceal" shall include secrete, falsify, and mutilate; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

A broad meaning is given to the word "conceal" by this definition. In re Doyle, (W. D. N. Y. 1912) 199 Fed. 247.

(23) [Secured creditor.] "secured creditor" shall include a creditor who has security for his debt upon the property of the bankrupt of a nature to be assignable under this Act, or who owns such a debt for which some indorser, surety, or other persons secondarily liable for the bankrupt has such security upon the bankrupt's assets; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

The words "secured creditor" are limited to security out of or against the estate. In re Thompson, (E. D. N. Y. 1913) 208 Fed. 207.

There is some conflict of opinion as to whether one who holds security upon the exempt property of the bankrupt is a "secured creditor." In re Cale, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1911) 191 Fed. 31.

(24) [States.] "States" shall include the Territories, the Indian Territory, Alaska, and the District of Columbia; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

(25) [Transfer.] "transfer" shall include the sale and every other and different mode of disposing of or parting with property, or the possession of property, absolutely or conditionally, as a payment, pledge, mortgage, gift, or security; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

As to a "transfer" constituting a preference, see infra, sections 60a and 60b and notes thereto.

"The word 'transfer' is given by the present law a much broader meaning than it had under its predecessor." In re Truitt, (D. C. Md. 1913) 203 Fed. 550.

"All technicality and narrowness of meaning is precluded. The word is used in its most comprehensive sense, and is intended to include every means and manner by which property can pass from the ownership and possession of another, and by which the result forbidden by the statute may be accomplished." In re Muir, (M. D. Pa. 1914) 212 Fed. 495.

Confession of judgment as "transfer."

—A transfer within the meaning of this section occurs when a party transfers his property to another by voluntarily confessing judgment to that other and allowing him to issue execution, having a levy made on such property and a sale made at which the other becomes the purchaser of such property. Grant v. National Bank of Auburn, (N. D. N. Y. 1912) 197 Fed. 581.

Transfer by way of "security."—A creditor who obtains a judgment which becomes a lien upon the debtor's property thereby obtains security. And a debtor who aids his creditor to obtain a judgment which has such effect transfers property to him by way of security within the meaning of the Act. In re Truitt, (D. C. Md. 1913) 203 Fed. 550.

A payment of money on account in the ordinary course of business is a "transfer" within the meaning of the definition here given. In re Fixen, (C. C. A. 1900) 102 Fed. 295. And in Boyd v. Lemon, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1902) 114 Fed. 647, it was held that the word "property" as here used includes money. Citing Pirie v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1901) 182 U. S. 438, 21 S. Ct. 906, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1171.

Payment of money in due course of business.—"This section defines 'transfer' to include a transfer of property as a payment, but does not seem to warrant the construction in Worden v. Columbia Electric Co., (1899) 96 Fed. 803, that payment of money in due course of business is included." In re Ratliff, (1901) 107 Fed. 80.

The creation of a receivership by a court of equity does not come within the definition of a "transfer" in this section. In re Baker-Ricketson Co., (1899) 97 Fed. 489.

Deposit in bank.—The delivery to a bank of coin, bills, checks, etc., to be passed to the credit of a depositor and to be subject to his draft, is a "transfer" of his property. In re Stege, (C. C. A. 1902) 116 Fed. 342. See also Pirie v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., (1901) 182 U. S. 438, 21 S. Ct. 906, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1171, where the court said that "the word ['transfer'] is used in its most comprehensive sense."

(26) [Trustee.] "trustee" shall include all of the trustees of an estate; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

(27) [Wage-earner.] "wage-earner" shall mean an individual who works for wages, salary, or hire, at a rate of compensation not exceeding one thousand five hundred dollars per year; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

(28) [Words importing masculine gender.] words importing the masculine gender may be applied to and include corporations, partnerships, and women; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

(29) [Words importing plural number.] words importing the plural number may be applied to and mean only a single person or thing: [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

(30) [Words importing singular number.] words importing the singular number may be applied to and mean several persons or things. [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

CHAPTER II.

CREATION OF COURTS OF BANKRUPTCY AND THEIR JURISDICTION.

SEC. 2. [Federal and Territorial Courts.] That the courts of bankruptcy as hereinbefore defined, viz, the district courts of the United States in the several States, the supreme court of the District of Columbia, the district courts of the several Territories, and the United States courts in the Indian Territory and the District of Alaska, are hereby made courts of bankruptcy, and are hereby invested, within their respective territorial limits as now established, or as they may be hereafter changed, with such jurisdiction at law and in equity as will enable them to exercise original jurisdiction in bankruptcy proceedings, in vacation in chambers and during their respective terms, as they are now or may be hereafter held, to [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

See also the concluding paragraph of this section following clause (20).

Ancillary jurisdiction.—See infra, section 2 (20) and annotation thereunder.

Right to exercise original jurisdiction.

—The Bankruptcy Act confers on the District Courts, as courts of bankruptcy, such jurisdiction, at law and in equity, as enables them to exercise original jurisdiction in bankruptcy proceedings. Brumby v. Jones, (5th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 318, 72 C. C. A. 466, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 578; Horner-Gaylord Co. v. Miller, (N. D. W. Va. 1906) 147 Fed. 295, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257; Pelton v. Sheridan, (1914) 74 Ore. 176, 144 Pac. 410.

A distinct purpose of the Bankruptcy Act is to subject the administration of the estates of bankrupts to the control of tribunals clothed with authority and charged with the duty of proceeding to final settlement and distribution in a summary way, as are the courts of bankruptcy. Creditors are entitled to have this authority exercised, and justly may complain when an important part of the administration is sought to be effected through the slower and less appropriate processes of a plenary suit in equity in another court, involving collateral and extraneous matters with which they have no concern. United States Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Bray, (1912) 225 U. S. 205, 32 S. Ct. 620, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 1055.

Not courts of limited jurisdiction.—“It is true the District Court as a court of bankruptcy is one of limited jurisdiction—that is, limited in respect of the subjects over which it may exercise jurisdiction—but it is unlimited in respect of its power over proceedings in bankruptcy, specifically made subject to its jurisdiction by section 2 of the Act. When judgments are rendered by that court upon questions arising in such proceedings, they possess all the incidents and qualities of formality and conclusiveness appertaining to judgments of courts of general jurisdiction.” Edelstein v. U. S., (1906) 149 Fed. 636, 79 C. C. A. 328, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 236. To the same point see In re Marion Contract, etc., Co., (W. D. Ky. 1909) 166 Fed. 618, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81.

The jurisdiction of the court which makes an adjudication extends to all property of the bankrupt situated anywhere in the United States, and it may make such orders with respect thereto as are necessary for the preservation, collection, and administration of such property. In re Dempster, (8th Cir. 1909) 172 Fed. 353, 97 C. C. A. 51, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751; Staunton v. Wooden, (9th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 61, 102 C. C. A. 355, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736.

The jurisdiction of the bankruptcy courts in all "proceedings in bankruptcy" is intended to be exclusive of all other courts, and such proceedings include, among others, all matters of administration, such as the allowance, rejection and reconsideration of claims, the reduction of the estates to money and its distribution, the determination of the preferences and priorities to be accorded to claims presented for allowance and payment in regular course, and the supervision and control of the trustees and others who are employed to assist them. United States Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Bray, (1912) 225 U. S. 205, 32 S. Ct. 620, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 1055.

Territorial jurisdiction.—The fact that the court of bankruptcy, in which a petition has been filed, has jurisdiction, co-extensive with that of the United States, to order and control the disposition of the bankrupt's estate, does not mean that such court may issue its process to run into another district. Such court may not extend its process beyond the territorial limits of the district within which its ordinary jurisdiction may be exercised. In re Waukesha Water Co., (E. D. Wis. 1902) 116 Fed. 1009, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re Alphin, etc., Cotton Co., (E. D. Ark. 1904) 131 Fed. 824, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653; In re Steele, (N. D. Ala. 1908) 161 Fed. 886, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446; Staunton v. Wooden, (9th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 61, 102 C. C. A. 355, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736; In re Benedict, (1905) 140 Fed. 55.

Equitable jurisdiction.—A court of bankruptcy is, in a strict sense, a court of equity, and is guided and controlled by equitable doctrines and principles, except as far as otherwise expressly provided in the Bankruptcy Act. In re Gillaspie, (N. D. W. Va. 1911) 190 Fed. 88; In re Siegel-Hillman Dry Goods Co., (E. D. Mo. 1901) 111 Fed. 983, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; In re Waukesha Water Co., (E. D. Wis. 1902) 116 Fed. 1009, 8 Am. Bankr. See also infra, section 2 (15) and annotation thereunder.

"A comparison of section 1 of the Act of 1867, 18 Stat. 517, and section 2 of the Act of 1898 will demonstrate that the jurisdiction conferred upon district courts by the latter is much more ample than under the former, especially as regards equitable jurisdiction." In re Benedict, (1905) 140 Fed. 55.

The equitable jurisdiction conferred on the bankruptcy courts by section 2 is that adopted by the Constitution from the English High Court of Chancery, as administered generally by the federal courts. In re Waukesha Water Co., (E. D. Wis. 1902) 116 Fed. 1009, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715.

Although courts of law, in the absence of statutory authority, will not enforce contracts between husband and wife, the instances are many where courts of equity, following the doctrine of the civil rather than the common law, will do so. That courts of equity will aid the wife to recover her separate estate, which has come into the hands of her husband and has been retained by him against her consent, is entirely settled. Courts of bankruptcy are courts of equity, and such recovery will be enforced against the trustee administering the husband's estate in bankruptcy. In re Hoffman, (D. C. N. J. 1912) 199 Fed. 448.

Jurisdiction of independent suits at law or in equity.—It is settled that the bankruptcy courts under the present Bankruptcy Acts have no jurisdiction of independent suits at law or in equity. Maryman v. Dreyfus, (1915) 117 Ark. 17, 174 S. W. 549. But see section 23b and the provisions there referred to.

Personal judgments against bankrupt debtors.—There was no intention upon the part of the lawmakers to give the bankruptcy courts jurisdiction to render personal judgments against bankrupt debtors as in civil suits at law or in equity. Maryman v. Dreyfus, (1915) 117 Ark. 17, 174 S. W. 549.

Bankruptcy court always open.—For the purposes of bankruptcy jurisdiction a District Court is always open. It has no separate terms. Mahoney v. Ward, (E. D. N. C. 1900) 100 Fed. 278, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770; In re Ives, (6th Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 911, 51 C. C. A. 541, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692; In re Henschel, (S. D. N. Y.

1902) 114 Fed. 968, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 201.

The proceedings in a pending suit are therefore continuous from the filing of the petition to the closing of the estate, and at all times open for re-examination. In re Ives, (6th Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 911, 51 C. C. A. 541, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692.

(1) [To adjudge bankrupt.] adjudge persons bankrupt who have had their principal place of business, resided, or had their domicile within their respective territorial jurisdictions for the preceding six months, or the greater portion thereof, or who do not have their principal place of business, reside, or have their domicile within the United States, but have property within their jurisdictions, or who have been adjudged bankrupts by courts of competent jurisdiction without the United States and have property within their jurisdictions; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

Jurisdiction as dependent on residence or domicile within the district—In general.—A court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to adjudge persons bankrupt who have resided, or have had their domicile, within its territorial jurisdiction for the six months preceding the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, or the greater portion thereof. In re Murray, (N. Where a judicial district is divided and there is a District Court in both divisions, the court having jurisdiction of a bankrupt residing in the district is the one within the particular territory where he resides. In re Lemen, (N. D. Ohio 1912) 208 Fed. 80.

The phrase "the greater portion thereof," as used in section 2 (1), means the greater portion of the six months preceding the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. In re Plotke, (7th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 964, 44 C. C. A. 282, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

Residence must be bona fide.—Residence within the district, to give a court jurisdiction of the proceedings in bankruptcy, must be bona fide; and the removal of a person from one district to another for the express purpose of filing a petition in bankruptcy therein, and with the intention of leaving the district as soon as he obtains a discharge, does not make him a resident so as to confer jurisdiction on the court. In re Garneau, (7th Cir. 1904) 127 Fed. 677, 62 C. C. A. 403, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679. See also In re Stokes, (D. C. Wash. 1899) 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 35.

Bankrupt beyond territorial limits of court.—"It seems clear to us that we must assume that Congress intended the same jurisdiction over, and as complete and full an administration upon the property, of a bankrupt who was without the jurisdiction of the district when the petition was filed, but whose domicile, residence, or place of business otherwise conformed to the provisions of this second section, as in a case where the bankrupt was at the time within the territorial limits of the court." Hills v. F. D. McKinniss Co., (N. D. Ohio 1910) 188 Fed. 1012.

A court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction of a voluntary petition for adjudication in bankruptcy, filed by a debtor who has had his domicile within the district for the preceding six months, although during the greater portion of that time he has resided abroad, provided there was no abandonment of the original domicile, nor acquisition of a new one, and the debtor returned to the district, before the filing of the petition, with the intention of making his permanent home there. In re Williams, (D. C. Wash. 1900) 99 Fed. 544, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677.

Removal prior to filing petition—Proof that an alleged bankrupt, whose residence and domicile had for years been in another state, had her principal place of business in the district where the petition was filed, up to a time four months prior to the filing of such petition, after which she had no place of business, is not sufficient to give the court jurisdiction of the proceedings. In re Plotke, (7th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 964, 44 C. C. A. 282, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

Where a traveler resided in a particular district for only two months prior to the filing of a petition to have him declared a bankrupt, it was held that the court of that district had no jurisdiction thereof. In re Williams, (E. D. Ark. 1903) 120 Fed. 34, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736.

A corporation organized under the laws of a state cannot be a "resident" of another state so as to confer jurisdiction on a court of bankruptcy in the latter state of proceedings against it. In re Mathews Consol. Slate Co., (D. C. Mass. 1905) 144 Fed. 724, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350.

Domicile as distinguished from residence.—Domicile is of more extensive signification than residence (In re Grimes, (1899) 94 Fed. 800), and includes, beyond mere physical presence at a particular locality an intention to constitute it a permanent abiding place. In re Davis, (D. C. N. J. 1914) 217 Fed. 113, citing Brisenden v. Chamberlain, (C. C. S. C. 1892) 53 Fed. 307, wherein a clear statement of the distinction may be found.

It is settled that a man may reside in one state and be domiciled in another. The purpose underlying the Bankruptcy Act, that may operate uniformly, requires that such distinction be employed, and it is not impossible that the courts of two districts may have jurisdiction to entertain a petition against the same debtor; that one acting which is first invoked. In re Lemen, (N. D. Ohio 1912) 208 Fed. 80.

Presumption as to jurisdiction.—"Where jurisdiction of the federal courts is made dependent upon citizenship or other specific fact, the presumption in every stage of the cause is that it is without their jurisdiction, unless the contrary appears from the record. The essential fact must appear affirmatively and distinctly, and it is not sufficient that jurisdiction may be inferred argumentatively." In re Plotke, (C. C. A. 1900) 104 Fed. 964, reversing order of District Court.

A domicile once acquired is presumed to continue until it is shown to have been changed; and, where a change of domicile is alleged, the burden of proving it rests upon the person making the allegation. In re Grimes, (1899) 94 Fed. 800; In re Waxelbaum, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 97 Fed. 562, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267; In re Filer, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 108 Fed. 209, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 332; In re Oldstein, (D. C.

Ore. 1910) 182 Fed. 409; In re Davis, (D. C. N. J. 1914) 217 Fed. 113.

Residence as dependent on place of business—In general.—A court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction, for the purposes of adjudication, over persons who have had their principal place of business within the territorial jurisdiction of the court for the six months preceding the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, or the greater portion thereof. Guinn v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., (S. D. Ia. 1882) 14 Fed. 323; In re Marine Mach., etc., Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 91 Fed. 630, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; In re Brice, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 93 Fed. 942, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197; In re Blair, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 99 Fed. 76, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588; In re Williams, (D. C. Wash. 1900) 99 Fed. 544, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677; Dressel v. North State Lumber Co., (E. D. N. Rep. 413; In re Duplex Radiator Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 142 Fed. 906, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324; Burdick v. Dillon, (1st Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 737, 75 C. C. A. 603, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 407; In re Munger Vehicle Tire Co., (2d Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 901, 87 C. C. A. 81, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785; In re Alaska American Fish Co., (W. D. Wash. 1908) 162 Fed. 498, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712; In re Pennsylvania Consol. Coal Co., (E. D. Pa. 1908) 163 Fed. 579, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872; In re Perry Aldrich Co., (D. C. Mass. 1908) 165 Fed. 249, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244.

"With jurisdiction dependent upon the single fact of having the principal place of business within the district, the statute then imposes the further prerequisite that such business shall have been there carried on for more than half of the preceding six months. In other words, the limitation is made with reference alone to the duration of the business in the district, and regardless of the fact that its location may be changed short of that period, and thus be carried on in different districts without exceeding the three months in either, or that it may be discontinued entirely without reaching the time limited in any one; and the provisions in reference to domicile and residence are equally restricted, except for the distinction as to residence, that it may be retained in one district after domicile is changed to another." In re Plotke, (C. C. A. 1900) 104 Fed. 964, reversing order of District Court.

Residence in one district, business place in another.—Where a petitioner in voluntary bankruptcy resides in one district, and is there employed as clerk in a store, but is engaged in trade on his own account, as a general merchant in another district, the court of bankruptcy in the latter district has jurisdiction of the petition, the bankrupt's principal place of business being within its territorial limits. In re Brice, (S. D. Ia. 1899) 93 Fed. 942, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197.

Residence continued for winding up business sufficient.—Where a partnership has had its only place of business within a given judicial district for a period of more than three months before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against it in such district, the court therein will have jurisdiction of the petition, although during a part of that time the only business carried on was in the way of winding up the affairs of the firm by two of the partners, the other partners having retired. In re Blair, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 99 Fed. 76, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588.

"Place of business," as used in this section has no application to a clerk who has no "place of business" anywhere. In re Lipphart, (S. D. N. Y. 1912) 201 Fed. 103, wherein the court said: "It seems to me that it was intended, among other things, by the Bankruptcy Law that these proceedings should, as far as practicable, be carried on in the jurisdiction most convenient to all concerned. The debts of a clerk on a small salary would most likely be owing to the tradesmen doing business in the place where he lived. I think that a clerk, or, for that matter, the general run of employees, cannot be said to be in business or to have a place of business. It seems to me that 'place of business' means a place where a man is conducting a business of his own in which he is a principal. I am inclined to think that the statute contemplated 'place of business' as applying only to those who have a business of their own, but in this case it is only necessary to decide that a clerk, such as this bankrupt, did not have a place of business anywhere, and therefore he should have filed his petition at the place where he resided or had his domicile."

Corporation's principal place of business—In general.—Section 2 (1) and section 1 (19), taken together, "give this court jurisdiction of an involuntary petition against a corporation, which, for the necessary time, has had its principal place of business, as distinct from its residence or domicile, within this district." In re Magid-Hope Silk Mfg. Co., (1901) 110 Fed. 352; In re Marine Mach., etc., Co., (1899) 91 Fed. 630.

Neither charter nor place of incorporation is controlling.—A corporation's principal place of business is the actual principal place of business, and it is immaterial that a different place is named in the articles of incorporation. In re Beiermeister Bros. Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1913) 208 Fed. 945; In re Wenatchee-Stratford

Orchard Co., (1913) 205 Fed. 964; Dressel v. North State Lumber Co., (E. D. N. C. 1901) 107 Fed. 255, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 744; In re Pennsylvania Consol. Coal Co., (E. D. Pa. 1908) 163 Fed. 579, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872; In re Guanacevi Tunnel Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1912) 201 Fed. 316.

The locus of the principal place of business of a corporation is always a question of fact; but the doubt should be resolved in favor of that jurisdiction in which the corporation obtained its corporate existence and where, as is usually the case, the state law requires the maintenance of an office. In re Tennessee Const. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1913) 207 Fed. 203.

A nominal office in a state does not make that state a corporation's principal place of business although that is where it was incorporated, provided its activities are in another state and the substantial property is there. In re E. & G. Theatre Co., (D. C. Mass. 1915) 223 Fed. 657.

A question of fact.—The locus of the principal place of business of a corporation is always a question of fact and the burden of proving it rests on the petitioning creditors. Fernwood, etc., R. Co. v. Bessemer Coal, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1914) 213 Fed. 33.

The mere fact that a certificate has been filed in some public office designating a place as the principal place of business of a foreign corporation does not make it a place of business unless business is done there. There must not only be a place where business can be done, but business must be done there, in order that a corporation shall have had a principal place of business within the meaning of section 2 of the Bankrupt Act. In re Thomas McNally Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1913) 208 Fed. 291.

In re Tygarts River Coal Co., (N. D. W. Va. 1913) 203 Fed. 178, the court, construing the words "principal place of business," as applied to a coal mining corporation, said: "I am not ignorant of the fact that some of the federal courts have construed this phrase 'principal place of business' to be the place where its chief officers reside and maintain an office; but in my judgment the determination of the question of where the principal place of business is depends upon where the actual business of the concern is transacted. It is a question of fact to be determined in each particular case largely on the character of the corporation, its purposes, and the kind of business it is engaged in. As regards a coal mining corporation like this, it is very evident that the basic necessity for its doing business at all is to have somewhere a body of coal, owned or leased, from which it may mine and ship coal. It is not sufficient for the officers of such a corporation to gather together in a city office and call it 'the principal place of business' of the concern because it better suits their convenience to live and meet in such city. Unless the coal exists in place somewhere else to be mined and shipped to consumers, such city organization cannot exist. It is purely incident to and dependent upon the practical mining operations, 'the doing of business' elsewhere. The fact that such city organization may control the company's sale of the coal cannot avoid the inevitable conclusion. In such case the city office becomes only the agent of the corporation for a limited purpose, that of selling what cannot be sold until it has first been elsewhere mined, prepared for, and shipped to market for sale."

In Home Powder Co. v. Geis, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1913) 204 Fed. 568 it was held, on the facts there stated, that the principal place of business of a mining corporation incorporated in Arizona was in Missouri.

Where a corporation operating factories, mills, or mines in various states has a principal office, from which supreme direction and control are exercised over all its business and property and its selling and collecting are done, where its directors meet, its books of account are kept, and its correspondence conducted, such office will be held to be its principal place of business. Burdick v. Dillon, (1st Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 737, 75 C. C. A. 603, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 407.

Where a New Jersey corporation, having been proclaimed against in that state for nonpayment of taxes, maintained its principal office in New York city, it was held that bankruptcy proceedings were properly instituted against it in New York. In re Munger Vehicle Tire Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 901, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785.

Where the defendant corporation shut down its works and ceased all business at Warren, R. I., in June, 1908, but continued its business in New York, where all its executive and banking business had been done, until the petition was filed in November following, it was held that New York was its principal place of business during the preceding six months, and that the petition was properly filed in that district. In re Marine Mach., etc., Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 91 Fed. 630, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421.

Foreign corporation's noncompliance with local law immaterial.—In determining whether a corporation has had its principal place of business in another state, so as to give the court in that district jurisdiction to adjudicate it a bankrupt, it is immaterial whether or not it complied with the laws of that state, so as to entitle it to do business therein as a foreign corporation. In re Duplex Radiator Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 142 Fed. 906, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324; In re Perry Aldrich Co., (D. C. Mass. 1908) 165 Fed. 249, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244.

Commingled business relations in different districts.—Where a manufacturing corporation was organized under the laws of Washington, having its home office and principal place of business at Tacoma, and subsequently a second corporation was organized in California, apparently for the purpose of succeeding and taking over the business of the first, its home office being in Oakland, but its business being transacted in Tacoma by a manager who was also the manager of the first corporation, the business of which was continued by such joint manager without change and in such manner that the transactions and liabilities of the two corporations could not be separated, it was held that the Washington District Court had jurisdiction to entertain a petition in bankruptcy against both corporations as joint parties; it not appearing that any prior proceedings had been elsewhere instituted. In re Alaska American Fish Co., (W. D. Wash. 1908) 162 Fed. 498, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

Concurrent jurisdiction.—Where a bankrupt corporation has its domicile in one judicial district, and its principal place of business in another, the courts of bankruptcy of both districts have concurrent jurisdiction of involuntary bankruptcy proceedings against it. In re United Button Co., (D. C. Del. 1904) 137 Fed. 668, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454.

Objection to jurisdiction by creditor.—An objection that the principal place of business of an insolvent corporation was not within the jurisdiction of the court is jurisdictional and may be made by a creditor. In re Guancevi Tunnel Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1912) 201 Fed. 316.

(2) [Allow and disallow claims.] allow claims, disallow claims, reconsider allowed or disallowed claims, and allow or disallow them against bankrupt estates; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

As to

Allowance, proof, and reconsideration of claims, see the several subdivisions of section 57.

What are provable claims, see the several subdivisions of section 63.

As to

Appeals from allowance or rejection of claims, see sections 25a (3) and 25b.

Jurisdiction of court.—A Bankruptcy Court in which an estate is being administered has full power to inquire into the validity of any alleged debt or obligation of the bankrupt upon which a demand or claim against the estate is based. This is essential to the performance of the duties imposed upon it. When an alleged debt or obligation is ascertained to be invalid—without lawful existence—the claim based thereon is necessarily disallowed. A disallowed claim and a non-provable debt are not identical things. Lesser v. Gray, (1915) 236 U. S. 70, 35 S. Ct. 227, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 471.

Exempt property constitutes no part of the estate in bankruptcy subject to administration by the trustee or by the court of bankruptcy. The District Court cannot entertain a suit by creditors to reach such property although they hold notes expressly waiving exemptions granted by state law. Woodruff v. Cheeves, (C. C. A. 1901) 105 Fed. 601; reversing In re Woodruff, (1899) 96 Fed. 317. And see numerous cases cited in note to section 2 (11).

The referee is authorized to perform the acts specified in this clause, subject to revision by the Bankruptcy Court. In re Hamilton Automobile Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1913) 209 Fed. 596.

Modification of orders and records.—So long as the bankrupt's estate is pending in court and unsettled, the court has power over its orders and records as to the disposition of claims and to modify the same to conform to the rights of the parties. In re Hamilton Automobile Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1913) 209 Fed. 596.

(3) [Appoint receivers, etc.] appoint receivers or the marshals, upon application of parties in interest, in case the courts shall find it absolutely necessary, for the preservation of estates, to take charge of the property of bankrupts after the filing of the petition and until it is dismissed or the trustee is qualified; [(1898) 30 Stat. L. 545.]

As to seizure and possession of property, see section 69.

Appointment of receivers or marshals, in general.—For cases recognizing the authority of the Bankruptcy Court, under this clause, to appoint receivers or marshals see in general Lazarus v. Prentice, (1914) 234 U. S. 263, 34 S. Ct. 851, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1305; Bryan v. Bernheimer, (1901) 181 U. S. 188, 21 S. Ct. 557, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 814, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; In re John A. Etheridge Furniture Co., (D. C. Ky. 1899) 92 Fed. 329, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112; In re Fixen, (S. D. Cal. 1899) 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822; McNulty v. Feingold, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 129 Fed. 1001, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338; In re Moody, (N. D. Ia. 1904) 131 Fed. 525, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 718; Latimer v. McNeal, (3d Cir. 1906) 142 Fed. 451, 73 C. C. A. 567, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 43; In re T. E. Hill Co., (7th Cir. 1907) 159 Fed. 73, 86 C. C. A. 263, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73; In re Wentworth Lunch Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 191 Fed. 821; Le Master v. Spencer, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1913) 203 Fed. 210; In re White, (M. D. Pa. 1913) 205 Fed. 393.

While the Bankruptcy Law of 1867 contained no express provision for the appointment of receivers, still the power was exercised by the courts under that law in appropriate cases. Keenan v. Shannon, (1874) 10 Phila. (Pa.) 219, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,640; Lansing v. Manton, (1876) 14 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 27, (1876) 14 Fed. Cas. No. 8,077. And it has been said that under the Bankruptcy Act now in force the court may, in suitable cases, appoint receivers, by virtue of its general equity powers. In re Fixen, (1899) 96 Fed. 753.

Ancillary receiver may be appointed in another district, see note to section 2 (20).

Paramount jurisdiction of Bankruptcy Court.—The fact that proceedings have been begun against the bankrupt in a state court, founded upon allegations of his insolvency and fraud and seeking appointment of a receiver, or the fact that the bankrupt has made a general assignment under the state law and that his property is being administered in the state court, does not preclude the Bankruptcy Court from taking jurisdiction of a motion to appoint a receiver, In re Bruss-Ritter Co., (1898) 90 Fed. 651; In re John A. Etheridge Furniture Co., (1899) 92 Fed. 329; or a marshal to take charge of the bankrupt's property, Davis v. Bohle, (C. C. A. 1899) 92 Fed. 325, affirming In re Sievers, (1899) 91 Fed. 366.

The foregoing conclusions result from the suspension of state insolvency laws by the enactment of a national bankruptcy law. See supra, notes immediately preceding section 1 of this Act.

But where mortgaged property of the bankrupt is in the actual possession of a state court, through its receiver, in a foreclosure suit of which the state court has jurisdiction, the Bankruptcy Court will not order the marshal to seize it. Carling v. Seymour Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 1902) 113 Fed. 483, reversing such order in In re Macon Sash, etc., Co., (1901) 112 Fed. 323.

Nor has the court of bankruptcy power to make an order appointing a receiver of property shown by an ancillary bill to be held and claimed adversely; such an order, if made, will be reversed and the receiver directed to surrender to such adverse claimant the property taken from his possession. Beach v. Macon Grocery Co., (C. C. A. 1902) 116 Fed. 143.

Receivership proceedings as ancillary proceedings.—From a consideration of this provision in reference to the appointment of receivers, together with the other provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, it is apparent that the petition for adjudication and the application for the appointment of a receiver are separate and distinct, and the receivership proceedings are but ancillary to the proceedings in bankruptcy. T. E. Hill Co. v. United States Fidelity, etc., Co., (1914) 265 Ill. 534, 107 N. E. 194.

The title to the property of the alleged bankrupt remains in him until adjudication, subject to the control of the court, to be exercised either by a receiver or the marshal, if otherwise the interests of the creditors are not sufficiently protected. Marcello v. Concordia Fire Ins. Co., (1912) 234 Pa. St. 31, 82 Atl. 1090, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 366.

Who are "parties in interest."—This clause does not limit the right to apply for the appointment of a receiver to any one or more of the petitioning creditors, but provides that any party in interest may make application for such appointment. This would necessarily include any creditor who has a provable debt against the bankrupt that would be affected by his discharge in bankruptcy, whether he be one of the petitioning creditors or not. T. E. Hill Co. v. United States Fidelity, etc., Co., (1914) 265 Ill. 534, 107 N. E. 194.

Eligibility of proposed receiver.—An assignee under a general assignment for creditors is not ineligible for appointment as a receiver by the Bankruptcy Court. In re John A. Etheridge Furniture Co., (1899) 92 Fed. 329, where under the circumstances of the case such assignee was appointed a receiver.

Bond required.—A court of bankruptcy is authorized to appoint a receiver to take possession of the property of one against whom a petition in involuntary bankruptcy has been filed, and is pending, only upon the giving of a bond by the petitioners therefor, as required by section 3e. Beach v. Macon Grocery Co., (5th Cir. 1902) 116 Fed. 143, 53 C. C. A. 463, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751; In re McKane, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 152 Fed. 733, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504. And see section 3e, and the annotation thereunder, infra.

Appointment not subject to collateral attack.—Where claimants instituted proceedings, in the nature of a replevin suit, against a bankrupt's receiver to recover personal property, their only claim to relief depending on their ownership or right of possession of the property which the receiver had seized, it was held that they could not in such proceeding collaterally attack the official status of the receiver or the regularity of the proceedings leading to his appointment. Ross v. Stroh, (3d Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 628, 91 C. C. A. 616, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644. See also In re Isaacson, (2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 406, 98 C. C. A. 614, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 98.

Receiver entitled to possession of property.—Bankruptcy proceedings properly instituted vest the court of bankruptcy with exclusive jurisdiction to administer the estate of the bankrupt, and oust the jurisdiction of a state court which has appointed a receiver in insolvency proceedings; and the receiver appointed by the court of bankruptcy is entitled to possession of the property. In re Lengert Wagon Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 110 Fed. 927, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

But under the rule of comity between federal and state courts, a receiver appointed by a court of bankruptcy will be required to apply to a state court for an order requiring its receiver to turn over the property of the bankrupt. In re Lengert Wagon Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 110 Fed. 927, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635. And see generally the annotation under section 23b, infra.

Effect of collusion in appointment of receiver.—Where receivers, the appointment of whom is prayed for in a petition in bankruptcy against a corporation, were in fact selected by the alleged bankrupt and named at its instance, they will not be appointed; or, if such facts are shown after their appointment, they will be removed; but the court is not required, because of such unsuccessful collusion, to dismiss the petition in favor of one filed by other creditors; and, where it is otherwise sufficient, the adjudication may be made thereon. Birmingham Coal, etc., Co. v. Southern Steel Co., (N. D. Ala. 1908) 160 Fed. 212, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151.

Attorney for receiver.—Where a debtor is declared a bankrupt at the instance of a creditor, and a receiver is appointed, the attorney for such petitioning creditor should not be employed as attorney for the receiver. In re Strobel, (2d Cir. 1908) 160 Fed. 916, 88 C. C. A. 98, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

The general rule is that a receiver may not employ the solicitor of either of the parties to the suit in which he is appointed. But it is only when the receiver is acting adversely to one of the parties that there is any impropriety in his employing the counsel of the other. In re Smith, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1913) 203 Fed. 369, wherein the court said: "In Keyes v. McKerrow, 180 Mass. 261, 62 N. E. 259, it was held that, in the absence of a rule of court forbidding such employment, a trustee in bankruptcy might lawfully employ the bankrupt's attorney in the collection of debts, on the ground that there were no conflicting interests between the bankrupt and the trustee in that matter. In the instant case the referee states that it has been the uniform practice in the district, since the present Bankruptcy Act was passed, 'to permit the attorneys for the petitioning creditors or the attorney for other creditors to act as attorney for the receiver or trustee, except in those cases where such attorneys represent creditors whose interests are adverse or contrary to the interest of the general creditors'; and the district judge states that 'the practice has been to allow attorneys for creditors to advise the trustee.' The effect of these statements of the referee and judge as to the practice is not overthrown by the decision of the former district judge in Re Columbia Iron Works, (D. C.) 142 Fed. 234, in which, on review of a selection of counsel previous to the performance of services, a conclusion was reached opposed to the propriety of the appointment here in question. The district judge, in deciding the instant case, said: 'In the absence of a rule or decision distinctly forbidding it, it would be unjust to put such rule into force and give it retroactive effect.' We cannot disturb this conclusion."

Appointment must be necessary for preservation of estate.—Receivers in bankruptcy are necessary, and should be appointed, only when the preservation of the estate demands their intervention. Sprague v. L. D. Margolis Co., (D. C. Mass. 1913) 211 Fed. 171, wherein the court held that a receiver would not be appointed simply for the purpose of getting evidence; Guaranty Title, etc., Co. v. Pearlman, (W. D. Pa. 1906) 144 Fed. 550, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461; Faulk v. Steiner, (5th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 861, 91 C. C. A. 547, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; Dunlap Hardware Co. v. Huddleston, (5th Cir. 1909) 167 Fed. 433, 93 C. C. A. 69, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 731; In re Oakland Lumber Co., (2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 634, 98 C. C. A. 388, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181; In re Desrochers, (N. D. N. Y. 1911) 183 Fed. 991; In re Standard Cordage Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 184 Fed. 156; In re Desrochers, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 703.

The words "absolutely necessary," as used in section 2 (3), require clear, positive, and certain proof of necessity. In re Oakland Lumber Co., (2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 634, 98 C. C. A. 388, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181.

Danger of waste, despoilment, or misappropriation necessary.—The property of a bankrupt should not be taken out of his control before adjudication unless it clearly appears either that the property is perishable, or that it is apt to become wasted, despoiled, or misappropriated. In re Standard Cordage Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 184 Fed. 156.

Thus it has been held that where a bankrupt's property was in the hands of an assignee for the benefit of creditors, and it was not claimed that it was being dissipated or improvidently cared for, or that the assignee was not careful, prudent, or responsible, an ex parte order appointing a receiver was erroneous. In re Oakland Lumber Co., (2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 634, 98 C. C. A. 388, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181.

Consent of an alleged bankrupt to the appointment of a receiver does not authorize such appointment where it is not absolutely necessary for the preservation of the estate. Faulk v. Steiner, (5th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 861, 91 C. C. A. 547, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623.

Notice.—The statute does not provide for the giving of notice of the appointment, or application for the appointment, of a receiver to take charge of the bankrupt's property, when necessary for its preservation; therefore it has been held that such appointment is valid whether notice be given or not. But, in accordance with the general tenor of the Bankruptcy Law, it has also been held that notice of the appointment, or of the application for the appointment, should be given in all cases if possible. Ross-Meehan Foundry Co. v. Southern Car, etc., Co., (W. D. Tenn. 1903) 124 Fed. 403, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624; In re Francis, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 136 Fed. 912, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 676; Latimer v. McNeal, (3d Cir. 1906) 142 Fed. 451, 73 C. C. A. 567, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 43; Faulk v. Steiner, (5th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 861, 91 C. C. A. 547, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; In re Abrahamsen, (D. C. N. Y. 1898) 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 44.
